Russ Wheat Sale Leaves Shipping to Merchants

Shipments To Begin This Month

WASHINGTON (AP)—A U.S.-Soviet-deadlock over terms for the sale of surplus American wheat was broken Friday night when the government put it up to American grain merchants to make their own deals.

The Americans lost no time in bidding for the $500 million worth of Soviet bloc business and the first sale was signaled when the Commerce Department granted a license for the shipment of 100,000 tons of wheat to Communist Hungary.

In Minneapolis, Cargill Inc. revealed that it had received this initial license. A spokesman said the deal involved about 3.7 million bushels of soft winter wheat valued at $6.5 million, minus transportation charges.

The company said the transaction was within the confines of the government agreement, namely that at least 50 per cent of the shipments would move in American vessels, according to their availability. First shipments are expected to go forward late this month.

The announcement was made shortly after it was revealed that the United States and Russia had reached agreement on a framework for negotiations

Couple Dies In Crash Of Trucks

A Peyton couple was killed and a third man critically injured Friday in a spectacular collision between a pickup truck and a semi-trailer rig on U. S. 24, six miles east of Colorado Springs.

A Colorado Springs man was killed in a separate accident early Friday when his car shot 43 feet into the air and overturned six miles north of Powder Horn on Colorado 149 in Gunnison County.

Killed instantly in Friday's spectacular crash were Merrill Stanley Weeks, 67, and his wife, Minnie. The Weeks lived about one mile northwest of Peyton.

In critical condition at Memorial Hospital here was Howard Scott Ferguson, 49, 1927 N. Wahsatch Ave., driver of the tractor trailer rig.

The death of the Weeks couple and that of John Brian O'Neill, 1001 Venus Dr., who died on the Western Slope, brought Colorado's record-setting 1963 fatality toll to 424 — 25 higher than the corresponding 1962 toll.

Ferguson is being treated at Memorial Hospital for internal injuries and multiple lacerations and abrasions of the face and body.

Assistant County Coroner Dr. Clarence West said that the Weeks died instantly. He said death resulted from head and internal injuries.

JFK Says Aid Keeps Wars Down

By MERRIMAN SMITH

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Kennedy warned Friday night that without American foreign aid, brush wars might easily escalate into world wars.

The Chief Executive made his plea for the embattled foreign aid bill at the annual banquet of the Protestant Council of the City of New York, which made him the first Roman Catholic layman to receive its distinguished service award. An audience of 3,500 persons heard Kennedy at the Hilton Hotel.

The President's prepared speech was aimed at congressional approval of his foreign aid program. He originally asked $4.5 billion for the current year but the House slashed this request to $3.5 billion. The Senate, still debating the program, has already cut its ver-

Check Bouncers Pay Off Lawyers With Bad Checks

NEW YORK (AP) — Even while on trial for fraud, two 230-pound brothers bounced worthless checks off their defense lawyers and the court reporter, a federal prosecutor said in court Friday.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Andrew J. Maloney, at a bond withdrawal hearing, detailed activities of Charles and Edward Leser, brothers he described as the biggest and most incredible confidence men in the country.

Convicted in Los Angeles of a $290,000 fraud, indicted in New York in another, the brothers bilked businessmen across the country in a variety of schemes, Maloney said.

And only since August, he continued, $68,000 of their checks have bounced at the bank.

"These men reached a new height of infamy," Maloney declared, "when they bounced rubber checks off their own defense attorneys in California, passed a bogus $500 check off on the California court reporter for a copy of the trial transcript, and cashed another bad check for $1,600 in a bank right across the street from the Los Angeles courthouse."

During their six-week trial in California, Charles, 52, and Edward, 49, flew to their Long Island, N.Y., homes, located side by side in Oyster Bay, each

Health Keeps Shoup From Top Goldwater Post

Merrill E. Shoup, chairman of the board of the Holly Sugar Company, announced Friday that his poor health prevented him from accepting the chairmanship of the Colorado campaign to elect Sen. Barry Goldwater president of the United States.

Shoup is the son of a one-time governor, Oliver Shoup, and a long-time leader in Republican circles in Colorado.

He said he had to turn down the offer with "great reluctance."

"I am grateful and flattered that the committee backing Sen. Goldwater in Colorado felt that I could chair the effort," Shoup said in a brief announcement, "but I am not physically able to engage in what I am sure will be an extremely vigorous campaign. In fairness of all concerned, I have concluded that I must decline the invitation which has been extended to me."

Earlier this month, Shoup was approached by a group of Republicans who wanted him to head the statewide campaign. At that time Shoup had asked for a few days to reach a decision.

While he is now in reasonably good health, Shoup said, he had been forced to curtail his activities following a serious illness less than a year ago.

Shoup said he had notified representatives of the group who had approached him of his decision.

NLRB Orders News Agency To Rehire Man

The National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Pikes Peak News Agency Inc. to reinstate an employe who was fired last April 3.

The NLRB also ordered the company to begin collective bargaining with Local 146 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America.

In ordering the company to reinstate Francis Berry, the company was also ordered to pay the man backpay from the time he was fired in April.

The company had contended that it fired Berry as an economical measure and because of a personality clash with other employes.

However, Berry and the union contended the warehouseman was fired because of his activities in attempting to organize employes into the Teamsters union.

Trial examiner Martin S. Bennett found the evidence in favor of Berry and ordered the James R. Fitzgerald also known as James A. Fitzgerald was sentenced Friday to six to 10 years in the state penitentiary for forgery.

Fitzgerald, of 4000 N. Nevada Ave. forged a check for $81.24 and gave it to the Royal Liquor Shop, June 20. Testimony was given by Police Detective Ben Lacey.

Wendol Lee Hellison also known as Adolph Kruger, 30, of Los Angeles, Calif. was given two to five years in the state penitentiary for burglary.

Hellison broke into the E-Z Clothing and Jewelers Inc. 112 S. Nevada Ave. Aug. 9.

A number of other defendants had their cases continued. Among them was Charlie B. Simmons, 24, of 729 E. Colorado Ave. who will be arraigned Nov. 15 for burglary of a room and larceny.

He is accused of breaking into a room belonging to Jim Rainey, 729 E. Colorado Ave. and stealing a .32 revolver worth $55 Oct. 19.

Max Martinez will be arraigned Nov. 22 for burglary.

Martinez, 33, of 916 E. Cucharras St. is alleged to have broken into the GI Forum Oct. 31.

Curtis Bonell Stevens had attorney John Ramsay appointed to represent him and arraignment was set for Nov. 15.

Stevens, 23, of Pueblo is accused of larceny of a motor vehicle. According to information he stole a car worth $500 from Loren L. Swaim, Nov. 1.

The presiding judge was Hunter D. Hardeman and Deputy District Attorney Richard Webster represented the State.

3 Coeds Share Presidency at Colorado College

A coed troika, made of three Gamma Phi Beta sorority sisters, took command at Colorado College Friday as "president for a day." The three were seniors.

A "student administration" took over for one day after the presidency and the offices of dean of men and dean of women were auctioned off to fraternities and sororities last week by the Tiger Club to raise funds for contributions to local charitable efforts.

Filling the presidency were Jane Hilton of Pinedale, Wyo., Judith Reagan of San Antonio, Tex., and Jean Torcom of Park Ridge, Ill.

Dean of men was Donald T. Bradbury, a senior majoring in sociology and a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He is from Glenco, Ill.

Cowpokes Get Blame For Change

LONDON (AP) — American tailors and designers were advised Friday how to capture clothes markets and create a more elegant world: Get U.S. television to produce fewer horse operas and popularize smart dress instead of blue jeans.

The advice came from the British magazine Tailor and Cutter, which bills itself as "the authority on style and clothes."

The magazine's comments were in a front - page article which also paid tribute to Aloiphe Menjou, the elegant Hollywood actor who died last week. It lamented the decline of Hollywood as a stylesetter and the takeover of rumpled television beat singers and private eyes, where now only Cary Grant still carries the torch for Hollywood.

Now that Telstar and other communications satellites have made television worldwide and many American - packaged shows are screened in homes around the world, there should be a turning of the tide, Tailor and Cutter urged.

Printers May Strike in Denver

DENVER (AP) — A notice of intent to strike was served Friday upon Denver's two daily newspapers and the Denver Catholic Register by Denver Typographical Union No. 49.

The union's contract with The Denver Post, The Rocky Mountain News and the Catholic publication expired Sept. 30. In a notice issued through the State Industrial Commission, the union stated its intent to strike Dec. 6 unless a new contract has been adopted by then.

Welfare Board Sets Flat Rate For Nurse Homes

DENVER (AP) — The State Welfare Board Friday told representatives of nursing homes they will be given state funds on a flat schedule until the homes devise an accounting system that will show their actual costs of operation.

Nursing home officials replied that they cannot live within the scheduled amount.

Mrs. Helen Doughit, president of the Colorado Nursing Home Association, said the pressure to form an accounting plan shows "we're not being trusted."

Some home officials have said it would raise their costs still more to set up strict accounting procedures.

Serving notice it intends to keep its payments to nursing homes within the $3 million budget, the board announced a schedule of $185 a month for Class 1 homes, $173 for Class 2 and $120 for basic homes, which offer minimum services.

The amounts include vendor payments, made by the state directly to the nursing homes, and payments made by pensioners to the homes.

Last month, the board said nursing homes would have to

NORAD Addition Nears Completion

Work on the $200,000 two-story addition to the NORAD Combat Operations Center building at Ent AFB should be completed by Dec. 1, officials said here.

The two-story building will be occupied by the Space Detection and Tracking center (SPADATS) which has already taken possession of the first floor of the concrete and steel building.

It has been constructed adjacent to the COC. The COC will be abandoned in 1965 when the NORAD hardsite under Cheyenne Mountain will become operational.

Document Would Change Catholic Views on Jews

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Ecumenical Council received Friday an official document aimed at ending anti-Jewish views among Roman Catholics and charging all mankind with responsibility for Christ's death.

Representing two years of work begun by Pope John XXIII, the document was submitted to the 2,300 council fathers by the secretariat for promoting Christian unity, headed by German-born Augustin Cardinal Bea.

At the same time a heated debate flared on the floor of St. Peter's Basilica as Joseph Cardinal Frings of Cologne, a leader among Catholic progressives, called for basic reform of the Holy Office.

MARIEHAMN, Finland (UPI) — A Finnair DC3 airliner with 24 Finns aboard crashed into a swamp forest area near here Friday night, flipped over on its back and caught fire. Twenty-one persons were killed and three survived.

Authorities said the dead included two children and the pilot and co-pilot. Two male passengers and stewardess Marianne Kullberg survived with injuries and burns. They were reported doing well in a hospital.

Favored Nation Plan Continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Friday night to restore President Kennedy's power to continue most-favored-nation treatment in trade relations with Communist Poland and Yugoslavia.

The 55-14 vote defeated an attempt by Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, to strike from the $3.7-billion foreign aid authorization bill a provision restoring this authority to the chief executive.

It was viewed as the biggest victory for the administration so far in the 10 days of debate and came after a series of setbacks.

Earlier, the Senate's bipartisan leadership sprang back from the setbacks by defeating, 44-30, an effort to boost the interest on all loans under the aid program to at least 4 per cent — far above the current low rates.

Tax Cut Bill Seems Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee dealt an apparent death blow Friday to all hopes for 1963 passage of a taxcut bill.

Holding to the deliberate schedule advocated by Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., the committee set Dec. 13 as the windup date for its hearings on a House-passed measure to slice $11 billion from the nation's federal tax bill for 1964.

A Dec. 13 end to hearings, which already have run four weeks, means only a week would remain before the Christmas-New Year's recess which starts Dec. 20 and runs to Jan. 2.

Based on all past records of tax-handling in the Senate, a week would be far from enough time to complete Senate passage, let alone to compromise any differences with the House.

Byrd opposes any tax cut without a balancing reduction in federal spending. A principal objective of the conservative Southerner is to prevent Senate action until after President Kennedy submits in January his budget for fiscal 1965.

Working toward that end, Byrd has called 70 witnesses, another 100 are on the waiting list, and he has said all who apply will be heard by the committee.

After the committee action, Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., told newsmen he would move in the committee later this month to speed the hearings to make possible action this year. But when Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., made a similar move last month, the committee backed Byrd's go-slow program with a 12-4 vote and most observers figure a motion by Hartke would meet a similar fate.

Byrd has been unmoved by many witnesses, from the business world and from government, who have predicted or hinted strongly that 1964 is likely to bring another recession if tax relief is not voted this year.

Some Loot Recovered In $1 Million Robbery

NEW YORK (AP) — Four armed bandits hijacked a diamond district pickup truck carrying an estimated $1 million in gems Friday, but a few hours later police reported that part of the loot had been recovered.

It was the biggest jewel robbery in New York's history.

Two of the bandits were disguised in policemen's uniforms and wore Halloween masks.

3 Coeds Share Presidency at Colorado College

A coed troika, made of three Gamma Phi Beta sorority sisters, took command at Colorado College Friday as "president for a day." The three were seniors.

A "student administration" took over for one day after the presidency and the offices of dean of men and dean of women were auctioned off to fraternities and sororities last week by the Tiger Club to raise funds for contributions to local charitable efforts.

Filling the presidency were Jane Hilton of Pinedale, Wyo., Judith Reagan of San Antonio, Tex., and Jean Torcom of Park Ridge, Ill.

Dean of men was Donald T Bradbury, a senior majoring in sociology and a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He is from Glenco, Ill.

Cowpokes Get Blame For Change

LONDON (AP) — American tailors and designers were advised Friday how to capture clothes markets and create a more elegant world: Get U.S. television to produce fewer horse operas and popularize smart dress instead of blue jeans.

The advice came from the British magazine Tailor and Cutter, which bills itself as "the authority on style and clothes."

The magazine's comments were in a front - page article which also paid tribute to Aloiphe Menjou, the elegant Hollywood actor who died last week. It lamented the decline of Hollywood as a stylesetter and the takeover of rumpled television beat singers and private eyes, where now only Cary Grant still carries the torch for Hollywood.

Now that Telstar and other communications satellites have made television worldwide and many American - packaged shows are screened in homes around the world, there should be a turning of the tide, Tailor and Cutter urged.

Printers May Strike in Denver

DENVER (AP) — A notice of intent to strike was served Friday upon Denver's two daily newspapers and the Denver Catholic Register by Denver Typographical Union No. 49.

The union's contract with The Denver Post, The Rocky Mountain News and the Catholic publication expired Sept. 30. In a notice issued through the State Industrial Commission, the union stated its intent to strike Dec. 6 unless a new contract has been adopted by then.

Welfare Board Sets Flat Rate For Nurse Homes

DENVER (AP) — The State Welfare Board Friday told representatives of nursing homes they will be given state funds on a flat schedule until the homes devise an accounting system that will show their actual costs of operation.

Nursing home officials replied that they cannot live within the scheduled amount.

Mrs. Helen Doughit, president of the Colorado Nursing Home Association, said the pressure to form an accounting plan shows "we're not being trusted."

Some home officials have said it would raise their costs still more to set up strict accounting procedures.

Serving notice it intends to keep its payments to nursing homes within the $3 million budget, the board announced a schedule of $185 a month for Class 1 homes, $173 for Class 2 and $120 for basic homes, which offer minimum services.

The amounts include vendor payments, made by the state directly to the nursing homes, and payments made by pensioners to the homes.

Last month, the board said nursing homes would have to

NORAD Addition Nears Completion

Work on the $200,000 two-story addition to the NORAD Combat Operations Center building at Ent AFB should be completed by Dec. 1, officials said here.

The two-story building will be occupied by the Space Detection and Tracking center (SPADATS) which has already taken possession of the first floor of the concrete and steel building.

It has been constructed adjacent to the COC. The COC will be abandoned in 1965 when the NORAD hardsite under Cheyenne Mountain will become operational.

Document Would Change Catholic Views on Jews

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Ecumenical Council received Friday an official document aimed at ending anti-Jewish views among Roman Catholics and charging all mankind with responsibility for Christ's death.

Representing two years of work begun by Pope John XXIII, the document was submitted to the 2,300 council fathers by the secretariat for promoting Christian unity, headed by German-born Augustin Cardinal Bea.

At the same time a heated debate flared on the floor of St. Peter's Basilica as Joseph Cardinal Frings of Cologne, a leader among Catholic progressives, called for basic reform of the Holy Office.

21 Die as Plane Crashes in Finland

MARIEHAMN, Finland (UPI) — A Finnair DC3 airliner with 24 Finns aboard crashed into a swamp forest area near here Friday night, flipped over on its back and caught fire. Twenty-one persons were killed and three survived.

Authorities said the dead included two children and the pilot and co-pilot. Two male passengers and stewardess Marianne Kullberg survived with injuries and burns. They were reported doing well in a hospital.

Favored Nation Plan Continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Friday night to restore President Kennedy's power to continue most-favored-nation treatment in trade relations with Communist Poland and Yugoslavia.

The 55-14 vote defeated an attempt by Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, to strike from the $3.7-billion foreign aid authorization bill a provision restoring this authority to the chief executive.

It was viewed as the biggest victory for the administration so far in the 10 days of debate and came after a series of setbacks.

Earlier, the Senate's bipartisan leadership sprang back from the setbacks by defeating, 44-30, an effort to boost the interest on all loans under the aid program to at least 4 per cent — far above the current low rates.

Tax Cut Bill Seems Dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee dealt an apparent death blow Friday to all hopes for 1963 passage of a taxcut bill.

Holding to the deliberate schedule advocated by Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., the committee set Dec. 13 as the windup date for its hearings on a House-passed measure to slice $11 billion from the nation's federal tax bill for 1964.

A Dec. 13 end to hearings, which already have run four weeks, means only a week would remain before the Christmas-New Year's recess which starts Dec. 20 and runs to Jan. 2.

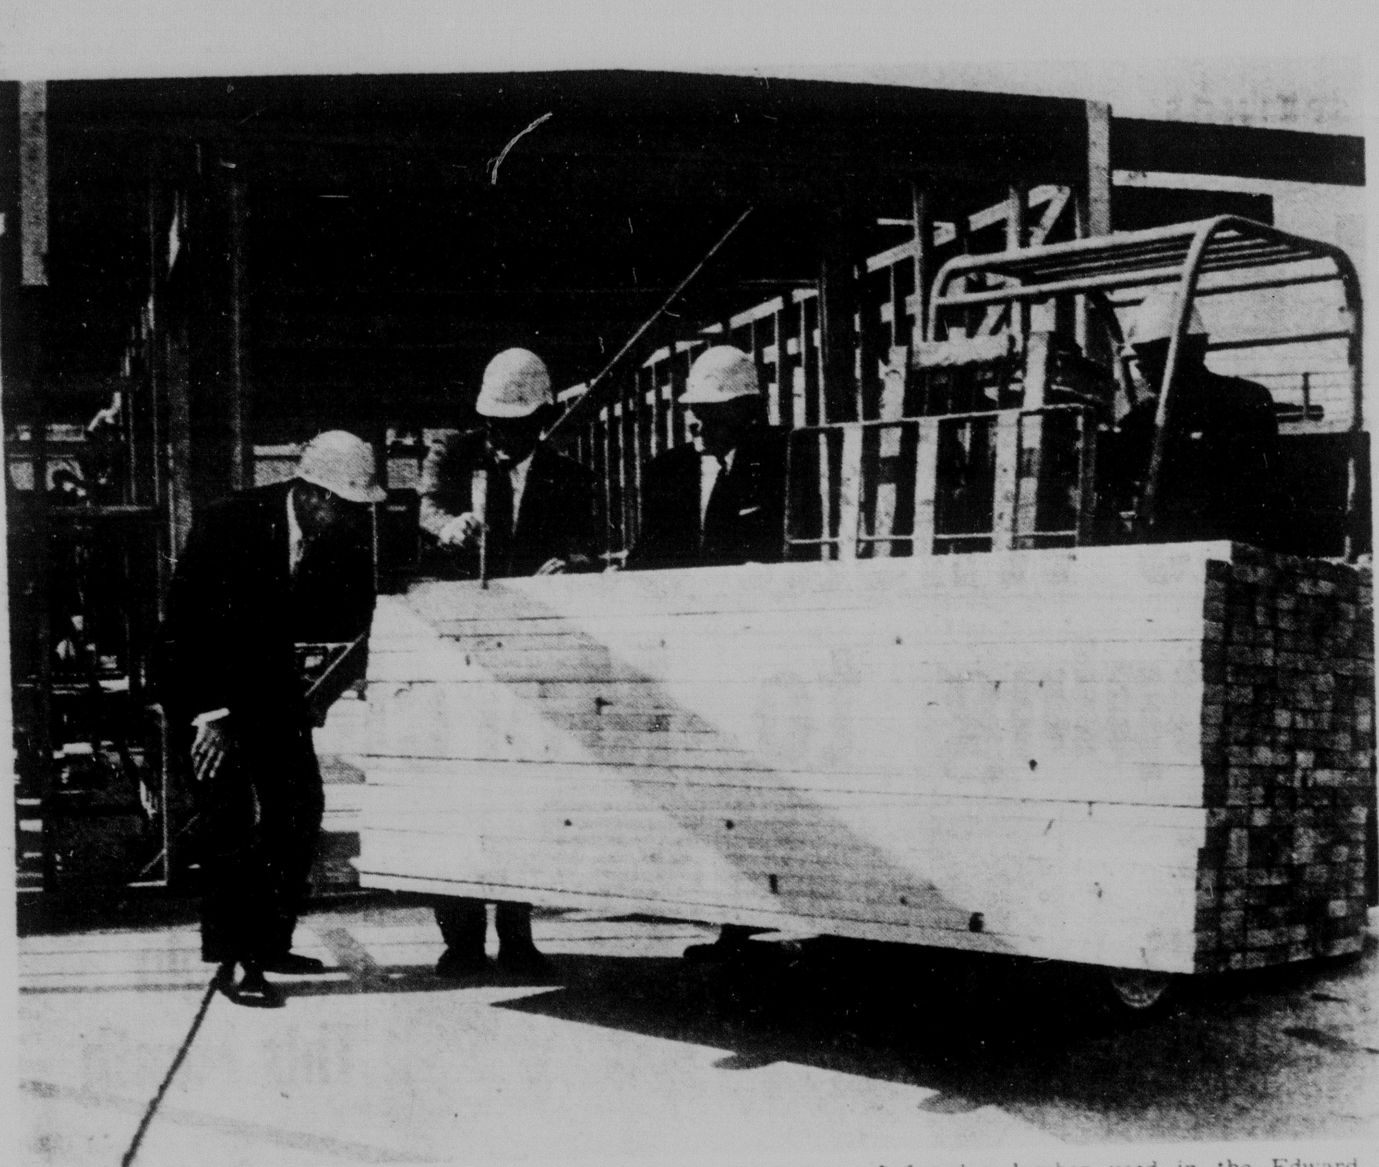
Based on all past records of tax-handling in the Senate, a week would be far from enough time to complete Senate passage, let alone to compromise any differences with the House.

Byrd opposes any tax cut without a balancing reduction in federal spending. A principal objective of the conservative Southerner is to prevent Senate action until after President Kennedy submits in January his budget for fiscal 1965.

Working toward that end, Byrd has called 70 witnesses, another 100 are on the waiting list, and he has said all who apply will be heard by the committee.

After the committee action, Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., told newsmen he would move in the committee later this month to speed the hearings to make possible action this year. But when Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., made a similar move last month, the committee backed Byrd's go-slow program with a 12-4 vote and most observers figure a motion by Hartke would meet a similar fate.

Byrd has been unmoved by many witnesses, from the business world and from government, who have predicted or hinted strongly that 1964 is likely to bring another recession if tax relief is not voted this year.



THIS WAS SAVED—The load of lumber pictured here represents the amount of wood saved on the modern home version of the "House of Good Taste, New York World's Fair, through the use of new engineered lumber standards which provide a more efficient, more stable product. Volume shown is 1102 board feet, representing a seven per cent savings of the total 15,744 board feet of framing lumber used in the Edward Durell Stone-designed house. From left, Mortimer B. Doyle, executive vice president, National Lumber Manufacturers Association; John P. Jansson, director of design and construction, "House of Good Taste," and John M. Dickerman, executive vice president, National Association of Home Builders.

New Cost-Cutting Lumber Used in World's Fair Homes

New York—New lumber specially engineered to boost the quality and cut the cost of home building is being used for the first time in construction of three "ideal" American homes for the World's Fair which opens here next April.

"Builders, lenders and lumbermen have estimated that home construction costs could be slashed up to $100 million annually through use of the new size and quality standards to which this lumber was produced," reported Mortimer B. Doyle, Washington, D. C., executive vice president of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

"This could provide a substantial savings on each residence built in America with the new engineered lumber," Doyle added.

Some lumber manufacturers already are producing the improved lumber and initial shipments are being made to lumber dealers thruout the nation. The lumber for the World's Fair homes was manufactured by the Weyerhaeuser Company of Tacoma, Washington, one of the leaders in introducing the new material.

The improved lumber is the first new building material revealed at the World's Fair exhibit, known as the "House of Good Taste." Although the title would suggest a single house, there actually are three—modern, contemporary and traditional—to reflect gracious living in homes of different architecture. They were designed by three of the nation's foremost architects: Edward Durell Stone and Jack Pickens Coble of New York and Royal Barry Wills Associates of Boston.

The fair is expected to attract more than 70 million visitors in two six-month summer seasons in 1964 and 1965. The new framing lumber was selected for the exciting "Good Taste" homes because the houses are planned to present the newest materials and advanced building methods as well as fine design and tasteful furnishings.

Lumber industry technical committees and trade associations have recommended adoption of the new specifications for softwood construction lumber after three years of study. Now, the U.S. Department of Commerce is ready to circulate the new specifications among representatives of the lumber and building industries for acceptance as a new standard.

The proposed revision will establish uniformity of lumber sizes when the product reaches the user; it does so by relating lumber size to moisture content. Previous size standards made no reference to the moisture condition of the lumber.

"Moreover, lumber produced to the new size and quality standards takes advantage of man's knowledge that the strength in lumber depends mostly upon the depth (or width) of the member rather than thickness," Doyle pointed out.

Principally, the proposed new standards applies to what the trade refers to as "softwood dimension lumber." This is material, nominally two inches thick and from four to 12 inches wide, used mostly for the framing of floors, walls and roofs of homes. Under the proposed standard, seasoned lumber will be dried at the mill to 19 per cent maximum moisture content (15 per cent average).

Both seasoned and unseasoned lumber will be cut the same size from the log. However, the producer of unseasoned lumber will surface to a size which will dry in place to the standard size for seasoned lumber. This means that unseasoned lumber will be shipped slightly larger than seasoned material so that both will attain the same size in service.

So that builders, home buyers and the do-it-yourselfer will know exactly what they buy, the new standard provides that the grade stamp will identify whether the lumber has been seasoned before shipment.

An added benefit of the new standards is greater conservation of forest resources. The new size of lumber saves about seven per cent of the volume of wood required for the framework of a house. In construction of the modern home version of the "House of Good Taste," this meant a savings equivalent to 1,102 board feet.

Present at ceremonies marking completion of the framing of this house were Doyle, John M. Dickerman, Washington, D. C., executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders; Lady Malcolm Douglas-Hamilton of New York, originator of the "House of Good Taste" exposition, and John L. Aram of Tacoma, Washington, vice president-marketing of the Weyerhaeuser Company's wood products division.

QUESTION: We need an extra medicine cabinet in our bathroom. While I know that I can buy a cabinet and attach it directly to the wall, I would like to make the cabinet and then set it into the wall like the other cabinet. Can you tell me something about making the opening in the wall?

ANSWER: Our first advice is not to build the cabinet until you have first opened the wall. While the cabinet should be located between two studs, which usually are 16 inches apart on center, the distance occasionally is a little more or a little less than that. By waiting until you determine the exact distance, you can make the cabinet fit exactly without any last-minute adjusting.

After deciding where you want the cabinet to be, drill a hole into the wall and then another and another, until you locate a stud. This will enable you to start cutting in the proper place. Use a compass or similar saw after making a hole large enough for the saw. Don't worry too much about irregularities, since they will be covered by molding and the front of the cabinet.

Once the opening has been cut and the cabinet built to fit, it is a simple matter to screw the sides of the cabinet into the studs.

Children Play Important Role On Living Space

Children play the most important role in a family's decision on when and how to create more living space within a home.

A young married couple buying a house tend to think in terms of their infant child. The arrangement of the rooms must be suitable for convenient handling of the baby, both during the day and at night. Will there be a place for a crib and a playpen? Will mother be able to take care of her chores, especially those in the kitchen, and keep an eye on the baby at the same time?

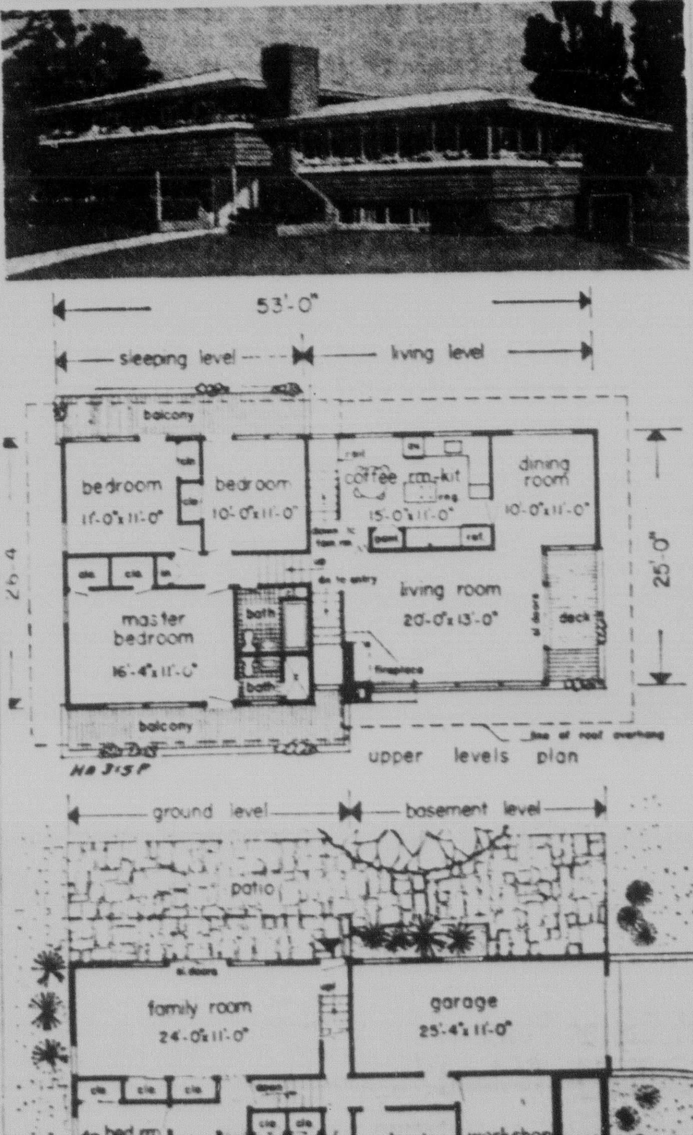
Even if the answer to these and similar questions is yes, the couple's thinking and planning must not end there. They have to look ahead — and not too far ahead — to the time when the youngster will need a play area larger and less confining then a playpen. If the child's bedroom is large enough, its conversion into a day-playroom, night-bedroom is not difficult. But a special playroom often is the only answer. Pop sometimes discovers that this means the end of his den.

As the child grows up, his or her housing needs change, especially during the teen-age period. A boy and his friends can put ten years' wear and tear on furniture in one month. A girl and her friends simply can not discuss that new boy down the block while mom and pop are present. And if the offspring, male or female, is an advocate or rock-n-roll or any of its affiliated musical mishmashes, things can get a little sticky where privacy is conspicuous by its absence.

It is then that the parents decide very definitely, with little prompting from the children, that there must be a recreation room. Oh, sure, it will be for everybody in the family. That's understood from the start. But all concerned know its primary purpose is to separate the parents from the children at particular times.

When a married couple begins with a big bankroll, they have only to get a large enough house at the beginning to take care of all stages of the childern's development. But most couples must look for a home which they can afford and yet which has enough expansion area to make the necessary changes later on. This often is easier said than done, but it's possible if the objective — usage five or 10 years in the future — is kept in mind during the house-hunting.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS



RAISED FOUR-LEVEL SPLIT is designed for a level site. Its 1,289 square feet of ground cover would do well on a 70 by 100 foot plot. The lowest level, garage, storage and hobby, is raised so that its large windows are above grade. The main entrance is on the ground level. The study is equipped with a closet and could become a guest bedroom; a 297-square-foot family room occupies the ground level rear. Living room has a dramatic corner fireplace and sliding glass doors leading to a covered deck. The three bedrooms also open onto balconies. House Plans You Can Buy

By Hiawatha Estes, AIBD

A properly planned house needs only the imagination of its occupants to create an appealing and livable home. Prospective builders will have very few complaints about this home as the floor plan is excellent and more than adequate provisions have been made to offer all the necessities required to create an exceptionally striking design.

You would scarcely know where to begin serving a meal here since you have so many alternatives. A separate dining room is available for formal entertaining. Access for guests is from the entry hall while the door leading to the kitchen opens to the hall so as not to interfere with kitchen wall space. A large comfortable nook area, surrounded by windows, is in the kitchen where it can best be utilized for everyday family meals. It is only a short distance from the kitchen-thru the sliding glass doors in the family room—to the wide private patio at the rear of the house. Outdoor meals may be enjoyed here whenever weather permits.

A door leads direct from the garage to the service-kitchen area. This saves many steps each day and will be especially appreciated on rainy days. The overall width of the house is visibly increased by the addition of the garage at the side of the house.

Double doors with stationary glass panes on each side open to the generous size entry. From the entry, one hall leads to the bedroom wing while another offers access to the family room and kitchen. If a larger family room is preferred to this latter hall, the hall could be eliminated to form a 15'-6' width family room rather than the present 12 foot width. All bedrooms are unusually large. A private dressing room and bath compliment the luxurious master bedroom suite.

Posts extend from the stone planter in front of the entry to support the roof projection over the front porch. A combination hip-gable roof has been used over the bedroom wing and the garage.

Complete working drawings for this plan can be purchased at a cost of $7.50 for the first set and $5.00 for each additional set when ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these prices until March 3, 1964. Please allow two or three weeks for delivery. The following home plan books are also available: Hallmark Homes — $1; Award Homes — $1; Town & Country Homes — $1; Homes for Living — $1; Homes of Distinction — $1; Ranch & Modern Homes — $2. All books — a $7 value — only $5. Send all orders for either plans or books to: Hiawatha Estes, P. O. Box 404-K, Northridge, Calif.

Much Fall Fun Can Be Had on Covered Patio

A patio isn't a good place to grill a steak during a blizzard, but it's a fine place to have a lot of family fun during the crisp, chilly days of autumn.

Your barbecue grill, if located nearby, can impart warmth and a cheerful campfire feeling to late afternoon and evening hot dog or marshmallow-roasting parties, advises Marc Coulter, outdoor living specialist for the Flexalum division of the Bridgeport Brass Company.

Teen-age dancing and games can be enjoyed under similar conditions and save a lot of wear and tear on the house and furnishings, he points out.

For more sedate pursuits, the protection of an aluminum patio cover and the utilization of a pair of inexpensive, portable heating units are advisable, the Flexalum specialist continues. These additions can make late patio breakfasts, for instance, pleasurable on many a sunny holiday and weekend right up to the arrival of winter.

A custom aluminum cover, designed to fit the style of your home, will enable you to get maximum pleasure from your patio next summer also, Coulter says, by making screening possible and by providing both shade and insurance against your recreational plans being ruined by rain. Proper choice of the patio cover's supports will permit installation of screens which can be replaced with glass panels, and you'll have a year-round recreation center.

Every year more and more people request this colorful paint-it-yourself Christmas Decoration. "Dancer", "Prancer" and the other reindeer pulling Santa's sleigh bring happy smiles to all who see this delightful decoration. The Sleigh, Santa and Reindeer are easy to make and just as easy to decorate. It's all done by tracing full-size patterns on low cost panelboard. With the simplified step-by-step directions and full size cutting and painting guides you make like a "pro".

Three complete, full-size patterns are available. There's one for the reindeer, another for the full bodied sleigh and a third for Santa. Each contains a complete list of materials needed. Any number of reindeer can be made from one pattern. The legs are bolted to the body and can be raised or lowered to indicate the exact motion desired.

So, get started today. Send 50 cents in coin, check or money order for each of the folowing—40 inch Santa Claus, Pattern No. 431; Sleigh Pattern No. 434 and Rollicking Reindeer Pattern No. 433. A life size Nativity Scene, complete with twelve foot Creche can be built and painted by following Pattern No. 410—$5. Send coin, check or money order to Gazette Telegraph PO Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, New York. Special Handling is 25 cents additional per pattern if desired. Add 50 cents for new catalog illustrating 300 other build-it-yourself pattern projects and home improvement books.

Visual Education Trend Creates Light Problem

Providing effective light controls for the modern classroom is one of the many problems facing school authorities thruout the country.

This problem is becoming increasingly acute, says Frank Vecchiarelli, lighting specialist for the Flexalum division of the Bridgeport Brass Company, because it is a by-product of two of the most significant trends in today's educational picture.

The trend in school construction, he explains, is toward a constantly increasing use of glass, while the trend in teaching is toward greater use of visual materials.

Each of these aspects of the educational picture had developed independently of the other, he points out, and as a consequence they are at some variance, since projection equipment — and television, as well — can be used only when the teacher in the individual classroom can quickly and effectively black out the huge glass areas the architects have provided.

The problem is being augmented annually, he says, by the postwar spiral of new school construction, which has risen from a national total of $101 million in 1946 to an estimated $4 billion in 1963. Its solution is being left largely to local school authorities, who often must provide light control installations from operating instead of construction budgets.

In meeting the situation, widespread use is being made of the "audio-visual" blind, a recent development in the venetian field which provides, according to Vecchiarelli, "precise light control thru infinite graduations of darkness, including a blackout condition for opaque projection."

Opaque projection, he explains, is the enlargement on a screen of the reflection of an actual object, like the page of a book, without having to go thru the processes required to produce films or transparencies.

The custom aluminum audio-visual blind is a dual-purpose treatment for windows of any size, the Flexalum specialist points out, and makes any classroom suitable for audio-visual training. Its superior performance is the result of a combination of factors, including more louvers per foot of height, notches cut into the rear edges of the slats, and the use of light traps at the top, bottom and sides of the glass areas. These blinds can be designed to go around corners and come in soft, natural colors.

This glass-area treatment is being widely accepted by school authorities as a practical solution to the problem, Vecchiarelli states, because it entails a lower initial cost and assures a longer trouble-free operating life than any combination of blackout and conventional window coverings.

Everitt Named Headquarters Weldwood Dealer

Everitt Lumber Co. Inc., 228 E. Fillmore St., has been registered as a headquarters dealer for Weldwood Products, Gene C. Brewer, president of United States Plywood Corp., announced Friday in New York.

"We are happy to welcome Everitt Lumber into our new headquarters dealer program as one of a group of leading lumber dealers thruout the country to feature a complete line of our wall paneling products," Brewer said.

Approximately 1,000 dealers thruout the country will be registered this year under the headquarters dealer program, Brewer said.

United States Plywood will focus special attention on these dealers and their stock of paneling in television and magazine advertising. The paneling line features 58 different products from exotic and domestic hardwoods to budget lines of print grain and hardboard paneling.

Everitt Lumber will be identified by signs and advertising as a headquarters for Weldwood Products in this area.

New Cost-Cutting Lumber Used in World's Fair Homes

New York—New lumber specially engineered to boost the quality and cut the cost of home building is being used for the first time in construction of three "ideal" American homes for the World's Fair which opens here next April.

"Builders, lenders and lumbermen have estimated that home construction costs could be slashed up to $100 million annually through use of the new size and quality standards to which this lumber was produced," reported Mortimer B. Doyle, Washington, D. C., executive vice president of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

"This could provide a substantial savings on each residence built in America with the new engineered lumber," Doyle added.

Some lumber manufacturers already are producing the improved lumber and initial shipments are being made to lumber dealers thruout the nation. The lumber for the World's Fair homes was manufactured by the Weyerhaeuser Company of Tacoma, Washington, one of the leaders in introducing the new material.

The improved lumber is the first new building material revealed at the World's Fair exhibit, known as the "House of Good Taste." Although the title would suggest a single house, there actually are three—modern, contemporary and traditional—to reflect gracious living in homes of different architecture. They were designed by three of the nation's foremost architects: Edward Durell Stone and Jack Pickens Coble of New York and Royal Barry Wills Associates of Boston.

The fair is expected to attract more than 70 million visitors in two six-month summer seasons in 1964 and 1965. The new framing lumber was selected for the exciting "Good Taste" homes because the houses are planned to present the newest materials and advanced building methods as well as fine design and tasteful furnishings.

Lumber industry technical committees and trade associations have recommended adoption of the new specifications for softwood construction lumber after three years of study. Now, the U.S. Department of Commerce is ready to circulate the new specifications among representatives of the lumber and building industries for acceptance as a new standard.

The proposed revision will establish uniformity of lumber sizes when the product reaches the user; it does so by relating lumber size to moisture content. Previous size standards made no reference to the moisture condition of the lumber.

"Moreover, lumber produced to the new size and quality standards takes advantage of man's knowledge that the strength in lumber depends mostly upon the depth (or width) of the member rather than thickness," Doyle pointed out.

Principally, the proposed new standards applies to what the trade refers to as "softwood dimension lumber." This is material, nominally two inches thick and from four to 12 inches wide, used mostly for the framing of floors, walls and roofs of homes. Under the proposed standard, seasoned lumber will be dried at the mill to 19 per cent maximum moisture content (15 per cent average).

Both seasoned and unseasoned lumber will be cut the same size from the log. However, the producer of unseasoned lumber will surface to a size which will dry in place to the standard size for seasoned lumber. This means that unseasoned lumber will be shipped slightly larger than seasoned material so that both will attain the same size in service.

So that builders, home buyers and the do-it-yourselfer will know exactly what they buy, the new standard provides that the grade stamp will identify whether the lumber has been seasoned before shipment.

An added benefit of the new standards is greater conservation of forest resources. The new size of lumber saves about seven per cent of the volume of wood required for the framework of a house. In construction of the modern home version of the "House of Good Taste," this meant a savings equivalent to 1,102 board feet.

Present at ceremonies marking completion of the framing of this house were Doyle, John M. Dickerman, Washington, D. C., executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders; Lady Malcolm Douglas-Hamilton of New York, originator of the "House of Good Taste" exposition, and John L. Aram of Tacoma, Washington, vice president-marketing of the Weyerhaeuser Company's wood products division.

QUESTION: We need an extra medicine cabinet in our bathroom. While I know that I can buy a cabinet and attach it directly to the wall, I would like to make the cabinet and then set it into the wall like the other cabinet. Can you tell me something about making the opening in the wall?

ANSWER: Our first advice is not to build the cabinet until you have first opened the wall. While the cabinet should be located between two studs, which usually are 16 inches apart on center, the distance occasionally is a little more or a little less than that. By waiting until you determine the exact distance, you can make the cabinet fit exactly without any last-minute adjusting.

After deciding where you want the cabinet to be, drill a hole into the wall and then another and another, until you locate a stud. This will enable you to start cutting in the proper place. Use a compass or similar saw after making a hole large enough for the saw. Don't worry too much about irregularities, since they will be covered by molding and the front of the cabinet.

Once the opening has been cut and the cabinet built to fit, it is a simple matter to screw the sides of the cabinet into the studs.

Children Play Important Role On Living Space

Children play the most important role in a family's decision on when and how to create more living space within a home.

A young married couple buying a house tend to think in terms of their infant child. The arrangement of the rooms must be suitable for convenient handling of the baby, both during the day and at night. Will there be a place for a crib and a playpen? Will mother be able to take care of her chores, especially those in the kitchen, and keep an eye on the baby at the same time?

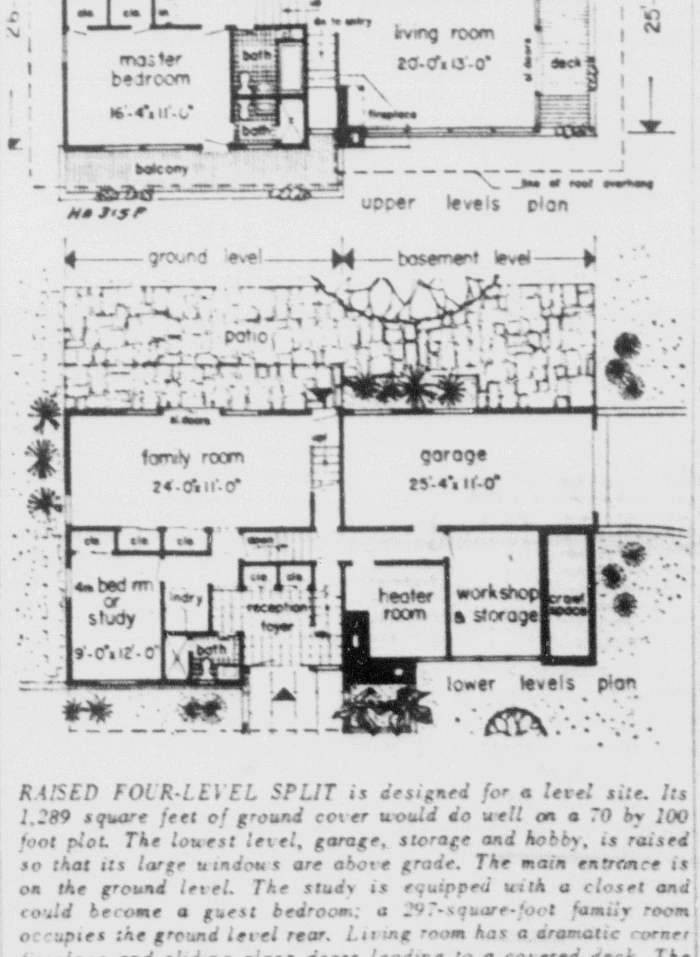
Even if the answer to these and similar questions is yes, the couple's thinking and planning must not end there. They have to look ahead — and not too far ahead — to the time when the youngster will need a play area larger and less confining then a playpen. If the child's bedroom is large enough, its conversion into a day-playroom, night-bedroom is not difficult. But a special playroom often is the only answer. Pop sometimes discovers that this means the end of his den.

As the child grows up, his or her housing needs change, especially during the teen-age period. A boy and his friends can put ten years' wear and tear on furniture in one month. A girl and her friends simply can not discuss that new boy down the block while mom and pop are present. And if the offspring, male or female, is an advocate or rock-n-roll or any of its affiliated musical mishmashes, things can get a little sticky where privacy is conspicuous by its absence.

It is then that the parents decide very definitely, with little prompting from the children, that there must be a recreation room. Oh, sure, it will be for everybody in the family. That's understood from the start. But all concerned know its primary purpose is to separate the parents from the children at particular times.

When a married couple begins with a big bankroll, they have only to get a large enough house at the beginning to take care of all stages of the childern's development. But most couples must look for a home which they can afford and yet which has enough expansion area to make the necessary changes later on. This often is easier said than done, but it's possible if the objective — usage five or 10 years in the future — is kept in mind during the house-hunting.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS



RAISED FOUR-LEVEL SPLIT is designed for a level site. Its 1,289 square feet of ground cover would do well on a 70 by 100 foot plot. The lowest level, garage, storage and hobby, is raised so that its large windows are above grade. The main entrance is on the ground level. The study is equipped with a closet and could become a guest bedroom; a 297-square-foot family room occupies the ground level rear. Living room has a dramatic corner fireplace and sliding glass doors leading to a covered deck. The three bedrooms also open onto balconies. House Plans You Can Buy

By Hiawatha Estes, AIBD

A properly planned house needs only the imagination of its occupants to create an appealing and livable home. Prospective builders will have very few complaints about this home as the floor plan is excellent and more than adequate provisions have been made to offer all the necessities required to create an exceptionally striking design.

You would scarcely know where to begin serving a meal here since you have so many alternatives. A separate dining room is available for formal entertaining. Access for guests is from the entry hall while the door leading to the kitchen opens to the hall so as not to interfere with kitchen wall space. A large comfortable nook area, surrounded by windows, is in the kitchen where it can best be utilized for everyday family meals. It is only a short distance from the kitchen-thru the sliding glass doors in the family room—to the wide private patio at the rear of the house. Outdoor meals may be enjoyed here whenever weather permits.

A door leads direct from the garage to the service-kitchen area. This saves many steps each day and will be especially appreciated on rainy days. The overall width of the house is visibly increased by the addition of the garage at the side of the house.

Double doors with stationary glass panes on each side open to the generous size entry. From the entry, one hall leads to the bedroom wing while another offers access to the family room and kitchen. If a larger family room is preferred to this latter hall, the hall could be eliminated to form a 15'-6" width family room rather than the present 12 foot width. All bedrooms are unusually large. A private dressing room and bath compliment the luxurious master bedroom suite.

Posts extend from the stone planter in front of the entry to support the roof projection over the front porch. A combination hip-gable roof has been used over the bedroom wing and the garage.

Complete working drawings for this plan can be purchased at a cost of $7.50 for the first set and $5.00 for each additional set when ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these prices until March 3, 1964. Please allow two or three weeks for delivery. The following home plan books are also available: Hallmark Homes — $1; Award Homes — $1; Town & Country Homes —$1; Homes for Living — $1; Homes of Distinction — $1; Ranch & Modern Homes — $2. All books — a $7 value — only $5. Send all orders for either plans or books to Hiawatha Estes, P. O. Box 404-K, Northridge, Calif.

Much Fall Fun Can Be Had on Covered Patio

A patio isn't a good place to grill a steak during a blizzard, but it's a fine place to have a lot of family fun during the crisp, chilly days of autumn.

Your barbecue grill, if located nearby, can impart warmth and a cheerful campfire feeling to late afternoon and evening hot dog or marshmallow-roasting parties, advises Marc Coulter, outdoor living specialist for the Flexalum division of the Bridgeport Brass Company.

Teen-age dancing and games can be enjoyed under similar conditions and save a lot of wear and tear on the house and furnishings, he points out.

For more sedate pursuits, the protection of an aluminum patio cover and the utilization of a pair of inexpensive, portable heating units are advisable, the Flexalum specialist continues. These additions can make late patio breakfasts, for instance, pleasurable on many a sunny holiday and weekend right up to the arrival of winter.

A custom aluminum cover, designed to fit the style of your home, will enable you to get maximum pleasure from your patio next summer also, Coulter says, by making screening possible and by providing both shade and insurance against your recreational plans being ruined by rain. Proper choice of the patio cover's supports will permit installation of screens which can be replaced with glass panels, and you'll have a year-round recreation center.

Every year more and more people request this colorful paint-it-yourself Christmas Decoration. "Dancer", "Prancer" and the other reindeer pulling Santa's sleigh bring happy smiles to all who see this delightful decoration. The Sleigh, Santa and Reindeer are easy to make and just as easy to decorate. It's all done by tracing full-size patterns on low cost panelboard. With the simplified step-by-step directions and full size cutting and painting guides you make like a "pro".

Three complete, full-size patterns are available. There's one for the reindeer, another for the full bodied sleigh and a third for Santa. Each contains a complete list of materials needed. Any number of reindeer can be made from one pattern. The legs are bolted to the body and can be raised or lowered to indicate the exact motion desired.

So, get started today. Send 50 cents in coin, check or money order for each of the folowing—40 inch Santa Claus, Pattern No. 431; Sleigh Pattern No. 434 and Rollicking Reindeer Pattern No. 433. A life size Nativity Scene, complete with twelve foot Creche can be built and painted by following Pattern No. 410—$5. Send coin, check or money order to Gazette Telegraph PO Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, New York. Special Handling is 25 cents additional per pattern if desired. Add 50 cents for new catalog illustrating 300 other build-it-yourself pattern projects and home improvement books.

Visual Education Trend Creates Light Problem

Providing effective light controls for the modern classroom is one of the many problems facing school authorities thruout the country.

This problem is becoming increasingly acute, says Frank Vecchiarelli, lighting specialist for the Flexalum division of the Bridgeport Brass Company, because it is a by-product of two of the most significant trends in today's educational picture.

The trend in school construction, he explains, is toward a constantly increasing use of glass, while the trend in teaching is toward greater use of visual materials.

Each of these aspects of the educational picture had developed independently of the other, he points out, and as a consequence they are at some variance, since projection equipment — and television, as well — can be used only when the teacher in the individual classroom can quickly and effectively black out the huge glass areas the architects have provided.

The problem is being augmented annually, he says, by the postwar spiral of new school construction, which has risen from a national total of $101 million in 1946 to an estimated $4 billion in 1963. Its solution is being left largely to local school authorities, who often must provide light control installations from operating instead of construction budgets.

In meeting the situation, widespread use is being made of the "audio-visual" blind, a recent development in the venetian field which provides, according to Vecchiarelli, "precise light control thru infinite graduations of darkness, including a blackout condition for opaque projection."

Opaque projection, he explains, is the enlargement on a screen of the reflection of an actual object, like the page of a book, without having to go thru the processes required to produce films or transparencies.

The custom aluminum audio-visual blind is a dual-purpose treatment for windows of any size, the Flexalum specialist points out, and makes any classroom suitable for audio-visual training. Its superior performance is the result of a combination of factors, including more louvers per foot of height, notches cut into the rear edges of the slats, and the use of light traps at the top, bottom and sides of the glass areas. These blinds can be designed to go around corners and come in soft, natural colors.

This glass-area treatment is being widely accepted by school authorities as a practical solution to the problem, Vecchiarelli states, because it entails a lower initial cost and assures a longer trouble-free operating life than any combination of blackout and conventional window coverings.

Everitt Named Headquarters Weldwood Dealer

Everitt Lumber Co. Inc., 228 E. Fillmore St., has been registered as a headquarters dealer for Weldwood Products, Gene C. Brewer, president of United States Plywood Corp., announced Friday in New York.

"We are happy to welcome Everitt Lumber into our new headquarters dealer program as one of a group of leading lumber dealers thruout the country to feature a complete line of our wall paneling products," Brewer said.

Approximately 1,000 dealers thruout the country will be registered this year under the headquarters dealer program, Brewer said.

United States Plywood will focus special attention on these dealers and their stock of paneling in television and magazine advertising. The paneling line features 58 different products from exotic and domestic hardwoods to budget lines of print grain and hardboard paneling.

Everitt Lumber will be identified by signs and advertising as a headquarters for Weldwood Products in this area.

Rambler Style House Is Easy to Modernize

Of the basic house styles in vogue since the end of World War II, the most common is the one-story rambler.

A basically sound design, the typical rambler usually has only one major shortcoming: It probably was designed to appeal to a young married couple with only one or two small children. The one-story rambler that seemed like a mansion to a young couple 10 years ago, today is likely to be overcrowded, providing only cramped uncomfortable shelter for a growing family.

However, the same rambler that looked like such a good investment 10 years ago probably still is.

The reason is that the one-story rambler is one of the easiest and least expensive kinds of houses to remodel.

Experts say the ideal add-a-room project is one which provides desirable living space, and which at the same time increases the value of the property as much — or more than — the cost of the remodeling project.

Chances are, the family living in a soundly constructed rambler can do just that with careful planning and the help of a qualified remodeling contractor. And, the chances are even greater that the same family can get that added space by remodeling for less money than they would spend in moving to a bigger house.

Here are some factors in favor of remodeling when the basic rambler style is involved:

1. The design of a typical rambler provides flexibility in floor plan. If trussed rafters were used to build the roof, there probably are no interior bearing walls.

2. The simplicity of the rectangular shape permits a variety of exterior alterations. For instance, the rectangle can easily become an L-shape with the addition of a room to the back or front of the house. Or, the rectangle can be retained by adding space to one end of the home.

3. The structural shell of a good, one-story rambler involves relatively simple carpentry, and alterations can be accomplished with equally straight-forward and inexpensive building methods.

Several ways to add space to almost any rambler style home are outlined in a new publication offered by Douglas Fir Plywood Association, a non-profit trade association. Included are ideas for a 16 x 20 master bedroom with full bath and double wardrobe unit, a 12 x 16 foot single bedroom with standard wardrobe and a half-bath, a 16 x 20 foot family room with ideas for built-in storage units. In addition, the publication suggests methods of adding similar rooms to split-level and two-story houses and discusses remodeling, financing, contracting and building materials.

Developed with advice from builders, building supply outlets, and working remodeling contractors, the DFPA Remodeling Guide is intended to help home owners add space as economically as possible and to provide sound design tips.

Here are a few suggestions DFPA offers to anyone considering a remodeling program or faced with the need for adding living space:

Take care to choose a reputable firm to do the remodeling job. Make sure the firm you select is a local, established business that has been around long enough to know its job well — and that will be around long enough to make sure you are completely satisfied with your project.

Work with a contract and a plan. A contract will make sure that both you and your contractor know what work is to be done; a plan will outline that work specifically. Make as few changes as possible once the plan and contract are agreed upon.

4. Try to stick to a basic goal in your remodeling program. If it is space that is needed, keep interior alterations and decoration to a minimum. Interior alterations usually are expensive, but add little value to a house. A simple rule of thumb is this: The less interior alteration required, and the fewer frills drawn into the plans, the more square feet your remodeling budget will buy.

For detailed information about eight basic ways to add space to virtually any home, send 25 cents to Gazette Telegraph, in care of Douglas Fir Plywood Association, 1119 A St., Tacoma 2, Wash., and ask for the DFPA Remodeling Guide.

POOL STORAGE

A storage fence is the ideal companion to a swimming pool. Built along one side, the storage compartments offer space for the pool vacuum, scraper and other maintenance equipment, as well as for lounge pillows and floats. It can be built of western red cedar using any popular siding pattern. The storage fence could also be designed tall and deep enough to include dressing rooms.

Putting Up Storm Windows Heralds Coming of Winter

One chore which, more than any other, heralds the advance of cold weather is the job of putting up storm windows. Tho it may head the list of things to do, switching from screens to storms often is delayed as long as possible.

Since it can be a big job, make sure that it is worth the effort. Be certain that your storm windows will do the job for which they are intended.

At the same time you will be prolonging the life of the storm sash.

Every window should be a perfect fit. None should be put up that needs painting. Since you will probably wash the windows before you put them up, you have an opportunity to give each one careful inspection.

"Obviously, cracked or broken glass should be replaced. Cracked or broken putty should be replaced as well.

Scrape out the old and prime the surface with lineseed oil bebefore applying new putty.

Frames become loose with age. Sometimes open corner joints can be closed by tapping with a wooden block and hammer. Joints can be reinforced with angle irons, metal straps or other braces that will bridge the adjoining pieces of wood. Use wood screws to fasten these. Corrugated fasteners or other wood fasteners also may be used to reinforce a weak corner.

They may need retouching. Remember that they should be painted not only on the surface, but on the edges as well. Failure to seal all surfaces will cause the wood to absorb moisture and swell.

On inner edges you will have to paint sparingly. Thick coats will make installation difficult.

Windows should fit snugly, but not so snug that you have to force them in. If a window sticks, note where it is rubbing and sand or plane the edge. Remember to seal the edges when you finish.

If the windows fit too loosely, they're no good at all since air is entering around them. In this case install felt or sponge weather stripping or other insulation material on the inside edges so that it seals the opening.

Aluminum storm windows need little maintenance, but should be checked just the same. Clean them with steel wool to remove oxidation. If the window is of the type that slides out of the way and is self-storing, remember to lubricate and clean the guide tracks occasionally.

With aluminum windows, a rubber molding generally cushions and holds the glass in the frame. If you find that it is out of the groove, work it back in to keep the glass tight.

When Shopping for New Home, Take Along Ruler

NEW YORK (AP) — When shopping for a new home bring a yardstick or folding ruler with you, advises William J. Levitt, home-builder of entire towns.

Printed plans give over - all room sizes but many key dimensions are not listed and a ruler is necessary to measure proper depths and widths, Levitt says.

For example, clothes closets should be 24 inches deep. Less depth cramps hanging suits and more represents waste space.

Halls should be at least 36 inches wide so that large pieces of furniture can be moved in and out.

The ideal distance between facing kitchen counters is four and one-half feet, according to Levitt. All work areas can then be reached conveniently with the minimum number of steps.

Bathroom Might Go Underneath Stairs

One way to brak the traffic jam in the family's isngle bathroom is look under the stairs. There are often little-used closets or dead space under a stairway that offers an excellent location for a powder room or half bath, according to the Tile Council of America. Like the full-sized bath, walls, floors, countertops and shower stall should be surfaced with water and strainproof materials such as ceramic tile. A good tip to remember: cost will be less if new bath can be located adjacent to present plumbing lines.

The Little Doll You Love Will Love Either of These Christmas Doll Houses

By BILL MEYERRIECKS

Here's an easy, inexpensive way to provide a delightful Christmas present for your daughter. She can choose either one of two doll house designs offered in this week's Sketchbook design plan. Both are simple enough for the smallest girl to enjoy, well proportioned enough to be "decoratable" and thus hold the interest of an older girl.

The basic, simple technique for building both doll houses is the same. Cut Homasote to shape, strengthen with ½" x ¾" lattic strips, then nail these parts together. The results are startlingly different.

Take the first, the "A"-frame cottage. This neat design has one added attraction — it travels by means of handholds in the roof. Inside (one side of the roof folds down) there is a large living room and a small kitchen. Also, there's a small forecourt.

The other design for a modern-minded miss, the three-room contemporary ranch offers plenty of play fun with living-dining room, kitchen in the center and bedroom at the far end. There's a carport in front, too. This house can grow the most with the girl by adding decorative trims and larger windows as the proud little home maker gets bigger.

Both doll house designs are shown in detail in Sketchbook plan S-135 available for 50 cents thru this newspaper.

Other popular Sketchbook designs on youngster's play toys that can be obtained in the same manner as this one are:

—S-133, the sturdy, digging steam shovel.

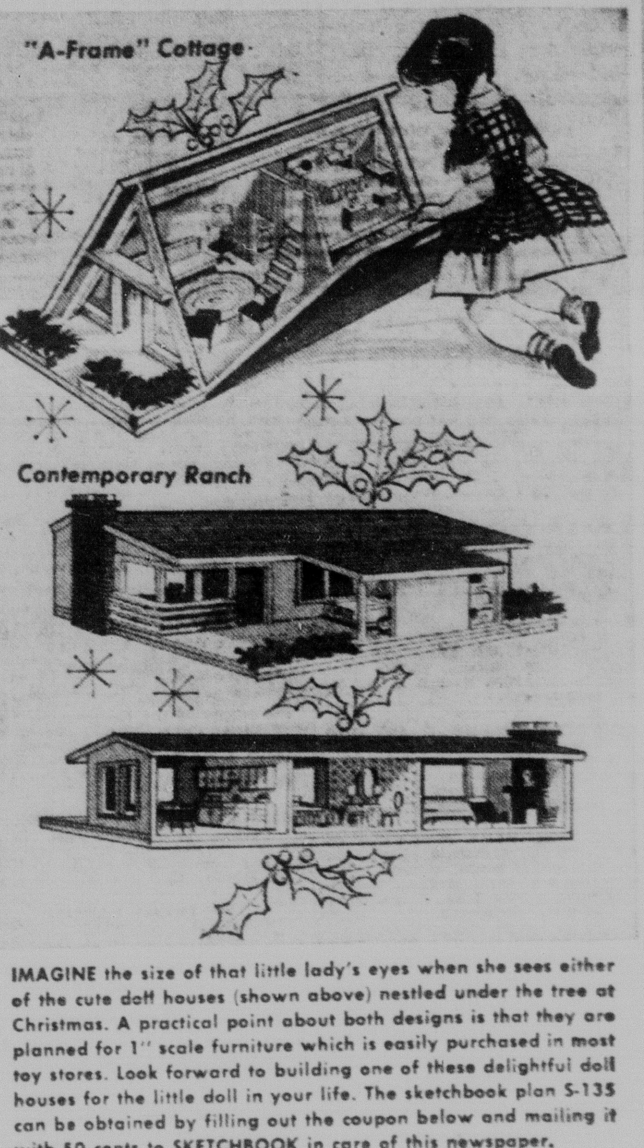
—S-114, Moon Jet, Jr.



IMAGINE the size of that little lady's eyes when she sees either of the cute doll houses (shown above) nestled under the tree at Christmas. A practical point about both designs is that they are planned for 1" scale furniture which is easily purchased in most toy stores. Look forward to building one of these delightful doll houses for the little doll in your life. Electrical Wiring Inadequate in 85 Per Cent of Homes

Inadequate electrical wiring continues to plague the large majority of home owners thruout the country. The latest estimate is that about 85 per cent of all private houses have wiring systems insufficient to carry the daily burdens placed upon them.

Wiring that does not meet the needs of modern living, with its almost endless list of electrical appliances, produces a number of results. It causes light to go dim momentarily when a major appliance is turned on, it shrinks television pictures, it prevents electrical equipment from operating at peak efficiency and it causes frequent blown fuses and tripped circuit breakers. The blowing of fuses is the most serious result, because all too often fuse replacements are made carelessly. Instead of using a fuse of the proper amperage, a larger-sized fuse is installed. Since a fuse is made to fail when an overload is placed upon the circuit, the protection is lost if the proper fuse is not used. That's one of the causes of burned wires and resultant tragic and costly fires.

Even if the safety factor were not involved, inadequate wiring costs you money. Voltage drops mean that heating appliances take longer to get hot, which in turns means that you use and pay for more electricity. A motor that burns out long before its normal life might have lasted indefinitely but for the extra work it had to perform to keep the refrigerator or other heavy appliance operating day in and day out even when the voltage was too low.

In some cases, of course, old wiring systems won't even handle certain types of appliances, let alone handle them poorly. Many home owners now have adequate wiring simply because it became a necessity when they installed air conditioning units. But generally, most persons attempt to struggle along with the old facilities, some of which were built into their homes 20 or 30 years ago.

If and when you get around to updating your home's wiring system, be sure you see that enough outlets are installed. This will eliminate the unsightly and unsafe jumble of plugs often seen in a single outlet. And don't neglect weatherproof outlets for outdoor use to take the place of many extension cords now strung from inside the house to outside locations. Extension cords are meant for temporary use, not as permanent installations.

Though the female brown bat of the Eastern United States weighs only six or seven grams, it gives birth to a two-gram baby.

Felxible Fireplaces Are Easily Installed

NEW YORK (AP) — New steel fireplaces can be installed with the ease and flexibility of light fixtures. They can be hung on a wall, suspended from the ceiling, or stand free, reports "Steel Facts," published by American Iron and Steel Institute. Available in a variety of colors and finishes, some fireplaces can also be painted to match a particular room color or scheme.

Existing chimneys can be used for vents, or a new packaged steel chimney can be installed by the homeowner.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, the highest temperature ever recorded is 96 degrees and the lowest 62 degrees.

You Can Paint Over Wallpaper If Care Taken

If your fall decorating plans call for changing from wallpaper to paint for a room or a particular wall, it may be possible to avoid the chore of removing the old wallpaper.

In all cases, the old wallpaper must be holding securely to the wall. If the paper is on "tight" and is not printed with aniline dyes, it will take most oil base paints. Do not use latex (water thinned) paints over papers containing water soluble dyes or those printed with metallic patterns, such as gold or aluminum.

The customer services division of Armstrong Paints recommends testing the paint on a small hidden area of the paper first, permitting it to dry thoroughly to see if it will cover completely.

If the wallpaper dyes "bleed" or stain thru the paint on the area tested, it indicates that the wallpaper should first be sealed with a stain sealer before applying the paint.

Paper that is loose or torn should be removed.

This can be done by soaking the paper thoroughly with warm water. When the glue is loose, scrape carefully with a wide putty knife, taking care not to gouge the plaster.

Wash off all remaining traces of glue. Then rinse thoroughly with clear water.

Let the surface dry thoroughly.

Finally, whether painting over wallpaper or a surface from which the paper has been removed, treat it as an unpainted surface, applying a coat of primer to provide a tight seal and a good bond to the finish coat.

For lasting results, use only the best quality paint and carefully follow printed directions on the label.

BACK STOP

If you want to hide an unattractive back yard from street view, why not install a screen or sectional fence? You can build these sectionals inexpensively out of western red cedar or Douglas fir.

The Little Doll You Love Will Love Either of These Christmas Doll Houses

By BILL MEYERRIECKS

Here's an easy, inexpensive way to provide a delightful Christmas present for your daughter. She can choose either one of two doll house designs offered in this week's Sketchbook design plan. Both are simple enough for the smallest girl to enjoy, well proportioned enough to be "decoratable" and thus hold the interest of an older girl.

The basic, simple technique for building both doll houses is the same. Cut Homasote to shape, strengthen with ½" x ¾" lattic strips, then nail these parts together. The results are startlingly different.

Take the first, the "A"-frame cottage. This neat design has one added attraction — it travels by means of handholds in the roof. Inside (one side of the roof folds down) there is a large living room and a small kitchen. Also, there's a small forecourt.

The other design for a modern-minded miss, the three-room contemporary ranch offers plenty of play fun with living-dining room, kitchen in the center and bedroom at the far end. There's a carport in front, too. This house can grow the most with the girl by adding decorative trims and larger windows as the proud little home maker gets bigger.

Both doll house designs are shown in detail in Sketchbook plan S-135 available for 50 cents thru this newspaper.

Other popular Sketchbook designs on youngster's play toys that can be obtained in the same manner as this one are:

—S-133, the sturdy, digging steam shovel.

—S-114, Moon Jet, Jr.

Felxible Fireplaces Are Easily Installed

NEW YORK (AP) — New steel fireplaces can be installed with the ease and flexibility of light fixtures. They can be hung on a wall, suspended from the ceiling, or stand free, reports "Steel Facts," published by American Iron and Steel Institute. Available in a variety of colors and finishes, some fireplaces can also be painted to match a particular room color or scheme.

Existing chimneys can be used for vents, or a new packaged steel chimney can be installed by the homeowner.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, the highest temperature ever recorded is 96 degrees and the lowest 62 degrees.

Electrical Wiring Inadequate in 85 Per Cent of Homes

Inadequate electrical wiring continues to plague the large majority of home owners thruout the country. The latest estimate is that about 85 per cent of all private houses have wiring systems insufficient to carry the daily burdens placed upon them.

Wiring that does not meet the needs of modern living, with its almost endless list of electrical appliances, produces a number of results. It causes light to go dim momentarily when a major appliance is turned on, it shrinks television pictures, it prevents electrical equipment from operating at peak efficiency and it causes frequent blown fuses and tripped circuit breakers. The blowing of fuses is the most serious result, because all too often fuse replacements are made carelessly. Instead of using a fuse of the proper amperage, a larger-sized fuse is installed. Since a fuse is made to fail when an overload is placed upon the circuit, the proitection is lost if the proper fuse is not used. That's one of the causes of burned wires and resultant tragic and costly fires.

Even if the safety factor were not involved, inadequate wiring costs you money. Voltage drops mean that heating appliances take longer to get hot, which in turns means that you use and pay for more electricity. A motor that burns out long before its normal life might have lasted indefinitely but for the extra work it had to perform to keep the refrigerator or other heavy appliance operating day in and day out even when the voltage was too low.

In some cases, of course, old wiring systems won't even handle certain types of appliances, let alone handle them poorly. Many home owners now have adequate wiring simply because it became a necessity when they installed air conditioning units. But generally, most persons attempt to struggle along with the old facilities, some of which were built into their homes 20 or 30 years ago.

If and when you get around to updating your home's wiring system, be sure you see that enough outlets are installed. This will eliminate the unsightly and unsafe jumble of plugs often seen in a single outlet. And don't neglect weatherproof outlets for outdoor use to take the place of many extension cords now strung from inside the house to outside locations. Extension cords are meant for temporary use, not as permanent installations.

Though the female brown bat of the Eastern United States weighs only six or seven grams, it gives birth to a two-gram baby.

You Can Paint Over Wallpaper If Care Taken

If your fall decorating plans call for changing from wallpaper to paint for a room or a particular wall, it may be possible to avoid the chore of removing the old wallpaper.

In all cases, the old wallpaper must be holding securely to the wall. If the paper is on "tight" and is not printed with aniline dyes, it will take most oil base paints. Do not use latex (water thinned) paints over papers containing water soluble dyes or those printed with metallic patterns, such as gold or aluminum.

The customer services division of Armstrong Paints recommends testing the paint on a small hidden area of the paper first, permitting it to dry thoroughly to see if it will cover completely.

If the wallpaper dyes "bleed" or stain thru the paint on the area tested, it indicates that the wallpaper should first be sealed with a stain sealer before applying the paint.

Paper that is loose or torn should be removed.

This can be done by soaking the paper thoroughly with warm water. When the glue is loose, scrape carefully with a wide putty knife, taking care not to gouge the plaster.

Wash off all remaining traces of glue. Then rinse thoroughly with clear water.

Let the surface dry thoroughly.

Finally, whether painting over wallpaper or a surface from which the paper has been removed, treat it as an unpainted surface, applying a coat of primer to provide a tight seal and a good bond to the finish coat.

For lasting results, use only the best quality paint and carefully follow printed directions on the label.

BACK STOP

If you want to hide an unattractive back yard from street view, why not install a screen or sectional fence? You can build these sectionals inexpensively out of western red cedar or Douglas fir.

CHURCHES OF THE PIKES PEAK REGION

CE Clinic Set, Jessups Direct

Central Christian Church, 2002 W. Pikes Peak, will host the nondenominational Christian Education Clinic from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jessup, representatives from the Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, will direct the clinic.

Jessup has had a wide experience in the CE field and was president of the San Jose Bible College of San Jose, Calif., for more than 22 years. Mrs. Jessup was also on the college staff, teaching CE and voice.

Since leaving the college staff in 1959, they have toured the nation conducting clinics of two or three days duration, purposing to help Sunday school teachers to teach in a more effective manner.

The clinic at Central Christian Church will begin with a pot luck dinner at 6 p.m. tonight.

The public is invited and delegations from Christian Churches of Rocky Ford and Elbert area are expected to attend the clinic.

Trinity Baptist Church To Host Rev. Williams

Trinity Baptist Church will hold revival services at 7:30 p.m. nightly this week with Rev. F. K. Williams of Sweetwater, Tex.

Rev. L. W. Harvey, pastor of the church at 832 S. Nevada Ave., invites the public to the meetings Monday thru Friday.

"GEORGIA'S OFFICIAL AMBASSADORS OF GOOD WILL," the Statesmen, will appear locally Thursday, Nov. 14. The group has achieved nationwide recognition as versatile singers of spiritual and gospel songs. Hovie Lister (center), manager, pianist and MC of the group, is known as a teacher, singer and Baptist minister. Other group members are left to right: Jake Hess, lead singer from Haleyville, Ala.; Roland (Rosie) Rozell, top tener from Tulsa, Okla.; Doy Ott, arranger and pianist, also from Okla.; "Big Chief" Jim Wetherington, bass from Ty Ty, Ga. If the success of the quartet's appearance warrants future visits, Colorado Springs will be added to the planned circuit and the group will appear here every other month.

Chap. Bruce Will Speak To Young Adults

Chap. Lt. Col. Leonard Bruce of the Air Defense Command will be the guest speaker Sunday at a meeting of the Young Adults at First Lutheran Church, 1515 N. Cascade Ave.

Chap. Bruce will talk on "The Racial Issue: What the Church Has Done and What It Could Do." The program starts at 12:30 p.m. and is open to all single young adults of post high school age.

Church facilities, present and future, will be the subject of three conferences next week involving men of First Lutheran Church.

Monday at 7:30 p.m., 50 men who serve on the church's ushering staff will meet for a briefing directed by Lawrence Sokol of the worship committee. Problems of space will be considered and the ushers will review plans for more effective use of present facilities.

The other two meetings will involve plans for the future. The Rev. Christian J. Thearle, pastor, and Robert Tyce, intern, will attend two seminars in Denver on church architecture and worship.

Wednesday evening, there will be an orientation for new members who will join the church on the following Sunday. Present for the 8:30 program with Pastor Thearle will be Mrs. Leonard Martens representing the Lutheran Church Women, Lt. Col. (Ret.) E. D. Curry of the stewardship committee and Dr. Ehlert, representing the council.

Senior Luther Leaguers will travel together to the Air Force Academy today for the football game against UCLA.

Revival Services Announced

First Southern Baptist Church 1409 Palmer Park Blvd., will begin revival services Sunday which wil continue thru Sunday, Nov. 17.

Rev. Newman McLary, associate director of the Division of Evangelism of the Home Mission Board, will be the evangelist; Ralph Gibson will lead the music.

The services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday. Regular services will be held in addition to the revival meetings.

The church invites everyone to participate.

Rev. McLarry, a graduate of Texas A & M College and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas, did additional study at Southern Methodist and Baylor Universities, and pastored in Texas, Georgia, and Arkansas, prior to his present position.

Rev. McLarry, a decorated hero of World War II, received 14 decorations, awards, and citations, including the Silver Star for gallantry beyond the call of duty, and the Purple Heart with clusters for wounds received in front-line duty.

Mr. Gibson, local minister of music and youth, is a graduate of Baylor University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has previously served as minister of music and youth in Texas, and recently assistant director of the ARADCOM Choral Group.

Dr. Lehmberg To Conduct Singing Service

National Fellowship of Methodist Musicians has designated Sunday as a "Great Day of Methodist Singing."

Dr. Ben F. Lehmberg, pastor of First Methodist Church, has planned a special service of worship with almost every part of it in song.

The call to worship and the call to prayer will be sung by the choir; the Congregational Prayer, sung by the congregation. The morning scripture lesson and the morning prayer will also be sung rather than spoken.

Offertory music will be presented by Halene Phelps at the organ at 7:30 a.m.; vocalist, Arline MaKinney, at 8:25 and 10:55 a.m.

Dr. Lehmberg and the Rev. Don Bleyle begin a series of five Sunday night messages dealing with the home and the relationship of parents and teenagers. The first of the series, Sunday night at 7:30, wil feature Dr. Lehmberg speaking on "How to Enjoy Your Teenagers" and Mr. Beyle speaking on "How to Enjoy Your Parents."

Others to follow in this series are "Parents Look at Dating, Courtship, and Marriage" and "Teen-Agers Look at Dating, Courtship, and Marriage;" "Parents Consider Standards" and "Teen-Agers Consider Standards;" and as the final one in the series, Dec. 8, "Parents Look At Religion" and "Teenagers Look at Religion."

Altar prayer time will be observed each Sunday night during the series.

NIGHTMARE TUMBLE

AVELLINO, Italy (A P) — Farmer Carlo Petrone went to sleep in his upstairs bedroom and awoke with a crash in the basement.

The bedroom floor collapsed, plunging Petrone and his bed into the kitchen below. The kitchen floor gave way, and bed and Petrone crashed through into the cellar.

He came off with cuts and bruises.

Bestowal to Be Commemorated Second Time

The Diocese of Colorado will commemorate for the second time, the Bestowal of the American Episcopate, one of the great historical events of the Episcopal Church in this country.

On November 14, 1784, Samuel Seabury was consecrated the first American Bishop.

Episcopalians of the state will join in thanksgiving for the heritage of their church in a service at St. John's Cathedral.

The Right Reverend Joseph S. Minnis, D. D., Bishop of Colorado will be the preacher following an 8 p.m. service of Evensong.

Representative church dignitaries from other groups have been invited to participate. They will join in the procession with Episcopal clergy, layreaders and massed choirs from an estimated 100 Episcopal churches and missions of the state.

The chairman of arrangements is the Rev. Edward F. Ostertag, chairman of Adult Division, of the Department of Christian Education, and rector of St. Luke's Church, Ft. Collins.

Area Industry To Be Discussed

Dr. Donald M. Green, specialist in industrial medicine, will discuss aspects of industry in the area at the Adult Discussion Group of the All Souls Unitarian Church at 9:45 a.m. Sunday.

"Man and His Environment" is the basis for the current series of talks.

Dr. Green says that industry in the area faces fewer health problems that most parts of the country because most of the industry here is clean and require controlled humidity.

Fifth and sixth graders in Mrs. Clifton B. Kruse's class will go to the Fine Arts Center Museum in Denver as a part of their study of ancient Egypt.

Members and friends of the church were guests of the board of trustees at a fellowship dinner held Friday night at the YWCA Cafeteria when the church budget was discussed.

Tickets may be purchased Sunday morning at a special table in the narthex, in the church school classes, or in the church office; $1.75 for adults, $1.25 for children. Sunday afternoon is the deadline for buying tickets.

Key church members in charge of the celebration will be Dr. Milton K. Snyder, chairman; Miss Estalla Rogers, Miss Betty Suvanto, Dr. C. W. McClellan, Marion Mize, William Marker, Mrs. Joe Rose, Mrs. Paul Pumphrey.

AFA Band Plans Public Concert

"Musical prose" will be the feature of the Air Force Academy Band's public concert at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Arnold Hall Theater.

Band commander-conductor Capt. Arnald Gabriel has picked for the theme of the second concert of the fall-winter season, "The Sound of Music."

Guest conductor for a portion of the concert will be Lt. Col. Paul P. Weckesser, chief of Air Force Bands, Washington, D. C.

Music on the program will range from Tchaikowski to Rodgers and Hammerstein. Col. Weckesser will conduct selections from the Rodgers-Hammerstein Broadway hit, Sound of Music, "The Chocolate Soldier," "Onward Ye Peoples."

Also to be heard are selections from "The West Side Story," "1812 Overture," and "Armed Forces Medley," Capt. Gabriel will conduct.

Missionary Will Speak Sunday At Free Church

Rev. Richard Bennett, missionary in Hong Kong, will be the guest speaker at the 7 p.m. Sunday evening Worship Service of the First Evangelical Free Church, 3006 W. Fontanero St. in the Westmoor Park subdivision.

He will explain his work in the Publications Department of the mission which printed and distributed literature to the Chinese people.

A special observance at 9:45 a.m. will be the annual Sunday School Improvement Days, known as SID on the theme "Around the World and Across the Sea in '63." The story of Christian Education on all mission fields is being studied during this six-Sunday emphasis. The Sunday school is also cooperating in the nationwide Citizen for Sunday School Program, sponsored by the National Sunday School Assn.

Pastor John N. Hedlund will deliver the sermon at the 11 a.m. worship service, continuing the messages from the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians.

School Observes Education Week

National Catholic Education Association, Pauline Memorial School at 1601 Mesa Ave., Broadmoor, will hold open house from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

This project, in observance of National Education Week, will be based on the theme "Come and See For Yourself."

The Parade of Books, thru the courtesy of Levine's Book Store, will be held from 7:30 a.m. thru 5 p.m. Sunday, and from 10 a.m. thru 3 p.m. Monday. The Pauline Library Committee has selected books for all ages for holiday gift giving and reading pleasure, along with other gifts and gift wrappings. Mailing services wil also be provided. Chap. Labinger To Conduct Adult Education

Chap. Marvin Labinger has announced his full program of Adult Jewish Education Seminars, with group study sessions meeting once each week from Nov. 13 to May 7.

The classes are open to everyone and will meet in Rabbi Lahinger's home-study at the Air Force Academy, quarters 6456-A.

The four courses are outlined as follows:

Intermediate Hebrew will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The only pre-requisite is a reading knowledge of Hebrew.

Advanced Bible will meet at 8 p.m. each Wednesday. No prerequisite is necessary. The course will approach the text of Genesis from a critical point of view.

Readings from the Jewish Classics will meet at 7 p.m. each Thursday beginning Nov. 14. No pre-requisites are necessary. This course will discuss and read selections from some of the great works of Jewish literature.

The Jewish Festivals will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday starting Nov. 14. There are no prerequisites necessary as this class will discuss the cycle of Jewish Holy Days including the Sabbeth, the High Holy Days, the Three Pilgrim Festivals, the minor festivals and the fast days.

Stewardship Day Set for Sunday

Stewardship Sunday will be observed in the First Presbyterian Church tomorrow with members being asked to sign a 'Declaration of Intent" regarding their giving for 1964.

Congregationists unable to bring their cards to one of the morning services will be called on in the afternoon by the campaigners, a group of men of the church who have volunteered for the service.

The church is adopting a unified budget next year and is asking members to make a single pledge to cover the expenses of all phases of church work.

Dr. Howard E. Hansen, pastor, will preach at the 8:15 and 10:55 morning worship services. Music will be by the Chancel Choir at the first service and the Sanctuary Choir at the second.

Rev. Spencer W. Marsh, Jr., associate pastor in charge of youth work, will preach at the 7 p.m. service. He will be assisted in the pulpit by Terri Lundquist and Scott Brown.

Bagpipes to Herald Veteran's Day Service

Chap. Bruce Will Speak To Young Adults

Chap. Lt. Col. Leonard Bruce of the Air Defense Command will be the guest speaker Sunday at a meeting of the Young Adults at First Lutheran Church, 1515 N. Cascade Ave.

Chap. Bruce will talk on "The Racial Issue: What the Church Has Done and What It Could Do." The program starts at 12:30 p.m. and is open to all single young adults of post high school age.

Church facilities, present and future, will be the subject of three conferences next week involving men of First Lutheran Church.

Monday at 7:30 p.m., 50 men who serve on the church's ushering staff will meet for a briefing directed by Lawrence Sokol of the worship committee. Problems of space will be considered and the ushers will review plans for more effective use of present facilities.

The other two meetings will involve plans for the future. The Rev. Christian J. Thearle, pastor, and Robert Tyce, intern, will attend two seminars in Denver on church architecture and worship.

Wednesday evening, there will be an orientation for new members who will join the church on the following Sunday. Present for the 8:30 program with Pastor Thearle will be Mrs. Leonard Martens representing the Lutheran Church Women, Lt. Col. (Ret.) E. D. Curry of the stewardship committee and Dr. Ehlert, representing the council.

Senior Luther Leaguers will travel together to the Air Force Academy today for the football game against UCLA.

Bestowal to Be Commemorated Second Time

The Diocese of Colorado will commemorate for the second time, the Bestowal of the American Episcopate, one of the great historical events of the Episcopal Church in this country.

On November 14, 1784, Samuel Seabury was consecrated the first American Bishop.

Episcopalians of the state will join in thanksgiving for the heritage of their church in a service at St. John's Cathedral.

The Right Reverend Joseph S. Minnis, D. D., Bishop of Colorado will be the preacher following an 8 p.m. service of Evensong.

Representative church dignitaries from other groups have been invited to participate. They will join in the procession with Episcopal clergy, layreaders and massed choirs from an estimated 100 Episcopal churches and missions of the state.

The chairman of arrangements is the Rev. Edward F. Ostertag, chairman of Adult Division, of the Department of Christian Education, and rector of St. Luke's Church, Ft. Collins.

Area Industry To Be Discussed

Dr. Donald M. Green, specialist in industrial medicine, will discuss aspects of industry in the area at the Adult Discussion Group of the All Souls Unitarian Church at 9:45 a.m. Sunday.

"Man and His Environment" is the basis for the current series of talks.

Dr. Green says that industry in the area faces fewer health problems that most parts of the country because most of the industry here is clean and require controlled humidity.

Fifth and sixth graders in Mrs. Clifton B. Kruse's class will go to the Fine Arts Center Museum in Denver as a part of their study of ancient Egypt.

Members and friends of the church were guests of the board of trustees at a fellowship dinner held Friday night at the YWCA Cafeteria when the church budget was discussed.

Revival Services Announced

First Southern Baptist Church 1409 Palmer Park Blvd., will begin revival services Sunday which wil continue thru Sunday, Nov. 17.

Rev. Newman McLary, associate director of the Division of Evangelism of the Home Mission Board, will be the evangelist; Ralph Gibson will lead the music.

The services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday. Regular services will be held in addition to the revival meetings.

The church invites everyone to participate.

Rev. McLarry, a graduate of Texas A & M College and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas, did additional study at Southern Methodist and Baylor Universities, and pastored in Texas, Georgia, and Arkansas, prior to his present position.

Rev. McLarry, a decorated hero of World War II, received 14 decorations, awards, and citations, including the Silver Star for gallantry beyond the call of duty, and the Purple Heart with clusters for wounds received in front-line duty.

Mr. Gibson, local minister of music and youth, is a graduate of Baylor University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has previously served as minister of music and youth in Texas, and recently assistant director of the ARADCOM Choral Group.

First Christian To Celebrate 85th Birthday

First Christian Church, celebrating its 85th birthday Wednesday, plans to have dinner in the banquet hall of the First Methodist church at 6:30 p.m.

The most recent member of the congregation and the oldest member of service will cut the birthday cake. Col. Broun H. Mayall will speak. Dr. Lawrence W. Bash, minister of the Country Club Christian Church of Kansas City, will speak at the banquet.

Marion Mize and William Marker will display collected historical items concerning the church. Mrs. Joe Rose, and Mrs. Milton Snyder, assisted by CWF groups are planning the table decorations.

Tickets may be purchased Sunday morning at a special table in the narthex, in the church school classes, or in the church office; $1.75 for adults, $1.25 for children. Sunday afternoon is the deadline for buying tickets.

Key church members in charge of the celebration will be Dr. Milton K. Snyder, chairman; Miss Estalla Rogers, Miss Betty Suvanto, Dr. C. W. McClellan, Marion Mize, William Marker, Mrs. Joe Rose, Mrs. Paul Pumphrey.

AFA Band Plans Public Concert

"Musical prose" will be the feature of the Air Force Academy Band's public concert at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Arnold Hall Theater.

Band commander-conductor Capt. Arnald Gabriel has picked for the theme of the second concert of the fall-winter season, "The Sound of Music."

Guest conductor for a portion of the concert will be Lt. Col. Paul P. Weckesser, chief of Air Force Bands, Washington, D. C.

Music on the program will range from Tchaikowski to Rodgers and Hammerstein. Col. Weckesser will conduct selections from the Rodgers-Hammerstein Broadway hit, Sound of Music, "The Chocolate Soldier," "Onward Ye Peoples."

Also to be heard are selections from "The West Side Story," "1812 Overture," and "Armed Forces Medley," Capt. Gabriel will conduct.

Dr. Lehmberg To Conduct Singing Service

National Fellowship of Methodist Musicians has designated Sunday as a "Great Day of Methodist Singing."

Dr. Ben F. Lehmberg, pastor of First Methodist Church, has planned a special service of worship with almost every part of it in song.

The call to worship and the call to prayer will be sung by the choir; the Congregational Prayer, sung by the congregation. The morning scripture lesson and the morning prayer will also be sung rather than spoken.

Offertory music will be presented by Halene Phelps at the organ at 7:30 a.m.; vocalist, Arline MaKinney, at 8:25 and 10:55 a.m.

Dr. Lehmberg and the Rev. Don Bleyle begin a series of five Sunday night messages dealing with the home and the relationship of parents and teenagers. The first of the series, Sunday night at 7:30, wil feature Dr. Lehmberg speaking on "How to Enjoy Your Teenagers" and Mr. Beyle speaking on "How to Enjoy Your Parents."

Others to follow in this series are "Parents Look at Dating, Courtship, and Marriage" and "Teen-Agers Look at Dating, Courtship, and Marriage;" "Parents Consider Standards" and "Teen-Agers Consider Standards;" and as the final one in the series, Dec. 8, "Parents Look At Religion" and "Teenagers Look at Religion."

Altar prayer time will be observed each Sunday night during the series.

Missionary Will Speak Sunday At Free Church

Rev. Richard Bennett, missionary in Hong Kong, will be the guest speaker at the 7 p.m. Sunday evening Worship Service of the First Evangelical Free Church, 3006 W. Fontanero St. in the Westmoor Park subdivision.

He will explain his work in the Publications Department of the mission which printed and distributed literature to the Chinese people.

A special observance at 9:45 a.m. will be the annual Sunday School Improvement Days, known as SID on the theme "Around the World and Across the Sea in '63." The story of Christian Education on all mission fields is being studied during this six-Sunday emphasis. The Sunday school is also cooperating in the nationwide Citizen for Sunday School Program, sponsored by the National Sunday School Assn.

Pastor John N. Hedlund will deliver the sermon at the 11 a.m. worship service, continuing the messages from the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians.

School Observes Education Week

National Catholic Education Association, Pauline Memorial School at 1601 Mesa Ave., Broadmoor, will hold open house from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

This project, in observance of National Education Week, will be based on the theme "Come and See For Yourself."

The Parade of Books, thru the courtesy of Levine's Book Store, will be held from 7:30 a.m. thru 5 p.m. Sunday, and from 10 a.m. thru 3 p.m. Monday. The Pauline Library Committee has selected books for all ages for holiday gift giving and reading pleasure, along with other gifts and gift wrappings. Mailing services wil also be provided. Proceeds will go to the school library fund.

The public is invited to attend both events.

Chap. Labinger To Conduct Adult Education

Chap. Marvin Labinger has announced his full program of Adult Jewish Education Seminars, with group study sessions meeting once each week from Nov. 13 to May 7.

The classes are open to everyone and will meet in Rabbi Lahinger's home-study at the Air Force Academy, quarters 6456-A.

The four courses are outlined as follows:

Intermediate Hebrew will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The only pre-requisite is a reading knowledge of Hebrew.

Advanced Bible will meet at 8 p.m. each Wednesday. No pre-requisite is necessary. The course will approach the text of Genesis from a critical point of view.

Readings from the Jewish Classics will meet at 7 p.m. each Thursday beginning Nov. 14. No pre-requisites are necessary. This course will discuss and read selections from some of the great works of Jewish literature.

The Jewish Festivals will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday starting Nov. 14. There are no pre-requisites necessary as this class will discuss the cycle of Jewish Holy Days including the Sabbeth, the High Holy Days, the Three Pilgrim Festivals, the minor festivals and the fast days.

Stewardship Day Set for Sunday

Stewardship Sunday will be observed in the First Presbyterian Church tomorrow with members being asked to sign a 'Declaration of Intent" regarding their giving for 1964.

Congregationists unable to bring their cards to one of the morning services will be called on in the afternoon by the campaigners, a group of men of the church who have volunteered for the service.

The church is adopting a unified budget next year and is asking members to make a single pledge to cover the expenses of all phases of church work.

Dr. Howard E. Hansen, pastor, will preach at the 8:15 and 10:55 morning worship services. Music will be by the Chancel Choir at the first service and the Sanctuary Choir at the second.

Rev. Spencer W. Marsh, Jr., associate pastor in charge of youth work, will preach at the 7 p.m. service. He will be assisted in the pulpit by Terri Lundquist and Scott Brown.

BEFORE

You In The Church
The Church In You

— form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.

Whether of wood, or gold, or other material, The Cross is symbolic of our highest living. It tells of both sacrifice and life at its best. It is a symbol of God, a symbol of Christ, a symbol of the Christian church you attend every week. What would the church be without The Cross! Where might your steps lead were you to forget the Crucifixion! What might happen to your family and to the families of all your friends were it not for the influence of the allumined Cross in their lives. If you would have tomorrow remember you; if you would have your golden years filled with peace and hope...then Keep The Cross Before You Every Day.

We Need GREATER CHURCHES and a GREATER FAITH

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

© 1963 by Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: I am a Christian instructor of adults. Can you tell me how I can become a better teacher and Christian? —V. Y.

ANSWER: Have you tried the New Testament? I have about every commentary in my library in the English language and I often get some help from them. But I find my greatest help and inspiration in the Bible itself. I'm afraid that too many teachers depend too much on the thoughts and ideas of others. It is amazing how the Scriptures unfold themselves when we study and meditate upon them. One of the secrets of David's greatness was in the words: "In thy law do I meditate day and night." Job said: "Thy Word is more than my necessary food."

I suggest that you read your commentaries, but meditate on the Scriptural texts of the lesson. Read it prayerfully, and I believe that you will find that God will speak to you through its pages. Thoughts will come to you, and they will be relevant to today's problems. And by so doing, your own soul will be strengthened. By the same token, you will become a stronger and more effective teacher of the Word.

QUESTION: After graduating from college a friend of mine has lost his faith. Does not this mean that he was not really a Christian? —F. J.

ANSWER: I am not his judge. Only God can tell whether he was a Christian before he entered this period of doubt. It is not at all uncommon for young people to reexamine their faith, and to go through period of doubt. Even Thomas, one of Christ's disciples, experienced a time of doubting, but he came back to be one of the staunchest of the disciples.

I have met men in education who asked questions which seemed to be intended to shake one's faith, but actually, they might have been asking for their own information, or in an attempt to test the faith of believers. I am quite sure that some young people go to college with a nominal, rather than an experimental, Christian faith. If their beliefs are not rooted in the heart, and if they have not truly yielded themselves to Christ, it is easy for them to have their superficial faith brushed away by some professor who may, himself, be seeking some basis for belief in God and in Chrit.

I could name several outstanding Christian leaders who went through periods of doubt regarding their faith, but they emerged triumphant. We do not have a faith that cannot stand close scrutiny.

QUESTION: My husband is still depressed at times although he is a new Christian. Shouldn't these moods have been overcome when he became a Christian? —D. P.

ANSWER: Becoming a Christian doesn't always alter the entire personality. It doesn't make your hair curly, or give you a new complexion. Its effect is principally upon the heart, and of course it does affect our attitudes too. Your husband's depression may be related to some physical weakness. Anemia, for instance, sometimes causes depression, and there are other diseases which incline people toward depression. If this persists I would urge him to have a complete physical examination.

You say he is a new Christian. Just as you cannot expect a child to have all the traits of a grown-up, you mustn't expect your husband to become spiritually mature overnight. Christianity is life, and life grows and develops. As a more mature Christian you can help him to endure these "growing pains," and to grow up in the Christian life. Read the Word with him, pray with him, and exercise patience. I'm sure God will give him the grace to overcome his tendency toward depression, and that soon he can say: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

QUESTION: I am a Christian instructor of adults. Can you tell me how I can become a better teacher and Christian? —V. Y.

ANSWER: Have you tried the New Testament? I have about every commentary in my library in the English language and I often get some help from them. But I find my greatest help and inspiration in the Bible itself. I'm afraid that too many teachers depend too much on the thoughts and ideas of others. It is amazing how the Scriptures unfold themselves when we study and meditate upon them. One of the secrets of David's greatness was in the words: "In thy law do I meditate day and night." Job said: "Thy Word is more than my necessary food."

I suggest that you read your commentaries, but meditate on the Scriptural texts of the lesson. Read it prayerfully, and I believe that you will find that God will speak to you through its pages. Thoughts will come to you, and they will be relevant to today's problems. And by so doing, your own soul will be strengthened. By the same token, you will become a stronger and more effective teacher of the Word.

QUESTION: After graduating from college a friend of mine has lost his faith. Does not this mean that he was not really a Christian? —F. J.

ANSWER: I am not his judge. Only God can tell whether he was a Christian before he entered this period of doubt. It is not at all uncommon for young people to reexamine their faith, and to go through period of doubt. Even Thomas, one of Christ's disciples, experienced a time of doubting, but he came back to be one of the staunchest of the disciples.

I have met men in education who asked questions which seemed to be intended to shake one's faith, but actually, they might have been asking for their own information, or in an attempt to test the faith of believers. I am quite sure that some young people go to college with a nominal, rather than an experimental, Christian faith. If their beliefs are not rooted in the heart, and if they have not truly yielded themselves to Christ, it is easy for them to have their superficial faith brushed away by some professor who may, himself, be seeking some basis for belief in God and in Chrit.

I could name several outstanding Christian leaders who went through periods of doubt regarding their faith, but they emerged triumphant. We do not have a faith that cannot stand close scrutiny.

QUESTION: My husband is still depressed at times although he is a new Christian. Shoudn't these moods have been overcome when he became a Christian? —D. P.

ANSWER: Becoming a Christian doesn't always alter the entire personality. It doesn't make your hair curly, or give you a new complexion. Its effect is principally upon the heart, and of course it does affect our attitudes too. Your husband's depression may be related to some physical weakness. Anemia, for instance, sometimes causes depression, and there are other diseases which incline people toward depression. If this persists I would urge him to have a complete physical examination.

You say he is a new Christian. Just as you cannot expect a child to have all the traits of a grown-up, you mustn't expect your husband to become spiritually mature overnight. Christianity is life, and life grows and develops. As a more mature Christian you can help him to endure these "growing pains," and to grow up in the Christian life. Read the Word with him, pray with him, and exercise patience. I'm sure God will give him the grace to overcome his tendency toward depression, and that soon he can say: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

Vietnamese Tell Stories of Torture, Blinding

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Vietnamese freed from concentration camps set up by Ngo Dinh Diem's regime told Friday of torture on naked bodies, of blinding, and of mutilation.

Scores of students of both sexes declared that inquisitors forced them to drink soapy water until their intestines had poured blood.

A high scohol youth, Nguyen Van, was reported beaten to death.

Some prisoners were blinded by torture seeking to force out information about Buddhist and student movements against Diem and his adviser-brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu who headed the secret police.

Fingers were chopped off others, the Vietnamese said.

Miss Hoang Thi Dong, 29, a pretty typist, told with an embarrassed smile of her ordeal in the custody of the secret police last Friday, only a few hours before the outbreak of the coup that destroyed Diem.

She said she was taken from a cell-like room where she was confined with six other girls and six men.

"They stripped me, tied me over a bench, choked me with water and a towel and beat me until I was unconscious," she said.

A Buddhist employed at the British Embassy, Miss Dong said that was her treatment when she denied charges that she was a Communist and that she had served as a courier for Buddhist documents smuggled to foreign correspondents, the United Nations fact-finding mission and the U.S. Information Agency.

She said the guards let her dress and rejoin other prisoners at the camp, in a wood about 12 miles outside Saigon, only after warning her she would be tortured again in the afternoon.

But the sound of guns and warplanes intervened.

The government announced the staet of martial law imposed with the coup has ended throughout South Viet Nam. A curfew order and censorship of news dispatches were lifted on Thursday.

Reliable sources said Tran Van Khiem, a younger brother of the widowed former first lady Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu, is under arrest in Saigon. He had only recently accepted a high political security post in Diem's administration.

A grenade exploded at the foot of a Saigon bridge near an army checkpoint Thursday night and slightly injured two soldiers. It was the fourth grenade incident in the capital since Diem's death Saturday. All are believed to have been thrown by Communist agents.

Innocent Plea Entered in Assault Case

The defendant is represented by attorney Gerald Tolley. The presiding judge was G. Russell Miller and the deputy district attorney Herman A. Ratner.

Lawyers Vote No Confidence In JFK Appointee

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—A majority of Wisconsin attorneys, responding to an unprecedented poll conducted by the state bar association, has registered the opinion that Wisconsin's Democratic national committeeman is unqualified to be a federal judge.

President Kennedy named David Rabinovitz, a labor attorney from Sheboygan, in eastern Wisconsin, to be U.S. district judge for the western district, to succeed the late Patrick T. Stone. The Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on confirmation was continued after a spokesman for the American Bar Association registered opposition.

The state bar, which undertook to poll Wisconsin's 5,055 attorney members, announced Friday that 3,530 responded, and that of these 2,040 said they did not consider Rabinovitz qualified, 793 gave the opinion that he was qualified and 697 expressed no opinion.

Some Democratic leaders bitterly contested the poll, forced a special meeting of the integrated group's board of governors to reconsider it, and when the action was affirmed, obtained a State Supreme Court order temporarily restraining tabulation. However, the high court vacated the injunction Thursday on the bar's plea that the poll was in the public interest.

The results are being forwarded to Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Rabinovitz rose to prominence as counsel for the United Auto Workers in the union's bitter, prolonged strike against the Kohler Co. in the 1950s. He was an early Kennedy supporter in Wisconsin.

GOP Planning New Organization In South for '64

By DON McKEE

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Republican leaders hammered out plans Friday for organizing at the precinct level throughout the South as the way to win Dixie in the 1964 presidential election.

"We are building a grass organization that will win this time," said Raymond V. Humphreys of Washington, a national GOP strategist who has spent most of the year in the South.

Opening two days of strategy talks, Republican leaders from 13 states exuded confidence in this prelude to an all-out push for a bloc of electoral votes which they hope will be the springboard to the White House.

Obviously, top echelon Republicans consider Dixie ripe for plucking because of widespraad discontent with Democratic President Kennedy's policies on civil rights, spending and the cold war. The big hitch, of course, is the question of whether Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., very popular in the South, will get the GOP presidential nomination.

Humphreys is director of education and training for the Republican National Committee. He said in an interview that precinct organization in the South is moving along rapidly with traditionally Democratic Mississippi and Alabama both organized.

"Mississippi has a two-party system," said Humphreys. He helped in a big push that gave a Republican candidate for governor 38 per cent of the vote Tuesday.

"It was organization that was responsible for this almost entirely," he said.

idential nomination, beginning with a determined campaign to win New Hampshire's first-in-the nation presidential primary next March 10.

At the same time he promised that no matter who the Republican nominee is, he will have Rockefeller support.

"Whoever is selected by the convention in San Francisco will have my wholehearted support," Rockefeller told the group. It was one of his strongest statements thus far in this regard.

In the past he has carefully side-stepped questions concerning support for Sen. Barry Goldwater, whose views differ considerably from those held by the governor. Until now he has always said he would support a candidate that would be nominated in line with a platform adopted by the GOP.

Rockefeller again repeated his challenge to the Arizona senator who remains an unannounced candidate. He asked Goldwater to meet him in public debate to discuss a wide variety of basic issues including the income tax, foreign aid, the Communist threat and right-to-work laws.

NLRB Orders News Agency To Rehire Man

company to offer the man his job back.

Representatives of the union said that the company has refused to bargain with them despite the fact they represent a majority of the company's eligible employes.

They charged that the company ignored a registered written request from the union April 3 for a bargaining session. The charge stated that the written request informed the company of the majority representation and offered to submit proof of the claim. The union said the company never answered the letter.

The union further charged that the company threatened employes with repraisals if they persisted in working to get a union.

The union also charged that after the company had received notification of the union's authorization to act as representative of the men, it "changed existing terms and conditions of employment in three specified respects because of the union activities of its employes."

One of the so-called existing terms which were changed was the providing of beer to employes on Friday after work, the union claimed.

"(Clifton B.) Thompson ceased buying beer for employes after work on Fridays. . ." the union charged. Thompson is owner of the company.

". . .The record discloses that for six or seven years Thompson had a practice of bringing two or three six packs of beer to the plant after work on Fridays and that all the employes would enjoy a libation or two," Bennett said in his report on the hearing.

On the occasions when Thompson did not provide the beer, the company's bookkeeper did or "the men purchased their own," testimony revealed.

Thompson said he discontinued the practice after the men's wives began calling up and protesting that their husbands went on drinking after they left work and didn't come home on time, the report said.

Bennett said that he felt this was not an existing term of employment and disallowed the union's claim.

However, he did order the company to cease threatening reprisals for union activity and to set a bargaining date with the union.

JFK Says Aid Keeps Small Wars Under Control

sion of the bill from $4.2 billion to $3,742,000,000.

Kennedy's plea for the foreign aid bill followed a dressing down given to Congress by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Rusk, at a news conference, accused Congress of trying to "legislate foreign policy" through a series of limiting amendments to the aid bill.

Kennedy argued that peace between the East and West might not bring about peace to the "family of man." He referred specifically to recent disputes between the Africans and the Europeans in Angola, between various sections of North Africa and the Arab world, between India and Pakistan, and in areas of Asia, including Indonesia, Malaysia, Cambodia and Viet Nam.

In each of these conflicts Kennedy, said neither party can afford to waste "precious resources" on hostilities.

The President also added quickly, "in almost every case, their continual conflict invites outside intervention and threatens world-wide escalation—yet the major powers are hard put to limit events in these areas."

The Chief Executive said it was a mistake to regard foreign aid as a matter of economic self - interest, although the foreign aid program provides jobs for about 500,000 American workers and finances what Kennedy called "a rising share of our exports and builds new and growing export markets."

Arguing against cuts in the current foreign aid appropriations, Kennedy was highly critical of those who "find it politically convenient to denounce foreign aid with one breath and the Communist menace with another."

He said there should be consistency in approaching foreign aid. He also said he regarded the current program as "one essential instrument in the creation of a better, more peaceful world."

Madame Nhu Denies Having Hidden Wealth

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu spoke out Friday for the first time on the subject of her personal finances, and denied she has funds abroad.

"They are all liars," she told people who say I have a villa and money outside Viet Nam."

The former first lady of South Viet Nam, in seclusion at a private home here since the coup that overthrew the regime headed by her brother-in-law and husband and cost their lives as well, spoke to a reporter by telephone.

"All that I have is in Viet Nam—my home at Dalat that I was preparing as a nice place to retire to."

A report from Washington on Thursday quoted a "qualified source close to" the Nhu family as saying she is a clever businesswoman with ample resources in other countries, including a villa on the French Riviera.

"The story that I have property abroad is an invention of that former member of Viet Nam's Embassy in Washington." She said she was referring to Ngo To Dat, former first secretary of the embassy who resigned along with her ambassador father, Tran Van Chuong, last August in protest over treatment of Buddhists by the regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

As to where she will get money to support herself and her four children, Mrs. Nhu replied: "I do not know. I shall see when I talk to my brothers-in-law Ngo Dinh Luyen, former Vietnamese ambassador to Great Britain, and Thuc." The latter is Archbishop Pierre Martin Ngo Dinh Thuc, now caring for her three younger children in Rome. They were flown there Wednesday from Viet Nam where they had been during the coup.

Mrs. Nhu moved out of her hotel suite Wednesday to become a house guest of wealthy businessman Allen Chase and his wife.

With her at the Chase home is her eldest daughter, Le Thuy, 18, and her Vietnamese secretary, Nguyen Thi Tuan, 29, who accompanied on her round-the-world tour when she left Saigon six weeks ago.

The younger children, ages 15, 11 and 4 are expected to join her here early next week.

hicle was westbound on the highway and that the Weeks truck was eastbound.

Ferrero said the huge rig apparently had strayed over into the eastbound lane. Weeks, who was driving, saw the truck in his lane and veered to the left to avoid a collision.

Ferguson apparently swung back onto his side of the highway at the same time and the accident ensued, Ferrero said.

He said the Weeks' truck was knocked off the side of the road. The tractor-trailer rig, which carried a cargo of grain, continued for some 226 feet down the highway before it too ended in a ditch.

The Weeks and Ferguson were thrown from their vehicles by the force of the impact which demolished both trucks.

Assisting Patrolman Ferrero in the investigation were Sgt. Jake Abdenschan and Patrolman Fred Henderson and Al Smith.

The accident happened about 12:10 p.m.

The state patrol said O'Neill was driving north when his car ran off the road, skidded 170 feet, shot 43 feet thru the air and rolled end-over-end for 100 feet. It landed on its wheels 108 feet east of the highway.

O'Neill, whose body was found 65 feet from the wrecked car, apparently fell asleep as he approached a left curve, the patrol said.

for the sale of four million tons of wheat to Russia and her European satellites.

Undersecretary of Commerce Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. said the dealer who obtained the license certified that one-half of the grain will be carried in American ships.

The deal with Hungary was a $7.6-million transaction, including the cost of delivery.

The arrangement between the United States and the Soviet Union provided that the actual price of the wheat and shipping costs would be determined in negotiations between U.S. grain dealers and a Russian grain purchasing team.

There were strong indications that the Russians would work out agreements with the private American grain dealers on the actual price and other terms.

A Commerce Department spokesman said no applications for shipment of wheat to Russia were pending but he said at least one grain dealer already had started negotiations with the Russian representatives.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field)

Portions of southwestern Louisiana, southeastern and south-central Texas remain under a tornado forecast this evening as a Rio Grande Valley low continued to produce showers and thunderstorms in that area.

General rains at one-quarter to one-half inch were recorded in southcentral Texas during the six hours ending at 5 p.m. Friday. Some places reported more than two inches for the preceding 12 hours.

Rain also continued in New England where a three-day-old old storm whirled northward just off the coast. Up to one and one-half inches of additional rain fell Friday afternoon in parts of Massachusetts and Maine with storm totals for the past three days exceeding five inches in some mountain locations of New England.

Moderate rains also fell in western Oregon.

Elsewhere across the nation, fair to partly cloudy skies prevailed. However a few thundershowers developed late today along the Mississippi River, in Wisconsin Iowa and Minnesota.

Maximum temperatures Friday afternoon were near or above normal all over the country. Readings in the 60's and 70's dominated the southern half of the nation and 50's were prevalent thru the northwestern and northeastern states and in the north-central U.S. along the Canadian border.

Some Loot Is Recovered From $1 Million Theft

side markings, was abandoned near the holdup scene.

"Part of the loot has been recovered," it was announced later.

The FBI quickly joined the investigation.

The diamond truck was forced to the curb at one of the city's busiest and most heavily policed commercial areas.

The holdup occurred shortly before 1 p.m. It went off with a minimum of confusion and was heralded when one of the bandits stepped up to the halted diamond truck with a gun in his hand and announced tritely but forcefully: "This is a stickup."

Six men inside the diamond truck were unarmed—a company policy. They were handcuffed and forced into the bandits' panel truck. The robbers then drove the diamond truck three blocks south, looting and abandoning it.

The diamond truck was owned by the AAA jewelers Service. Its driver, Louis Moots of Ridgefield, N.J., had picked up 2,000 envelopes from the firm's office on West 47th Street, center of the nation's diamond trading. Each envelope contained one or more gems deposited with the firm by dealers in the area.

The glittering fortune was being taken downtown to the AAA Nassau Street offices, for subsequent distribution to purchasers.

Only Thursday, Police Commissioner Michael Murphy had complained of a mounting wave of jewel thefts from midtown hotels and residences. He estimated the loot since the first of the year at more than $1 million and urged closer cooperation with his department by gem-bedecked celebrities.

The employes in the diamond truck told detectives the disguise of two of the bandits completely disarmed them — they thought they were being halted by real policemen for a traffic violation.

After the bandits drove off with the diamond truck, the employes scrambled out through the front of the panel truck and summoned police.

the day's gathering the most dramatic meeting of the council since it first assembled here 13 months ago.

Cardinal Frings denounced the Holy Office — the Vatican's guardian of doctrine — as "a source of harm to the faithful and of scandal to those outside the Church."

An Italian-born conservative, Alfredo Cardinal Ottaviani, is secretary of the Holy Office, which grew out of the inquisition. He defended its procedures. Both an administrative agency and a tribunal, the Holy Office handles such questions as heresy and crimes against the Church.

The presentation of the document on Jews was hailed by the American Jewish Committee in New York as "an historic event." The committee's president, A. M. Sonnabend of Boston, said the proposed draft may well augur a new era in Catholic-Jewish relations.

The document stressed the Church's ties with the Jews of the Old Testament. It affirmed that all mankind and not Jews alone were responsible for Christ's death, stated it is unjust to consider Jews cursed by God, and called on priests and teachers of religion "never to present a contrary position," but to promote mutual esteem.

Pope John won wide praise from world Jewish leaders when he ordered stricken from a Good Friday prayer a reference to Jews as "perfidious."

Pope Paul VI was reported to have said the day after his election June 21 as Pope John's successor that he was eager to have the document on Jews completed.

No date was set for the start of discussion on it. It could be before this session ends Dec. 4 or later.

DU Professor Sees Strange Moon Events

DENVER (AP)—A University of Denver science professor says these things might happen to an American space man landing on the moon:

1. Dust deposits may be so loose and thick on the moon's surface a landing vehicle would sink out of sight.
2. Dust particles might be electrostatically charged, possibly causing blindness.
3. Vacuum welding might oc-

Algerian Begins New Hunger Strike

ALGIERS (UPI) — Former Vice Premier Mahomed Boudiaf began a new hunger strike Friday to protest his imprisonment by President Ahmed Ben Bella on charges he plotted against the new regime.

Boudiaf was locked up early in May with Col. Saout Al Arab and Capt. Mohamed Ben Ahmed on charges they plotted against the state.

"The hunger strike will go on indefinitely," Mrs. Boudiaf told newsmen. She said he was held at police headquarters here.

It was the second time Boudiaf has gone on a hunger strike since his imprisonment.

Make-Up Clinic Slated Friday

Miss Jeanne Cochrane, Academy Award winning make-up specialist, will conduct a personalized make-up clinic Friday at the Antler's Hotel.

The clinic will be conducted at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the General Pike Room.

The beauty specialist won her Academy Award for her work on make-up in the "West Side Story." She recently conducted a similar clinic in Honolulu.

Pres. Lloyd E. Worner conferred Thursday with the three "presidents" about some of the problems they probably would face during their day in Cutler Hall. Conferences were scheduled with administrative officers, including Acting Dean Kenneth Curran, and with Vice Pres. W. R. Brossman, and Robert Broughton.

Vietnamese Tell Stories of Torture, Blinding

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Vietnamese freed from concentration camps set up by Ngo Dinh Diem's regime told Friday of torture on naked bodies, of blinding, and of mutilation.

Scores of students of both sexes declared that inquisitors forced them to drink soapy water until their intestines had poured blood.

A high scohol youth, Nguyen Van, was reported beaten to death.

Some prisoners were blinded by torture seeking to force out information about Buddhist and student movements against Diem and his adviser-brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu who headed the secret police.

Fingers were chopped off others, the Vietnamese said.

Miss Hoang Thi Dong, 29, a pretty typist, told with an embarrassed smile of her ordeal in the custody of the secret police last Friday, only a few hours before the outbreak of the coup that destroyed Diem.

She said she was taken from a cell-like room where she was confined with six other girls and six men.

"They stripped me, tied me over a bench, choked me with water and a towel and beat me until I was unconscious," she said.

A Buddhist employed at the British Embassy, Miss Dong said that was her treatment when she denied charges that she was a Communist and that she had served as a courier for Buddhist documents smuggled to foreign correspondents, the United Nations fact-finding mission and the U.S. Information Agency.

She said the guards let her dress and rejoin other prisoners at the camp, in a wood about 12 miles outside Saigon, only after warning her she would be tortured again in the afternoon.

But the sound of guns and warplanes intervened.

The government announced the staet of martial law imposed with the coup has ended throughout South Viet Nam. A curfew order and censorship of news dispatches were lifted on Thursday.

Reliable sources said Tran Van Khiem, a younger brother of the widowed former first lady Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu, is under arrest in Saigon. He had only recently accepted a high political security post in Diem's administration.

A grenade exploded at the foot of a Saigon bridge near an army checkpoint Thursday night and slightly injured two soldiers. It was the fourth grenade incident in the capital since Diem's death Saturday. All are believed to have been thrown by Communist agents.

Innocent Plea Entered in Assault Case

Robert D. Walker pleaded innocent in District Court Friday to assault with a deadly weapon and will be tried Jan. 7.

Walker, 30, of 3024 N. Nevada Ave. is alleged to have attacked Don L. Page with a 22 pistol Nov. 2 at the Rodeo Court.

The defendant is represented by attorney Gerald Tolley. The presiding judge was G. Russell Miller and the deputy district attorney Herman A. Ratner.

Lawyers Vote No Confidence In JFK Appointee

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—A majority of Wisconsin attorneys, responding to an unprecedented poll conducted by the state bar association, has registered the opinion that Wisconsin's Democratic national committeeman is unqualified to be a federal judge.

President Kennedy named David Rabinovitz, a labor attorney from Sheboygan, in eastern Wisconsin, to be U.S. district judge for the western district, to succeed the late Patrick T. Stone. The Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on confirmation was continued after a spokesman for the American Bar Association registered opposition.

The state bar, which undertook to poll Wisconsin's 5,055 attorney members, announced Friday that 3,530 responded, and that of these 2,040 said they did not consider Rabinovitz qualified, 793 gave the opinion that he was qualified and 697 expressed no opinion.

Some Democratic leaders bitterly contested the poll, forced a special meeting of the integrated group's board of governors to reconsider it, and when the action was affirmed, obtained a State Supreme Court order temporarily restraining tabulation. However, the high court vacated the injunction Thursday on the bar's plea that the poll was in the public interest.

The results are being forwarded to Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Rabinovitz rose to prominence as counsel for the United Auto Workers in the union's bitter, prolonged strike against the Kohler Co. in the 1950s. He was an early Kennedy supporter in Wisconsin.

Morale High at CSC For Chadron State

GREELEY (AP)—Coach Bill Heiss said Friday the morale of his Colorado State College football team is the highest it has been all season for Saturday's engagement with Chadron State College.

The Bears are counting on a victory to give them a 4-4 record. They were humiliated last week by Highlands of New Mexico, 55-0.

The game will be the final home attraction of the season for the Bears.

Rain Halts Civitan In Second Round

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—The second round of the $8,500 San Antonio Civitan golf tournament was postponed Friday because of heavy rain.

Tournament officials said the women golfers will play one 18-hole round Saturday and finish the tourney with 36 holes Sunday.

Ruth Jessen, who shot a 71 Thursday, has a two-stroke lead in the tourney.

GOP Planning New Organization In South for '64

By DON McKEE

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Republican leaders hammered out plans Friday for organizing at the precinct level throughout the South as the way to win Dixie in the 1964 presidential election.

"We are building a grass organization that will win this time," said Raymond V. Humphreys of Washington, a national GOP strategist who has spent most of the year in the South.

Opening two days of strategy talks, Republican leaders from 13 states exuded confidence in this prelude to an all-out push for a bloc of electoral votes which they hope will be the springboard to the White House.

Obviously, top echelon Republicans consider Dixie ripe for plucking because of widespraad discontent with Democratic President Kennedy's policies on civil rights, spending and the cold war. The big hitch, of course, is the question of whether Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., very popular in the South, will get the GOP presidential nomination.

Humphreys is director of education and training for the Republican National Committee. He said in an interview that precinct organization in the South is moving along rapidly with traditionally Democratic Mississippi and Alabama both organized.

"Mississippi has a two-party system," said Humphreys. He helped in a big push that gave a Republican candidate for governor 38 per cent of the vote Tuesday.

"It was organization that was responsible for this almost entirely," he said.

idential nomination, beginning with a determined campaign to win New Hampshire's first-in-the nation presidential primary next March 10.

At the same time he promised that no matter who the Republican nominee is, he will have Rockefeller support.

"Whoever is selected by the convention in San Francisco will have my wholehearted support," Rockefeller told the group. It was one of his strongest statements thus far in this regard.

In the past he has carefully side-stepped questions concerning support for Sen. Barry Goldwater, whose views differ considerably from those held by the governor. Until now he has always said he would support a candidate that would be nominated in line with a platform adopted by the GOP.

Rockefeller again repeated his challenge to the Arizona senator who remains an unannounced candidate. He asked Goldwater to meet him in public debate to discuss a wide variety of basic issues including the income tax, foreign aid, the Communist threat and right-to-work laws.

NLRB Orders News Agency To Rehire Man

company to offer the man his job back.

Representatives of the union said that the company has refused to bargain with them despite the fact they represent a majority of the company's eligible employes.

They charged that the company ignored a registered written request from the union April 3 for a bargaining session. The charge stated that the written request informed the company of the majority representation and offered to submit proof of the claim. The union said the company never answered the letter.

The union further charged that the company threatened employes with repraisals if they persisted in working to get a union.

The union also charged that after the company had received notification of the union's authorization to act as representative of the men, it "changed existing terms and conditions of employment in three specified respects because of the union activities of its employes."

One of the so-called existing terms which were changed was the providing of beer to employes on Friday after work, the union claimed.

"(Clifton B.) Thompson ceased buying beer for employes after work on Fridays. . ." the union charged. Thompson is owner of the company.

". . .The record discloses that for six or seven years Thompson had a practice of bringing two or three six packs of beer to the plant after work on Fridays and that all the employes would enjoy a libation or two," Bennett said in his report on the hearing.

On the occasions when Thompson did not provide the beer, the company's bookkeeper did or "the men purchased their own," testimony revealed.

Thompson said he discontinued the practice after the men's wives began calling up and protesting that their husbands went on drinking after they left work and didn't come home on time, the report said.

Bennett said that he felt this was not an existing term of employment and disallowed the union's claim.

However, he did order the company to cease threatening reprisals for union activity and to set a bargaining date with the union.

JFK Says Aid Keeps Small Wars Under Control

sion of the bill from $4.2 billion to $3,742,000,000.

Kennedy's plea for the foreign aid bill followed a dressing down given to Congress by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Rusk, at a news conference, accused Congress of trying to "legislate foreign policy" through a series of limiting amendments to the aid bill.

Kennedy argued that peace between the East and West might not bring about peace to the "family of man." He referred specifically to recent disputes between the Africans and the Europeans in Angola, between various sections of North Africa and the Arab world, between India and Pakistan, and in areas of Asia, including Indonesia, Malaysia, Cambodia and Viet Nam.

In each of these conflicts Kennedy, said neither party can afford to waste "precious resources" on hostilities.

The President also added quickly, "in almost every case, their continual conflict invites outside intervention and threatens world-wide escalation—yet the major powers are hard put to limit events in these areas."

The Chief Executive said it was a mistake to regard foreign aid as a matter of economic self - interest, although the foreign aid program provides jobs for about 500,000 American workers and finances what Kennedy called "a rising share of our exports and builds new and growing export markets."

Arguing against cuts in the current foreign aid appropriations, Kennedy was highly critical of those who "find it politically convenient to denounce foreign aid with one breath and the Communist menace with another."

He said there should be consistency in approaching foreign aid. He also said he regarded the current program as "one essential instrument in the creation of a better, more peaceful world."

Madame Nhu Denies Having Hidden Wealth

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu spoke out Friday for the first time on the subject of her personal finances, and denied she has funds abroad.

"They are all liars," she told people who say I have a villa and money outside Viet Nam."

The former first lady of South Viet Nam, in seclusion at a private home here since the coup that overthrew the regime headed by her brother-in-law and husband and cost their lives as well, spoke to a reporter by telephone.

"All that I have is in Viet Nam—my home at Dalat that I was preparing as a nice place to retire to."

A report from Washington on Thursday quoted a "qualified source close to" the Nhu family as saying she is a clever businesswoman with ample resources in other countries, including a villa on the French Riviera.

"The story that I have property abroad is an invention of that former member of Viet Nam's Embassy in Washington." She said she was referring to Ngo To Dat, former first secretary of the embassy who resigned along with her ambassador father, Tran Van Chuong, last August in protest over treatment of Buddhists by the regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

As to where she will get money to support herself and her four children, Mrs. Nhu replied: "I do not know. I shall see when I talk to my brothers-in-law Ngo Dinh Luyen, former Vietnamese ambassador to Great Britain, and Thuc." The latter is Archbishop Pierre Martin Ngo Dinh Thuc, now caring for her three younger children in Rome. They were flown there Wednesday from Viet Nam where they had been during the coup.

Mrs. Nhu moved out of her hotel suite Wednesday to become a house guest of wealthy businessman Allen Chase and his wife.

With her at the Chase home is her eldest daughter, Le Thuy, 18, and her Vietnamese secretary, Nguyen Thi Tuan, 29, who accompanied on her round-the-world tour when she left Saigon six weeks ago.

The younger children, ages 15, 11 and 4 are expected to join her here early next week.

hicle was westbound on the highway and that the Weeks truck was eastbound.

Ferrero said the huge rig apparently had strayed over into the eastbound lane. Weeks, who was driving, saw the truck in his lane and veered to the left to avoid a collision.

Ferguson apparently swung back onto his side of the highway at the same time and the accident ensued, Ferrero said.

He said the Weeks' truck was knocked off the side of the road. The tractor-trailer rig, which carried a cargo of grain, continued for some 226 feet down the highway before it too ended in a ditch.

The Weeks and Ferguson were thrown from their vehicles by the force of the impact which demolished both trucks.

Assisting Patrolman Ferrero in the investigation were Sgt. Jake Abdenschan and Patrolman Fred Henderson and Al Smith.

The accident happened about 12:10 p.m.

The state patrol said O'Neill was driving north when his car ran off the road, skidded 170 feet, shot 43 feet thru the air and rolled end-over-end for 100 feet. It landed on its wheels 108 feet east of the highway.

O'Neill, whose body was found 65 feet from the wrecked car, apparently fell asleep as he approached a left curve, the patrol said.

for the sale of four million tons of wheat to Russia and her European satellites.

Undersecretary of Commerce Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. said the dealer who obtained the license certified that one-half of the grain will be carried in American ships.

The deal with Hungary was a $7.6-million transaction, including the cost of delivery.

The arrangement between the United States and the Soviet Union provided that the actual price of the wheat and shipping costs would be determined in negotiations between U.S. grain dealers and a Russian grain purchasing team.

There were strong indications that the Russians would work out agreements with the private American grain dealers on the actual price and other terms.

A Commerce Department spokesman said no applications for shipment of wheat to Russia were pending but he said at least one grain dealer already had started negotiations with the Russian representatives.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field)

Portions of southwestern Louisiana, southeastern and south-central Texas remain under a tornado forecast this evening as a Rio Grande Valley low continued to produce showers and thunderstorms in that area.

General rains at one-quarter to one-half inch were recorded in southcentral Texas during the six hours ending at 5 p.m. Friday. Some places reported more than two inches for the preceding 12 hours.

Rain also continued in New England where a three-day-old old storm whirled northward just off the coast. Up to one and one-half inches of additional rain fell Friday afternoon in parts of Massachusetts and Maine with storm totals for the past three days exceeding five inches in some mountain locations of New England.

Moderate rains also fell in western Oregon.

Elsewhere across the nation, fair to partly cloudy skies prevailed. However a few thundershowers developed late today along the Mississippi River, in Wisconsin Iowa and Minnesota.

Maximum temperatures Friday afternoon were near or above normal all over the country. Readings in the 60's and 70's dominated the southern half of the nation and 50's were prevalent thru the northwestern and northeastern states and in the north-central U.S. along the Canadian border.

side markings, was abandoned near the holdup scene.

"Part of the loot has been recovered," it was announced later.

The FBI quickly joined the investigation.

The diamond truck was forced to the curb at one of the city's busiest and most heavily policed commercial areas.

The holdup occurred shortly before 1 p.m. It went off with a minimum of confusion and was heralded when one of the bandits stepped up to the halted diamond truck with a gun in his hand and announced tritely but forcefully: "This is a stickup."

Six men inside the diamond truck were unarmed—a company policy. They were handcuffed and forced into the bandits' panel truck. The robbers then drove the diamond truck three blocks south, looting and abandoning it.

The diamond truck was owned by the AAA jewelers Service. Its driver, Louis Moots of Ridgefield, N.J., had picked up 2,000 envelopes from the firm's office on West 47th Street, center of the nation's diamond trading. Each envelope contained one or more gems deposited with the firm by dealers in the area.

The glittering fortune was being taken downtown to the AAA Nassau Street offices, for subsequent distribution to purchasers.

Only Thursday, Police Commissioner Michael Murphy had complained of a mounting wave of jewel thefts from midtown hotels and residences. He estimated the loot since the first of the year at more than $1 million and urged closer cooperation with his department by gem-bedecked celebrities.

The employes in the diamond truck told detectives the disguise of two of the bandits completely disarmed them — they thought they were being halted by real policemen for a traffic violation.

After the bandits drove off with the diamond truck, the employes scrambled out through the front of the panel truck and summoned police.

the day's gathering the most dramatic meeting of the council since it first assembled here 13 months ago.

Cardinal Frings denounced the Holy Office — the Vatican's guardian of doctrine — as "a source of harm to the faithful and of scandal to those outside the Church."

An Italian-born conservative, Alfredo Cardinal Ottaviani, is secretary of the Holy Office, which grew out of the inquisition. He defended its procedures. Both an administrative agency and a tribunal, the Holy Office handles such questions as heresy and crimes against the Church.

The presentation of the document on Jews was hailed by the American Jewish Committee in New York as "an historic event." The committee's president, A. M. Sonnabend of Boston, said the proposed draft may well augur a new era in Catholic-Jewish relations.

The document stressed the Church's ties with the Jews of the Old Testament. It affirmed that all mankind and not Jews alone were responsible for Christ's death, stated it is unjust to consider Jews cursed by God, and called on priests and teachers of religion "never to present a contrary position," but to promote mutual esteem.

Pope John won wide praise from world Jewish leaders when he ordered stricken from a Good Friday prayer a reference to Jews as "perfidious."

Pope Paul VI was reported to have said the day after his election June 21 as Pope John's successor that he was eager to have the document on Jews completed.

No date was set for the start of discussion on it. It could be before this session ends Dec. 4 or later.

GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
Your Freedom Newspaper
Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

To Control Broadcasters

It is a shame that radio and television operate only as a result of federal licensing. By virtue of this fact, the federal government is always in a position to exercise the whip hand to lash any station into line if it displeases the powers of our bureaucracy.

This is one of the reasons why we believe the newspaper is such a vital instrument of communication and education. Newspapers are not federally licensed and thus are far more free in their ability to disseminate news and editorial comment.

The Federal Communications Commission has now issued what it calls a "public notice." The actual date of issuance was July 26, 1963 but the matter has only now come to our attention. The "public notice" of the F.C.C. spells out a new kind of policy which it proposes to invoke against all licensed broadcasting outlets.

"When a controversial program involves a personal attack upon an individual or organization, the licensee MUST transmit the text of the broadcast to the person or group attacked wherever located, either prior to or at the time of the broadcast with a specific offer of his station's facilities for an adequate response."

The writer of this editorial has been the victim of just such a personal attack. The writer also heads an organization which has been victimized in just this manner.

Thus, on the basis of purely personal motivation it would be a simple matter for us to applaud this move on the part of the F.C.C.; to recite the injustice and the distortion and outright falsehood arising from irresponsible broadcasters; the calumny and the positive injury attempted and carried out by some who do not believe in freedom and who have used their facilities to malign us because we do believe in freedom.

But we wish to take this moment to tell you that this move by the F.C.C. is absolutely contrary to your best interests as Americans. Radio and television ought not to be licensed by the federal government. Further, such outlets ought not to be placed under such a blanket of control that the owners and managers of such outlets are deprived of freedom of speech and of opinion.

We do not like to see free speech abused. We do not like to see a program of positive maliciousness dignified by prizes and accolades.

But however we are to suffer for our views, we believe that freedom of expression is far more important than the inconsequential fact that some people may not personally happen to like us.

The "public notice" goes on to say:

"When a licensee permits the use of his facilities for the presentation of views regarding an issue of current importance such as racial segregation, integration, or any other issue of public importance, he MUST offer spokesmen for other responsible groups within the community similar opportunities for the expression of the contrasting viewpoints of their respective groups."

We would prefer to leave the matter of censorship in the hands of the individual members of any listening audience than to invoke the dreadful force of the government to compel or restrain. The real censor of any broadcast or any reader of any kind of published matter is the consumer.

The listener or viewer can flick a swtich. The reader of a newspaper or periodical can toss the publication aside. But if government makes this demand and enforces it by a threat to revoke a license, then the right of men freely to formulate their opinions, to differ, or even to wrangle over favorite policies or ideas, will suffer a mortal blow.

Good taste can and will prevail if we permit it to. The public is not so easily fooled that a constant dinning of a lie automatically makes for acceptance.

Radio and television are already harnessed to federal power. But even a bad situation could be made worse.

Incredible

There have been so many taxes imposed that even our credulity is now being taxed.

Those of Integrity Are Brave

In the end, the protection and safety of all life and property depends upon individual integrity. This has always been true and it is true now.

But so far removed are we from the reality of the case that we have come to act as tho we believed life and property are made safe by government. And believing this, we have endowed government with so much power that today few if any people are safe at government hands.

There has never been a lock made that cannot be broken or picked.

There has never been a door made that could not be broken down.

No device of safety or security ever created has ever matched the wits and contrivances of the thoroly determined individual wishing to steal, burn, rape or despoil. Destruction is easy. Full safety and security are probably impossible.

Thus, today, the only reason life and property exist at all lies not in the fact that government has large power, but rather in the fact that by far and away the largest number of people have a very fair share of integrity.

If integrity is as important as we believe it to be, then there should be a constant effort exerted in home, church and school to instill the principles of integrity in everyone. Our children should be taught from the earliest possible moment that a character of integrity is the jewel without price.

The man who is thoroly trustworthy is the man in whom full confidence can be placed. Business and industry are searching for such men. So are all the professions. Men who have too high an opinion of their own conduct to stoop to larceny in any degree for any reason are the men who hold our civilization together. It is they and not the government, who provide whatever safety and security we experience.

But today, it is as tho home and church and school have combined to undermine the formation of character and the development of integrity. Too often we hear from each of these institutions the argument that a particular political policy should be supported because it would mean an "advantage" to the particular institution affected. And our various art forms mirror this tendency. Our plays and moving pictures place a premium on cleverness rather than on honor. The man of principles who stands fast is classified as a "square" who does not have the wits to detect which side of the bread carries the butter.

Today's heroes, in or out of our art forms, are those endowed with physical courage, not those adhering to moral strength. And our young men and women learn to believe that bravery is physical in character rather than consisting in a steadfast alignment with what is right.

Our dependency on expedience is so swollen from use that many no longer believe there is such a thing as right or wrong. Politics, defined as the "science of the possible," has helped to stimulate this total lack of conviction. Whatever can be done is that which is right to do.

A future for our nation or for our species does not lie in this direction. There are many things which can be done which ought not to be done.

The man of integrity knows this and stands by it. Any man can make a mistake. The man of character does not cringe from a recognition of his mistakes but bravely makes the best of them. He does not deny his self-chosen obligations, he copes with them.

Here is a kind of courage which is far more valuable than the mere physical bravado necessary to face a physical threat.

We do not mean to suggest that physical cowardice is desirable. But moral cowardice is far more destructive of human character and human potential. Integrity is truly important and the man having it is truly brave.

WHIPLASH REVISITED

"Remember that town on the Western Slope I was telling you about a couple years ago?" asked Adam Lyre the other night.

"Do you mean the town called Whiplash where everybody was paid for not manufacturing buggy-whips?" I asked in turn.

"That's the one," said Adam. "You know, I just returned from there. Went over to visit some old friends in the place."

"And is it still thriving on its nonmanufacturing business?" I asked.

"Thriving's the word for it," said Adam. "Why, do you know, that town doubled in population almost overnight this spring."

"What brought about such a remarkable growth in a stagnant community that does nothing but sit on its hands and collect money for not producing?" I wanted to know.

"Well, it's a long story," Adam replied, "and somewhat involved. But I'll make it as short and simple as possible. The start of it was when Whiplash family took over the management of the world's largest (remaining) buggywhip factory. The young whippersnapper, George W. Whiplash the Third, had collected himself some queer ideas in college. Yale, I think it was. He joined the YOUNG AMERICANS FOR FREEDOM or some such radical group, and soaked up a lot of hogwash about free enterprise, individualism, constitutionalism, etc. He had a fool idea that it was sinful to be collecting a yearly profit for not making buggy whips, and for all his employees to keep being paid for not working in the whip factory."

"If memory serves me right," I remarked, "they also got cost-of-living raises from time to time, and the crew was increased from outsiders periodically to keep pace with what would have been the growing demand for buggy whips, if the automobile hadn't destroyed the market."

"You remember correctly," said Adam. "New voters were being gradually added to the payroll. But when the grandson of old Whiplash took over on his father's retirement, he proposed some shocking changes. Being a newly graduated engineer, and also being filled with ardor for what he believed was the righteous cause of free enterprise and all, this young radical got busy, over his Old Man's protests, and figured out a way whereby the buggy whip manufacturing machinery, which had been kept in good repair over the years just in case the craze for horseless carriages came to a sudden end, could, with only minor changes, be converted to the manufacture of fishing rods.

"He went to Washington and laid his proposal before the proper authorities, who gave his plan a very cold shoulder. 'Why do you wish to upset the status quo?' asked the bureaucrats. 'You're doing all right. You show a profit every year and your employees are a happy and contented lot. Some of us spent several delightful days in your town only last summer. We were on a survey, and we must say that we never saw a more contented community. All of your employees are driving good cars and living in decent homes and seem to have plenty of time to enjoy graceful living in pleasant surroundings and a salubrious climate.'

"'But that's the trouble,' said young Whiplash. 'They're not my employees. Sure, a few of them work in the factory a few weeks every summer teaching the newly hired ones how to make buggy whips and for keeping the machinery in good repair. But what for? Gentlemen, you must realize by this time that the fad for horseless carriages isn't going to wear off. We've already got a billion buggywhips stored in caves all over the West and I think it's downright criminal for me and my employees to keep collecting money from the taxpayers when we could very easily convert the plant to the manufacture of fishing rods. This should certainly be a small aid to our failing economy.'

"But the young fellow got nowhere. In fact, the bureaucrats threatened to kick him out of the management of the plant and supplant him with one of their hand-picked men. But young Whiplash had persistence, or cussedness, in his heart, and he cried around to various conservative congressmen until he got a hearing before a Senate Committee. The committee approved of his plan, it looked like a conservative swing in the West that year, the bureaucrats pulled in their horns, and he went happily home to make the conversion and get the wheels turning again after 40 years of silence."

"That was quite a victory for free enterprise," I said. "I see now how the town doubled in population so rapidly."

"You don't see nothing," said Adam. "I told you it was a long story, so don't go to jumping to conclusions."

To The Point

An Old Pirate Lair

By RUSSELL KIRK

Across the river from the Moroccan capital of Rabat, on the Atlantic, lies the old pirate lair of Sale, within its grim great circuit of walls. Perhaps a hundred thousand people dwell within — tho how anyone could count them in that rabbit-warren, I can't guess. Moroccan tourism makes scant mention of Sale, for the place is desperately poor and crowded. But also it is the real old Morocco.

One crosses the estuary in a row-boat, and plods up thru the dust to the monumental gateway. Once thru that gate, the visitor finds himself in a labyrinthine suk, or market where — as the Devil's Booth in Vanity Fair — all things are sold. But there is no market-square, for within the walls of Sale there exists no square, park, or any other open space. The Christian captives of the seventeenth century, taken by Sale rovers, must have felt that the jaws of Hell had closed upon them, once they were prodded into the hot and stinking maze of Sale.

But also Sale is curiously like the towns of the Holy Land at the time Christ was born. Within three minutes, one passes the gateway of a caravanserai, still full of horses, mules, donkeys and camels, doubtless the spit and image of the inn where the Christ Child lay in a manger; next, perhaps, a young woman on a donkey, with a baby in her arms, like Mary on the flight into Egypt; then a blind and scabrous beggar, like Lazarus. On the far side of the walls, toward the ocean, near the worst of the slums, circles of Moslem men gather round a public reader, who has a well-bound book in his hand, and cries aloud long passages from the Koran or some other work — much as Jesus spoke unto his disciples.

In modern Sale, as in the old Hebrew kingdoms, grinding poverty is accepted as part of the nature of things. The visitor is transported in a moment from the age of affluence to the age — which, after all, is the ordinary condition of men — of material want. Ever since freebooting and slaving were suppressed, old Sale has been a depressed area — tho scarcely an underdeveloped area, since the population density is greater than that of Manhattan.

Great poverty does not necessarily bring great misery. Accepted as the lot of the large majority of men, poverty loses most of its terrors. The people of Sale listen to the street musicians, playing their primitive instruments, and occasionally drop a small coin into their cup; they drink fragrant mint tea at the tiny cafes; they tend their little dark shops in the lanes— and nowhere in the world, surely, is there more competition and free enterprise than in Sale. The rest is the will of Allah. Unlike Casablanca, Sale is crowded with mosques and devout worshippers.

No inconsiderable part of the population is engaged in beggary — for the pious Moslem, as commanded by Mohammed, is supposed to give a charity a tenth of his income. One may see people bestowing alms who are themselves poorer than the poorest American. Blinded by diseases of the eye, crippled by diseases of the foot, mutilated from birth by horrid afflictions, the Sale beggars in their rags and tatters nevertheless scrape up the means of survival. In this climate, if they have not even a lean-to against the city walls, they can sleep in the open air.

No conceivable amount of American foreign aid, even to comparatively prosperous Morocco, will put an end to the poverty of Sale. There are too many people, and nature's bounty is too scanty for them. "The poor we have with us always," Christ prophesied. "Some day, perhaps, revolutionary agitators will wake hatred and vain hopes of prosperity in Sale — tho they have not yet succeeded. But revolution could only make their lot worse. Resignation and contraction of wants, as taught by both Christian and Moslem doctrine, are necessity in Sale.

RAILWAY EXPOSITION

To the Editor:

In October railroads and their suppliers staged an impressive Railway Progress Exposition in Chicago. It was an eye-opener to those who declare railroads obsolete.

The motive-power revolution did not stop with the diesel. A specialized car revolution stresses increased capacity and loadability. The wedding of rails and trucks in piggy-back service combines the best features of both modes and releases highway space to private automobiles. Unitized trains, automatic trains and railroading by computer demonstrate the untapped potential of the Iron Horse.

This potential is inhibited by vested interests in subsidized non-rail transport allied with political regulation empire builders and those who would reduce the railroads to a huge WPA-type make-work project. The exposition is industry's answer to President Kennedy's repeated challenge to unchain the Iron Horse and let him run!

HOME TAXATION

To the Editor:

The underlying principle of the recent tax protest meeting at the County Office Building was not so much against taxation as such as it was against taxing a man's home, which is needed for his independent moral and financial living stability. All of us know that a roof held up by four walls in which a family must live to exist has no money value of itself. Holding on to the status quo of taxing homes is nonsense, to say the least.

Is it any wonder that young people are confused with all our so-called prosperity, when even the roof over their heads contains leaks caused by a hail of four types of taxation? Youth often reasons from a natural or sensible viewpoint. When they begin to think about this tax hovering over their heads they begin to ask, just why are the homes of our nation weakened to satisfy the "social mind?" If governing bodies need this method of taxation for what some people call social progress, why is force used to penalize parents who have the vision and initiative to build a home for their own and children's welfare? By the time you and I become thinking adults, we know that this so-called social progress is an illusive something that is progress for little more than one generation and sometimes progress in reverse. Using initiated force that schools may be maintained and governmental activities expanded is demoralizing to the young thinker. Justice weeps when force is applied to law-abiding citizens involving their own homes.

Public debts and taxation as is being practiced are twins in their source and use. With part of such monies school houses are built in which to teach children fairy tales and theories for from eight to sixteen years; whereas the original purpose for establishing schools in our nation was to enable everyone to read and to better understand the Bible, to receive inspiration and wisdom from its sacred history and to know our Lord's love in redeeming mankind. Public debts with additional interest is another one of these inexplainable burdens chained to the American people. Taxes are intended for necessary expenses of governing bodies but stumbling blocks have been created to control or to enslave present and future generations by expanding paid and prospective taxes into public debts.

For the present, let us agree with the tax and tax and spend advocates that the use of force is necessary to collect monies for "public expenditures." These public expenditures are decided by a certain group of society for a certain purpose for a given period. Much of what is spent in this manner is of a questionable nature when looked upon from a wider historical perspective. The question necessarily repeats itself, why burden the small home owner for questionable public expenditures? Since we are supposing in this paragraph that taxation is necessary, why not collect such forced monies from sources which also are questionable of which there are a multitude? The only non-questionable institution to maintain the stability of our nation is the family home with its physical and spiritual needs. If we are able to learn anything at all from history, we see that there is no permanence in anything that man does except as he works in a healthy and secure home environment.

The only real earthly security a man has is his own home, where he lives and grows in body and spirit, even if his income is limited or shrinks to nothing at times. As soon as we Americans have the vision to abolish any type of taxation against our homes, then come what may — high water, hurricanes, inflation or deflation — our homes will remain secure. With every home in our nation protected from the inroads of social and financial extremes, dictatorships will have no fertile soil in which to take hold.

Quoting from one of the homeowners at the recent tax-consideration meeting, "Reduce in half the wages of all elected and appointed public officials from the President on down until they are willing to use their intelligence to eliminate this superimposed taxation from the enclosure which every one of us needs to be protected from natural and human extremes. Americans are willing and able to pay for a constructive education of their children and for necessary governmental functions with some added artistic satisfaction but they are opposed to this taxation encircling their homes."

Canada Pension Plan

By AMBROSE HILLS

I've now reached the age where the very word "Pension" has a lovely ring to it, so I read about the Canada contributory wage-related Pension Plan in a sympathetic mood. I would probably not have too many years in which I would have to contribute, but at retirement I'd have a very nice little pension. . .most of it paid for by somebody else. Should I look a gift horse in the mouth?

Well, many of the gifts I have had in this life have cost me a great deal more than those things I went out and bought for myself. So I did take a look at this gift horse, and I have grave doubt about whether I want it or not.

Added to my own doubts are the words of experts in the actuarial field. They have said the plan is unsound, and I'm inclined to believe them. Politicians draw attractive ideas out of political hats in order to dangle plums before the voters. They leave it to the technical people, in the government service, to try to work out the details — and sometimes those details can be uncommonly difficult. I recall that the Unemployment Insurance scheme was one that just didn't work out as planned; and I would not like to see Canadians start a pension fund that had cracks in it. The whole thing is far too important to engage in without a great deal of thought. Contributions to such a plan could take about ten per cent of a man's weekly wage.

I cannot bring myself to believe that any political party has my personal welfare so much at heart that it wishes, at once, to work out a pension plan for me, and that it will brook no delay in doing me good. I suspect that this great speed is due to a desire to win friends and influence voters.

Perhaps Canada can afford some sort of wage-deduction plan. Certainly we cannot afford an unsound one. While it may be attractive to oldsters like me, it could be disastrous for our sons and daughters who will have to try to pay for it out of their earnings. And if such a plan failed, it would be disastrous for all of us.

It seems to me that it would be wise for the government to delay this plan until the experts have all been heard. To force it on the public would be a great mistake.

Wit and Whimsy

The two Texas oilmen walked into an automobile showroom and one of them asked a salesman:

"How much is that fancy deluxe model over there?"

Salesman: "Twelve thousand dollars."

Texas oilman (as he began to take out twelve one-thousand dollar bills from his wallet): "I'll take it."

Friend: "Oh, no you don't. You bought the lunch."

These Days

The Disappearance Of Alex Rorke

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

This is a story that is hard to write, for it is about someone who had become a good friend. Alexander Rorke Jr., the friend in question, is missing somewhere in the Caribbean region, along with his aircraft pilot, Geoffrey Sullivan. The two may be alive in some jungle in Honduras or on some self-imposed infiltration mission in Castro's Cuba or they may be dead — or, as one must hope, they may be safely returned to the U.S. by the time this column is in print. In any case, Alex Rorke, a brave man if there ever was one, should have some tribute.

The trouble with Alex is that he took freedom seriously. He had a vast number of friends among anti-Castro Cubans, and he wanted them to recover their country. He also had a family tradition to uphold — the tradition of fighting to forestall the triumph of Communism anywhere and everywhere it happens to threaten.

His father, Alexander Rorke Sr., formerly an assistant district attorney of New York County, indicted the original founders of the American Communist Party back in 1917, and Alex took his own anti-Communist mission as a filial duty. No doubt with considerable brashness, Alex felt it was morally right and necessary to carry on the battle against the Communist enemy even when the U.S. State Department, in pursuit of a "relaxation" of tensions, opposed it.

CUBAN INVASION

Alex was never the soul of discretion, which he regarded as a namby-pamby virtue. It was only a few short weeks ago that he sat in my living room in Cheshire, Conn., and outlined his hopes for helping his Cuban friends recapture Cuba. His pilot, Geoff Sullivan, who lives just over the hill from Cheshire in the neighboring city of Waterbury, was with him. The two had relinquished the idea that the U.S. would ever again be willing to permit anybody to mount raids on Cuba from Florida. But they persisted in hanging on to the prospect that the Cubans might be helped to build up an invasion force somewhere in Central America.

They wanted to be in on the overthrow of Castro if and when it should be permitted to happen. But to be of tangible assistance to the Cubans in Central America, Alex and Geoff Sullivan had first to recover a power boat and a good airplane which the U.S. government had confiscated because of suspicions that they had been used against Castro from Florida bases. To press the issue against the government, which refused to prefer any formal charges against him yet refused to return his property, Alex needed money.

Alex's plan was to rent a plane and, with Sullivan at the controls, to engage in an import-export business in the Caribbean area. The two were sanguine that money could be made by bringing tanks of rare tropical fish back to the U.S. for private aquariums. By carrying valuable quick cargo, Alex hoped to get enough money to continue the time payment on his sequestered boat, the Violynn III, and his sequestered plane and to pay for legal advice about getting them back.

When last heard from, Alex and his pilot had refueled a rented plane at the island of Cozumel off the coast of Yucatan. They had with them a Cuban whose name has been given as Garcia. They took off in the evening, at a dangerous hour, and have not been heard from in a month. They could be drowned, or they could have fallen into the hands of Castroites. Who knows?

Admittedly, Rorke and Sullivan are — or were — romantics. But when America ceases to produce such romantics, its doom will have been sealed. A search should be organized for them and, regardless of official opinion about their common sense, carried thru.

EAGER

Alex didn't think the government could prove that he had violated any law. But he was willing — and anxious — to take the risk of being proved guilty. He would never admit to me that he and Sullivan had taken off from mainland America on their flight which resulted in an unsuccessful bombing of Havana oil installations. But, no matter what the question of his guilt or innocence, he wanted a trial in order to compel certain U.S. officials to take the stand. He wanted them to submit to relevant questioning about the State Department policy of clamping down on private citizens whose sin is that they have taken our promises to the Cuban Bay of Pigs veterans seriously.

Nation's Press

Up Go Denver Taxes

From Rocky Mountain News

In its best city-father-know-best manner, City Council Monday night indicated citizens should be seen and not heard.

They passed a new city budget calling for expenditure of $47.3 million derived from a 22.4 mill levy — a hike of 3.6 mills.

Thus Council turned its back on strong and definitive criticism of Mayor Currigan's budget and tax hikes launched weeks ago by representatives of business, real estate interests and private citizenry.

The only public shot the people had at the budget was at Monday night's hearing — one that was salted away before it began. Only Councilman Paul Hentzell voted against the proposal — objecting primarily to a $1.1 million salary increase for city employes.

There had been definitive answers given to the councilmanic question: Where do we cut? These were given by the Colorado Public Expenditure Council, the Denver Chamber of Commerce, the Downtown Denver Improvement Association and the Denver Board of Realtors. But councilmen didn't listen.

Councilman Robert Keating, in answer to a query about a possible similar hike in taxes for 1965, said he believes a similar increase will be necessary next year.

There was slight consolation for the taxpayer — a pyrrhic victory — in that the mayor cut .9 mill off his original mill levy which began at 4.5 mills and was shaved down to 3.6 mills.

The mayor insisted — and Council back him solidly — that the progressive, do - something administration he promised would be possible only with the increase in taxes. Over public objection, he won his way.

We as a newspaper are obliged to hold him to his word and measure the performance he promises underwritten by the tax increase.

To Control Broadcasters

It is a shame that radio and television operate only as a result of federal licensing. By virtue of this fact, the federal government is always in a position to exercise the whip hand to lash any station into line if it displeases the powers of our bureaucracy.

This is one of the reasons why we believe the newspaper is such a vital instrument of communication and education. Newspapers are not federally licensed and thus are far more free in their ability to disseminate news and editorial comment.

The Federal Communications Commission has now issued what it calls a "public notice." The actual date of issuance was July 26, 1963 but the matter has only now come to our attention. The "public notice" of the F.C.C. spells out a new kind of policy which it proposes to invoke against all licensed broadcasting outlets.

"When a controversial program involves a personal attack upon an individual or organization, the licensee MUST transmit the text of the broadcast to the person or group attacked wherever located, either prior to or at the time of the broadcast with a specific offer of his station's facilities for an adequate response."

The writer of this editorial has been the victim of just such a personal attack. The writer also heads an organization which has been victimized in just this manner.

Thus, on the basis of purely personal motivation it would be a simple matter for us to applaud this move on the part of the F.C.C.; to recite the injustice and the distortion and outright falsehood arising from irresponsible broadcasters; the calumny and the positive injury attempted and carried out by some who do not believe in freedom and who have used their facilities to malign us because we do believe in freedom.

But we wish to take this moment to tell you that this move by the F.C.C. is absolutely contrary to your best interests as Americans. Radio and television ought not to be licensed by the federal government. Further, such outlets ought not to be placed under such a blanket of control that the owners and managers of such outlets are deprived of freedom of speech and of opinion.

We do not like to see free speech abused. We do not like to see a program of positive maliciousness dignified by prizes and accolades.

But however we are to suffer for our views, we believe that freedom of expression is far more important than the inconsequential fact that some people may not personally happen to like us.

The "public notice" goes on to say:

"When a licensee permits the use of his facilities for the presentation of views regarding an issue of current importance such as racial segregation, integration, or any other issue of public importance, he MUST offer spokesmen for other responsible groups within the community similar opportunities for the expression of the contrasting viewpoints of their respective groups."

We would prefer to leave the matter of censorship in the hands of the individual members of any listening audience than to invoke the dreadful force of the government to compel or restrain. The real censor of any broadcast or any reader of any kind of published matter is the consumer.

The listener or viewer can flick a swtich. The reader of a newspaper or periodical can toss the publication aside. But if government makes this demand and enforces it by a threat to revoke a license, then the right of men freely to formulate their opinions, to differ, or even to wrangle over favorite policies or ideas, will suffer a mortal blow.

Good taste can and will prevail if we permit it to. The public is not so easily fooled that a constant dinning of a lie automatically makes for acceptance.

Radio and television are already harnessed to federal power. But even a bad situation could be made worse.

Incredible

There have been so many taxes imposed that even our credulity is now being taxed.

Those of Integrity Are Brave

In the end, the protection and safety of all life and property depends upon individual integrity. This has always been true and it is true now.

But so far removed are we from the reality of the case that we have come to act as tho we believed life and property are made safe by government. And believing this, we have endowed government with so much power that today few if any people are safe at government hands.

There has never been a lock made that cannot be broken or picked.

There has never been a door made that could not be broken down.

No device of safety or security ever created has ever matched the wits and contrivances of the thoroly determined individual wishing to steal, burn, rape or despoil. Destruction is easy. Full safety and security are probably impossible.

Thus, today, the only reason life and property exist at all lies not in the fact that government has large power, but rather in the fact that by far and away the largest number of people have a very fair share of integrity.

If integrity is as important as we believe it to be, then there should be a constant effort exerted in home, church and school to instill the principles of integrity in everyone. Our children should be taught from the earliest possible moment that a character of integrity is the jewel without price.

The man who is thoroly trustworthy is the man in whom full confidence can be placed. Business and industry are searching for such men. So are all the professions. Men who have too high an opinion of their own conduct to stoop to larceny in any degree for any reason are the men who hold our civilization together. It is they and not the government, who provide whatever safety and security we experience.

But today, it is as tho home and church and school have combined to undermine the formation of character and the development of integrity. Too often we hear from each of these institutions the argument that a particular political policy should be supported because it would mean an "advantage" to the particular institution affected. And our various art forms mirror this tendency. Our plays and moving pictures place a premium on cleverness rather than on honor. The man of principles who stands fast is classified as a "square" who does not have the wits to detect which side of the bread carries the butter.

Today's heroes, in or out of our art forms, are those endowed with physical courage, not those adhering to moral strength. And our young men and women learn to believe that bravery is physical in character rather than consisting in a steadfast alignment with what is right.

Our dependency on expedience is so swollen from use that many no longer believe there is such a thing as right or wrong. Politics, defined as the "science of the possible," has helped to stimulate this total lack of conviction. Whatever can be done is that which is right to do.

A future for our nation or for our species does not lie in this direction. There are many things which can be done which ought not to be done.

The man of integrity knows this and stands by it. Any man can make a mistake. The man of character does not cringe from a recognition of his mistakes but bravely makes the best of them. He does not deny his self-chosen obligations, he copes with them.

Here is a kind of courage which is far more valuable than the mere physical bravado necessary to face a physical threat.

We do not mean to suggest that physical cowardice is desirable. But moral cowardice is far more destructive of human character and human potential. Integrity is truly important and the man having it is truly brave.

WHIPLASH REVISITED

"Remember that town on the Western Slope I was telling you about a couple years ago?" asked Adam Lyre the other night.

"Do you mean the town called Whiplash where everybody was paid for not manufacturing buggywhips?" I asked in turn.

"That's the one," said Adam. "You know, I just returned from there. Went over to visit some old friends in the place."

"And is it still thriving on its nonmanufacturing business?" I asked.

"Thriving's the word for it," said Adam. "Why, do you know, that town doubled in population almost overnight this spring."

"What brought about such a remarkable growth in a stagnant community that does nothing but sit on its hands and collect money for not producing?" I wanted to know.

"Well, it's a long story," Adam replied, "and somewhat involved. But I'll make it as short and simple as possible. The start of it was when Whiplash family took over the management of the world's largest (remaining) buggywhip factory. The young whippersnapper, George W. Whiplash the Third, had collected himself some queer ideas in college. Yale, I think it was. He joined the YOUNG AMERICANS FOR FREEDOM or some such radical group, and soaked up a lot of hogwash about free enterprise, individualism, constitutionalism, etc. He had a fool idea that it was sinful to be collecting a yearly profit for not making buggy whips, and for all his employees to keep being paid for not working in the whip factory."

"If memory serves me right," I remarked, "they also got cost-of-living raises from time to time, and the crew was increased from outsiders periodically to keep pace with what would have been the growing demand for buggy whips, if the automobile hadn't destroyed the market."

"You remember correctly," said Adam. "New voters were being gradually added to the payroll. But when the grandson of old Whiplash took over on his father's retirement, he proposed some shocking changes. Being a newly graduated engineer, and also being filled with ardor for what he believed was the righteous cause of free enterprise and all, this young radical got busy, over his Old Man's protests, and figured out a way whereby the buggy whip manufacturing machinery, which had been kept in good repair over the years just in case the craze for horseless carriages came to a sudden end, could, with only minor changes, be converted to the manufacture of fishing rods.

"He went to Washington and laid his proposal before the proper authorities, who gave his plan a very cold shoulder. 'Why do you wish to upset the status quo?' asked the bureaucrats. 'You're doing all right. You show a profit every year and your employees are a happy and contented lot. Some of us spent several delightful days in your town only last summer. We were on a survey, and we must say that we never saw a more contented community. All of your employees are driving good cars and living in decent homes and seem to have plenty of time to enjoy graceful living in pleasant surroundings and a salubrious climate.'

"'But that's the trouble,' said young Whiplash. 'They're not my employees. Sure, a few of them work in the factory a few weeks every summer teaching the newly hired ones how to make buggy whips and for keeping the machinery in good repair. But what for? Gentlemen, you must realize by this time that the fad for horseless carriages isn't going to wear off. We've already got a billion buggywhips stored in caves all over the West and I think it's downright criminal for me and my employees to keep collecting money from the taxpayers when we could very easily convert the plant to the manufacture of fishing rods. This should certainly be a small aid to our failing economy.'

"But the young fellow got nowhere. In fact, the bureaucrats threatened to kick him out of the management of the plant and supplant him with one of their hand-picked men. But young Whiplash had persistence, or cussedness, in his heart, and he cried around to various conservative congressmen until he got a hearing before a Senate Committee. The committee approved of his plan. It looked like a conservative swing in the West that year, the bureaucrats pulled in their horns, and he went happily home to make the conversion and get the wheels turning again after 40 years of silence."

"That was quite a victory for free enterprise," I said. "I see now how the town doubled in population so rapidly."

"You don't see nothing," said Adam. "I told you it was a long story, so don't go to jumping to conclusions."

To The Point

An Old Pirate Lair

By RUSSELL KIRK

Across the river from the Moroccan capital of Rabat, on the Atlantic, lies the old pirate lair of Sale, within its grim great circuit of walls. Perhaps a hundred thousand people dwell within — tho how anyone could count them in that rabbit-warren, I can't guess. Moroccan tourism makes scant mention of Sale, for the place is desperately poor and crowded. But also it is the real old Morocco.

One crosses the estuary in a row-boat, and plods up thru the dust to the monumental gateway. Once thru that gate, the visitor finds himself in a labyrinthine suk, or market where — as the Devil's Booth in Vanity Fair — all things are sold. But there is no market-square, for within the walls of Sale there exists no square, park, or any other open space. The Christian captives of the seventeenth century, taken by Sale rovers, must have felt that the jaws of Hell had closed upon them, once they were prodded into the hot and stinking maze of Sale.

But also Sale is curiously like the towns of the Holy Land at the time Christ was born. Within three minutes, one passes the gateway of a caravanserai, still full of horses, mules, donkeys and camels, doubtless the spit and image of the inn where the Christ Child lay in a manger; next, perhaps, a young woman on a donkey, with a baby in her arms, like Mary on the flight into Egypt; then a blind and scabrous beggar, like Lazarus. On the far side of the walls, toward the ocean, near the worst of the slums, circles of Moslem men gather round a public reader, who has a well-bound book in his hand, and cries aloud long passages from the Koran or some other work — much as Jesus spoke unto his disciples.

In modern Sale, as in the old Hebrew kingdoms, grinding poverty is accepted as part of the nature of things. The visitor is transported in a moment from the age of affluence to the age — which, after all, is the ordinary condition of men — of material want. Ever since freebooting and slaving were suppressed, old Sale has been a depressed area — tho scarcely an underdeveloped area, since the population density is greater than that of Manhattan.

Great poverty does not necessarily bring great misery. Accepted as the lot of the large majority of men, poverty loses most of its terrors. The people of Sale listen to the street musicians, playing their primitive instruments, and occasionally drop a small coin into their cup; they drink fragrant mint tea at the tiny cafes; they tend their little dark shops in the lanes—and nowhere in the world, surely, is there more competition and free enterprise than in Sale. The rest is the will of Allah. Unlike Casablanca, Sale is crowded with mosques and devout worshippers.

No inconsiderable part of the population is engaged in beggary — for the pious Moslem, as commanded by Mohammed, is supposed to give a charity a tenth of his income. One may see people bestowing alms who are themselves poorer than the poorest American. Blinded by diseases of the eye, crippled by diseases of the foot, mutilated from birth by horrid afflictions, the Sale beggars in their rags and tatters nevertheless scrape up the means of survival. In this climate, if they have not even a lean-to against the city walls, they can sleep in the open air.

No conceivable amount of American foreign aid, even to comparatively prosperous Morocco, will put an end to the poverty of Sale. There are too many people, and nature's bounty is too scanty for them. "The poor we have with us always," Christ prophesied. "Some day, perhaps, revolutionary agitators will wake hatred and vain hopes of prosperity in Sale — tho they have not yet succeeded. But revolution could only make their lot worse. Resignation and contraction of wants, as taught by both Christian and Moslem doctrine, are necessity in Sale.

RAILWAY EXPOSITION

To the Editor:

In October railroads and their suppliers staged an impressive Railway Progress Exposition in Chicago. It was an eye-opener to those who declare railroads obsolete.

The motive-power revolution did not stop with the diesel. A specialized car revolution stresses increased capacity and loadability. The wedding of rails and trucks in piggy-back service combines the best features of both modes and releases highway space to private automobiles. Unitized trains, automatic trains and railroading by computer demonstrate the untapped potential of the Iron Horse.

This potential is inhibited by vested interests in subsidized non-rail transport allied with political regulation empire builders and those who would reduce the railroads to a huge WPA-type make-work project. The exposition is industry's answer to President Kennedy's repeated challenge to unchain the Iron Horse and let him run!

HOME TAXATION

To the Editor:

The underlying principle of the recent tax protest meeting at the County Office Building was not so much against taxation as such as it was against taxing a man's home, which is needed for his independent moral and financial living stability. All of us know that a roof held up by four walls in which a family must live to exist has no money value of itself. Holding on to the status quo of taxing homes is nonsense, to say the least.

Is it any wonder that young people are confused with all our so-called prosperity, when even the roof over their heads contains leaks caused by a hail of four types of taxation? Youth often reasons from a natural or sensible viewpoint. When they begin to think about this tax hovering over their heads they begin to ask, just why are the homes of our nation weakened to satisfy the "social mind?" If governing bodies need this method of taxation for what some people call social progress, why is force used to penalize parents who have the vision and initiative to build a home for their own and children's welfare? By the time you and I become thinking adults, we know that this so-called social progress is an illusive something that is progress for little more than one generation and sometimes progress in reverse. Using initiated force that schools may be maintained and governmental activities expanded is demoralizing to the young thinker. Justice weeps when force is applied to law-abiding citizens involving their own homes.

Public debts and taxation as is being practiced are twins in their source and use. With part of such monies school houses are built in which to teach children fairy tales and theories for from eight to sixteen years; whereas the original purpose for establishing schools in our nation was to enable everyone to read and to better understand the Bible, to receive inspiration and wisdom from its sacred history and to know our Lord's love in redeeming mankind. Public debts with additional interest is another one of these inexplainable burdens chained to the American people. Taxes are intended for necessary expenses of governing bodies but stumbling blocks have been created to control or to enslave present and future generations by expanding paid and prospective taxes into public debts.

For the present, let us agree with the tax and tax and spend advocates that the use of force is necessary to collect monies for "public expenditures." These public expenditures are decided by a certain group of society for a certain purpose for a given period. Much of what is spent in this manner is of a questionable nature when looked upon from a wider historical perspective. The question necessarily repeats itself, why burden the small home owner for questionable public expenditures? Since we are supposing in this paragraph that taxation is necessary, why not collect such forced monies from sources which also are questionable of which there are a multitude? The only non-questionable institution to maintain the stability of our nation is the family home with its physical and spiritual needs. If we are able to learn anything at all from history, we see that there is no permanence in anything that man does except as he works in a healthy and secure home environment.

The only real earthly security a man has is his own home, where he lives and grows in body and spirit, even if his income is limited or shrinks to nothing at times. As soon as we Americans have the vision to abolish any type of taxation against our homes, then come what may — high water, hurricanes, inflation or deflation — our homes will remain secure. With every home in our nation protected from the inroads of social and financial extremes, dictatorships will have no fertile soil in which to take hold.

Quoting from one of the homeowners at the recent tax-consideration meeting, "Reduce in half the wages of all elected and appointed public officials from the President on down until they are willing to use their intelligence to eliminate this superimposed taxation from the enclosure which every one of us needs to be protected from natural and human extremes. Americans are willing and able to pay for a constructive education of their children and for necessary governmental functions with some added artistic satisfaction but they are opposed to this taxation encircling their homes."

Canada Pension Plan

By AMBROSE HILLS

I've now reached the age where the very word "Pension" has a lovely ring to it, so I read about the Canada contributory wage-related Pension Plan in a sympathetic mood. I would probably not have too many years in which I would have to contribute, but at retirement I'd have a very nice little pension. . .most of it paid for by somebody else. Should I look a gift horse in the mouth?

Well, many of the gifts I have had in this life have cost me a great deal more than those things I went out and bought for myself. So I did take a look at this gift horse, and I have grave doubt about whether I want it or not.

Added to my own doubts are the words of experts in the actuarial field. They have said the plan is unsound, and I'm inclined to believe them. Politicians draw attractive ideas out of political hats in order to dangle plums before the voters. They leave it to the technical people, in the government service, to try to work out the details — and sometimes those details can be uncommonly difficult. I recall that the Unemployment Insurance scheme was one that just didn't work out as planned; and I would not like to see Canadians start a pension fund that had cracks in it. The whole thing is far too important to engage in without a great deal of thought. Contributions to such a plan could take about ten per cent of a man's weekly wage.

I cannot bring myself to believe that any political party has my personal welfare so much at heart that it wishes, at once, to work out a pension plan for me, and that it will brook no delay in doing me good. I suspect that this great speed is due to a desire to win friends and influence voters.

Perhaps Canada can afford some sort of wage-deduction plan. Certainly we cannot afford an unsound one. While it may be attractive to oldsters like me, it could be disastrous for our sons and daughters who will have to try to pay for it out of their earnings. And if such a plan failed, it would be disastrous for all of us.

It seems to me that it would be wise for the government to delay this plan until the experts have all been heard. To force it on the public would be a great mistake.

Wit and Whimsy

The two Texas oilmen walked into an automobile showroom and one of them asked a salesman:

"How much is that fancy deluxe model over there?"

Salesman: "Twelve thousand dollars."

Texas oilman (as he began to take out twelve one-thousand dollar bills from his wallet): "I'll take it."

Friend: "Oh, no you don't. You bought the lunch."

These Days

The Disappearance Of Alex Rorke

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

This is a story that is hard to write, for it is about someone who had become a good friend.

Alexander Rorke Jr., the friend in question, is missing somewhere in the Caribbean region, along with his aircraft pilot, Geoffrey Sullivan. The two may be alive in some jungle in Honduras or on some self-imposed infiltration mission in Castro's Cuba or they may be dead — or, as one must hope, they may be safely returned to the U.S. by the time this column is in print. In any case, Alex Rorke, a brave man if there ever was one, should have some tribute.

The trouble with Alex is that he took freedom seriously. He had a vast number of friends among anti-Castro Cubans, and he wanted them to recover their country. He also had a family tradition to uphold — the tradition of fighting to forestall the triumph of Communism anywhere and everywhere it happens to threaten.

His father, Alexander Rorke Sr., formerly an assistant district attorney of New York County, indicted the original founders of the American Communist Party back in 1917, and Alex took his own anti-Communist mission as a filial duty. No doubt with considerable brashness, Alex felt it was morally right and necessary to carry on the battle against the Communist enemy even when the U.S. State Department, in pursuit of a "relaxation" of tensions, opposed it.

CUBAN INVASION

Alex was never the soul of discretion, which he regarded as a namby-pamby virtue. It was only a few short weeks ago that he sat in my living room in Cheshire, Conn., and outlined his hopes for helping his Cuban friends recapture Cuba. His pilot, Geoff Sullivan, who lives just over the hill from Cheshire in the neighboring city of Waterbury, was with him. The two had relinquished the idea that the U.S. would ever again be willing to permit anybody to mount raids on Cuba from Florida. But they persisted in hanging on to the prospect that the Cubans might be helped to build up an invasion force somewhere in Central America.

They wanted to be in on the overthrow of Castro if and when it should be permitted to happen. But to be of tangible assistance to the Cubans in Central America, Alex and Geoff Sullivan had first to recover a power boat and a good airplane which the U.S. government had confiscated because of suspicions that they had been used against Castro from Florida bases. To press the issue against the government, which refused to prefer any formal charges against him yet refused to return his property, Alex needed money.

Alex's plan was to rent a plane and, with Sullivan at the controls, to engage in an import-export business in the Caribbean area. The two were sanguine that money could be made by bringing tanks of rare tropical fish back to the U.S. for private aquariums. By carrying valuable quick cargo, Alex hoped to get enough money to continue the time payment on his sequestered boat, the Violynn III, and his sequestered plane and to pay for legal advice about getting them back.

When last heard from, Alex and his pilot had refueled a rented plane at the island of Cozumel off the coast of Yucatan. They had with them a Cuban whose name has been given as Garcia. They took off in the evening, at a dangerous hour, and have not been heard from in a month. They could be drowned, or they could have fallen into the hands of Castroites. Who knows?

Admittedly, Rorke and Sullivan are — or were — romantics. But when America ceases to produce such romantics, its doom will have been sealed. A search should be organized for them and, regardless of official opinion about their common sense, carried thru.

EAGER

Alex didn't think the government could prove that he had violated any law. But he was willing — and anxious — to take the risk of being proved guilty. He would never admit to me that he and Sullivan had taken off from mainland America on their flight which resulted in an unsuccessful bombing of Havana oil installations. But, no matter what the question of his guilt or innocence, he wanted a trial in order to compel certain U.S. officials to take the stand. He wanted them to submit to relevant questioning about the State Department policy of clamping down on private citizens whose sin is that they have taken our promises to the Cuban Bay of Pigs veterans seriously.

Nation's Press

Up Go Denver Taxes

From Rocky Mountain News

In its best city-father-know-best manner, City Council Monday night indicated citizens should be seen and not heard.

They passed a new city budget calling for expenditure of $47.3 million derived from a 22.4 mill levy — a hike of 3.6 mills.

Thus Council turned its back on strong and definitive criticism of Mayor Currigan's budget and tax hikes launched weeks ago by representatives of business, real estate interests and private citizenry.

The only public shot the people had at the budget was at Monday night's hearing — one that was salted away before it began. Only Councilman Paul Hentzell voted against the proposal — objecting primarily to a $1.1 million salary increase for city employes.

There had been definitive answers given to the councilmanic question: Where do we cut? These were given by the Colorado Public Expenditure Council, the Denver Chamber of Commerce, the Downtown Denver Improvement Association and the Denver Board of Realtors. But councilmen didn't listen.

Councilman Robert Keating, in answer to a query about a possible similar hike in taxes for 1965, said he believes a similar increase will be necessary next year.

There was slight consolation for the taxpayer — a pyrrhic victory — in that the mayor cut .9 mill off his original mill levy which began at 4.5 mills and was shaved down to 3.6 mills.

The mayor insisted — and Council back him solidly — that the progressive, do - something administration he promised would be possible only with the increase in taxes. Over public objection, he won his way.

We as a newspaper are obliged to hold him to his word and measure the performance he promises underwritten by the tax increase.

Fulbright Blasts Journalism; Urges New Look

WASHINGTON (AP)—A $250,000 Hollywood press junket has led to a suggestion by Sen. J.W. Fulbright that "the journalism profession take an honest look at its own practices."

Fulbright told the Senate in a speech Thursday that the junket came "at a time when the press is so quick to attach grave conflict-of-interest implications to the activities of others."

"Its responsibilities to the public in terms of honesty and integrity are not less than the responsibilities resting on those who served that same public as elective and appointed officials."

Fulbright referred in his speech to an account of the junket published Thursday in the New York Times. According to the story by reporter Murray Schumach, motion picture producer Stanley Kramer brought about 250 reporters to Hollywood from 26 countries and 53 cities in the United States. The finale of the four-day visit was a viewing Sunday night of Kramer's new picture "It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

The story said that five newspapers paid the expenses for their representatives.

Again referring to the Times account, Fulbright said:

"Transportation for all the others as well as their hotel rooms, food and liquor bills were all paid for by the movie maker.

"The financial 'hospitality' went so far that the movie maker even paid for the newsmen's cable and telephone charges run up sending stories—most of which the producer characterized as 'favorable'—back to their newspapers."

Fulbright is president of the Northwest Arkansas Times. He told a reporter later that he does not play an active role in the operation of the newspaper. Reached by telephone at Fayetteville, Editor Ted R. Wylie said no representative of the newspaper was on the junket.

The Times quoted Kramer as saying, "During this junket we received an enormous amount of space in newspapers and there is much more to come in the papers and on television. These stories and interviews will build up audience anticipation so that it hits a peak as our movie opens in major cities."

"I don't understand what he (Fulbright) means," Kramer told The Associated Press. "There's nothing new about a movie premiere like this. What's he objecting to?

"Is he hinting that I tried to color the reviews?

"I have never under any cirumtsances been in any position to damage the dignity and the prestige of the press. I don't think I'm in a position to do so.

"The press is guided by certain basic methods and traditions of operation, each individual newspaperman and newspaper.

"The basic idea of the trip, of course, was the publicization of the movie. But a lot of it had nothing to do with the movie. The newspaper people went to a television studio, saw Disneyland, were exposed to Hollywood as the entertainment capital of the world.

"I'm sure it gave them a great many ideas for stories, not just about the film. Surely there's nothing illegitimate about this."

Fulbright Blasts Journalism; Urges New Look

WASHINGTON (AP)—A $250,000 Hollywood press junket has led to a suggestion by Sen. J.W. Fulbright that "the journalism profession take an honest look at its own practices."

Fulbright told the Senate in a speech Thursday that the junket came "at a time when the press is so quick to attach grave conflict-of-interest implications to the activities of others."

"Its responsibilities to the public in terms of honesty and integrity are not less than the responsibilities resting on those who served that same public as elective and appointed officials."

Fulbright referred in his speech to an account of the junket published Thursday in the New York Times. According to the story by reporter Murray Schumach, motion picture producer Stanley Kramer brought about 250 reporters to Hollywood from 26 countries and 53 cities in the United States. The finale of the four-day visit was a viewing Sunday night of Kramer's new picture "It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

The story said that five newspapers paid the expenses for their representatives.

Again referring to the Times account, Fulbright said:

"Transportation for all the others as well as their hotel rooms, food and liquor bills were all paid for by the movie maker.

"The financial 'hospitality' went so far that the movie maker even paid for the newsmen's cable and telephone charges run up sending stories—most of which the producer characterized as 'favorable'—back to their newspapers."

Fulbright is president of the Northwest Arkansas Times. He told a reporter later that he does not play an active role in the operation of the newspaper. Reached by telephone at Fayetteville, Editor Ted R. Wylie said no representative of the newspaper was on the junket.

The Times quoted Kramer as saying, "During this junket we received an enormous amount of space in newspapers and there is much more to come in the papers and on television. These stories and interviews will build up audience anticipation so that it hits a peak as our movie opens in major cities."

"I don't understand what he (Fulbright) means," Kramer told The Associated Press. "There's nothing new about a movie premiere like this. What's he objecting to?

"Is he hinting that I tried to color the reviews?

"I have never under any circumtsances been in any position to damage the dignity and the prestige of the press. I don't think I'm in a position to do so.

"The press is guided by certain basic methods and traditions of operation, each individual newspaperman and newspaper.

"The basic idea of the trip, of course, was the publicization of the movie. But a lot of it had nothing to do with the movie. The newspaper people went to a television studio, saw Disneyland, were exposed to Hollywood as the entertainment capital of the world.

"I'm sure it gave them a great many ideas for stories, not just about the film. Surely there's nothing illegitimate about this."

Judge Moore Says Press Improves Court Acceptance

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Broadcasting and photographing of proceedings in courtrooms of Colorado has improved public understanding and confidence in the state's judicial system, Justice O. Otto Moore of the Colorado Supreme Court said Friday.

Moore, speaking to the Washington State Association of Broadcasters, attacked the American Bar Association's Canon 35 as a rule based on false fears and conceptions. The canon was adopted to prohibit the taking of pictures or broadcasting or telecasting of courtroom procedures.

Moore said he is regarded as a "black sheep" by many of his fellow ABA members. The Colorado jurist frequently has spoken out against Canon 35 as "completely unjustified."

After years of experience with photography, broadcasting and telecasting permitted in Colorado courts, Moore said, the state could not find one witness, one trial lawyer or one judge who would claim that the judicial system suffered because of a camera or microphone.

He said courtroom camera and broadcasting techniques used in Colorado make it virtually impossible for a witness, lawyer or judge to be consciously aware that the equipment is being used.

Moore said those who cling to the canon "have failed, neglected or refused to expose themselves to the information, evidence and demonstrations of progress which are available in this field."

Lowell Thomas in Detroit Hospital

DETROIT (UPI) — Famed news commentator Lowell Thomas suffered a mild heart attack and will be hospitalized for an indefinite period, his doctors said Friday.

Thomas, 71, complained of feeling ill and was admitted to Henry Ford Hospital early Thursday. Tests disclosed the heart attack.

He was in Detroit to attend a testimonial dinner at the Detroit Press Club for his longtime friend, George Pierrot, world traveler and pioneer of the 30-year-old world adventure (lecture) series.

Thomas has been a radio commentator for more than 33 years. He has also written extensively of his many world travels.

Postponement Granted Three in Kidnaping Case

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) —A second postponement was granted Friday in the arraignment of three men indicted on a charge of kidnaping a 10-year-old girl last July in northern New Mexico.

U.S. District Court Judge H. Vearle Payne granted the delay.

In asking for the postponement, defense attorney Charles Driscoll said he intended to file motions attacking the indictment and asking for its dismissal.

The indictment was returned against two Costilla brothers, Ernest S. DeHerrera, 33, and Billy DeHerrera, 25, and Patricio A. Abeyta, 17, Taos.

They are charged with taking a 10-year-old Pueblo, Colo., girl from a stalled car near the New Mexico - Colorado border and driving her into Colorado.

The first postponement was granted Oct. 25.

Judge Payne said the arraignment will be held as soon as the motions have been filed and ruled upon. He declined to lower the $25,000 bonds set for the three.

Private Business Laws Passed by Many States

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A question agitating Congress now already has been answered in many states.

The sharply debated issue among the federal legislators is whether the government should force private businesses catering to the public to accommodate all customers alike, whatever their race.

Most states already have laws aimed at doing just that.

Although Southern congressmen have assailed the "public accommodations" provisions of President Kennedy's civil rights bill as an unconstitutional infringement on private property, some of the state laws have withstood court tests.

About 30 states have them, predominantly in the North, Midwest and West but also in some border states. So do many cities.

However, none of the Deep South states has such statutes.

Elsewhere, laws banning discrimination at restaurants, hotels, theaters, barbershops or other businesses offering goods or services to the public are commonplace.

Some of them date back to the last century. Others have been newly passed or strengthened.

Enforcement varies.

Robert L. Carter, general counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says: "There are some states where the laws aren't worth the paper they are printed on but on the whole the state statutes are working out very well."

Stricter application and compliance was reported becoming increasingly general in recent times.

An intriguing note of the contrast between the congressional argument and the already existing situation in many states was pointed up in a reported exchange of correspondence between a congressman and a New York constituent.

The constituent wrote: "If you pass that Kennedy public accommodations law, it will destroy individual rights and ruin American free enterprise."

The congressman was said to have replied: "You already have a New York State law that is much more stringent than any federal legislation."

With similar laws prevailing in about 70 per cent of the states, several of them have recently enacted new and sharper regulations, in the face of the current drive for equal treatment of Negroes.

Some cities, in states lacking such statutes, have adopted their own measures, as in Kansas City, St. Louis, El Paso and Wilmington, Del. Many cities have antidiscrimination laws supplementing those of the state.

Generally the laws apply to all commercial establishments serving the public—taverns, motels, hospitals, golf courses, beauty parlors, stores, bowling alleys, swimming pools, movie houses, public conveyances, eating places.

Denying accommodation to any patron because of race, color, creed or national origin is forbidden.

Some state statutes also apply to housing rentals and employment.

Violators may be fined, imprisoned or both, but seldom are. Most states have extensive negotiation machinery for seeking to gain compliance before taking a complaint to court. Offenders usually agree to modify their practices.

Several states, including Ohio, Idaho, Nebraska, Connecticut, Illinois, New Hampshire, Maryland, Wyoming, Maine, Vermont and California, have recently enacted new public accommodations laws, or amended old ones to tighten implementation.

Five Are Executed In Castro's Cuba

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro's government executed five men Thursday night for slaying a militiaman. Local newspapers claimed the five were agents of the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency.

It was the second execution this week of alleged CIA agents.

Militiaman Vicente Perez was gunned down Oct. 23 on a farm near Havana. Those convicted by a military court for the slaying were Enrique Cruz Abreu, identified as the ringleader, Roberto Echavarria Martinez, Enrique Gonzalez Cepero, Osmany Prieto Vera and Ismael Merchante Heranndez.

A firing squad on Monday executed Francisco Duenas Landin, said to have been a member of the CIA espionage and sabotage band.

Atom Bombs Being Built by France

PARIS (AP)—France is turning out atomic bombs on an assembly-line basis and will continue nuclear tests to develop a hydrogen bomb regardless of protests at home and abroad, says Defense Minister Pierre Messmer.

He told the National Assembly Thursday the bombs had been coming off production lines since the middle of the year for France's Mirage IV planes.

A Gaullist deputy said 15 to 20 of the supersonic bombers would be operational by the end of 1964. Unofficial sources estimated last month that four to six Miraeg bombers had been turned over to the military.

Chalfant Rejects Spot With Pro Golf Assn.

DENVER (UPI)—Denver golf pro Noble Chalfant, whose Denver Open Golf Tournament has conflicted two years in a row "exhibitions" elsewhere said Friday he would not accept a vice presidency in the Professional Golfers Association.

"I'm tried of fighting with those people, so I could hardly work with them," Chalfant said.

Chalfant announced earlier this fall he was no longer sponsoring the Denver Open, which was played opposite the World Series of Golf last year and another exhibition this year.

The lack of a top field at Denver, which Chalfant said was siphoned off by the more lucrative "exhibitions," cost Denver $20,000, Chalfant said.

Chalfant indicated he doubted the Denver Open could be held again before 1965.

Driver Stopped After One Million Miles

SLOUGH, England (AP)—Garage owner William Sands was barred from driving Thursday after more than a million miles of motoring. It was his second conviction.

In 1904, he was fined for exceeding the speed limit of 8 miles per hour.

Thursday he was fined $70 and his license was suspended until he passes a driving test. Police said he drove carelessly out of a side road and caused two other cars to collide.

Sands, 84, said he would appeal.

Chalfant Rejects Spot With Pro Golf Assn.

DENVER (UPI)—Denver golf pro Noble Chalfant, whose Denver Open Golf Tournament has conflicted two years in a row "exhibitions" elsewhere said Friday he would not accept a vice presidency in the Professional Golfers Association.

"I'm tried of fighting with those people, so I could hardly work with them," Chalfant said.

Chalfant announced earlier this fall he was no longer sponsoring the Denver Open, which was played opposite the World Series of Golf last year and another exhibition this year.

The lack of a top field at Denver, which Chalfant said was siphoned off by the more lucrative "exhibitions," cost Denver $20,000, Chalfant said.

Chalfant indicated he doubted the Denver Open could be held again before 1965.

Driver Stopped After One Million Miles

SLOUGH, England (AP)—Garage owner William Sands was barred from driving Thursday after more than a million miles of motoring. It was his second conviction.

In 1904, he was fined for exceeding the speed limit of 8 miles per hour.

Thursday he was fined $70 and his license was suspended until he passes a driving test. Police said he drove carelessly out of a side road and caused two other cars to collide.

Sands, 84, said he would appeal.

Annual Cheyenne-St. Mary's Rivalry Today at 1:30 P.M.

The Cheyenne Mountain Indians, and the St. Mary's Pirates square off today in what could be called the city's Class Class AA answer to the Wasson-Palmer annual rivalry. The battle for prestige, which will be the Bucs' grid finale, is set for Cheyenne's new stadium at 1:30 p.m.

Prior to a siege of injuries which has taken no less than eight of Eldon Helm's key personnel, the Tribe rated a three touchdown favorite. Helm reports two of his starting backfield sidelined from the annual inter-city rivalry, including ramrod-fullback Greg Cramblit, who leads the PPL in touchdowns with 15 six-pointers, and halfback Chuck McGee. Both lads are presently confined to a hospital bed.

In addition, the Indians' fastest runner, Rob Richardson, is a doubtful starter because of a hip pointer. Others on the injury list include end Bill Massarand, halfbacks Rich McCurdy, Matt Sheldon, Rusty Arnold, and guard Mike Keplinger.

Both teams have wound up league action with enviable records. Cheyenne blasted all comers and ran away with the Pikes Peak League championship, racking up an impressive 8-0 mark. St Mary's ran into two snags in the Denver Parochial League with a 7-2 record.

Ever since the Pikes Peak League opened for business in September, the Indians have been on the war path. The Tribe rampaged thru the loop, cutting down one team after another, in posting a string of emphatic victories.

Cheyenne's offensive machine maintained a 53.1 point per game average until last Saturday, and the only reason the average fell was that they were forced to operate without three of their first string backs. Cramblit suffered a shin infection, Richardson was banged up on the game's first play, and McGee did not appear. Helm's group also failed to collect their 50 point quota against Air Academy, but the 74 points they gathered while sacking Manitou made up for the deficit.

Hard-charging fullback Cramblit leads the team in rushing with 700 yards, and stands second in scoring with 90 points.

But Cheyenne's triple-threat quarterback, Gary Graham will have to carry the Tribe's forward charge because of his injured teammates. Graham, who leads the league in scoring with 93 points, is always dangerous both on the ground and in the air. He is also the Indian's key man in the defensive secondary. Last week against Florence, Graham spearheaded the 27-0 triumph when he ran for two touchdowns, passed for another, and nabbed two pass interceptions.

The Indian defense is the same lofty variety as their offense. They have allowed only 32 points all season, which averages out to be a stingy four points per game.

Some of the Indians' opponents this year were considered to be potent on offense, or defense, or both. But they usually ran into the same tomahawking as did the loop's lesser threats. Second place Harrison, boasting the league's top runner in Lonnie Mayo, was completely stifled against Cheyenne's brassy defense, and the Panthers were left squirming in defeat to the tune of 55-0.

Less impressive on the score sheets, but equally deserving of analysis are Coach Chuck Haering's St. Mary's Pirates. The Bucs ended their Denver Parochial League campaign with a respectable 7-2 performance. They received their annual licking from Regis early in the season, and two weeks ago they were dripped by a spirited group of St. Joseph Bulldogs in a 13-6 surprise.

But the Pirates have already proved that they can knock heads with the toughies. The Bucs journeyed to the Mile High City a month ago and put in a sterling performance to shut out highly touted Mullen, 14-0.

And the Pirates have personnel of their own who are prime threats to the Indians' undefeated rating. Sam Zavatti, a hard-nosed fullback, leads the team in rushing and scoring. Zavatti owns 48 points and has 653 yards gained while being pinned for just seven yards.

Pirate passing has been on the upgrade under junior quarter back Jerry Knauf, who owns a 48.8 completion average for the year. The poised signal-caller has launched 47 aerials and completed 23 for 410 yards and five touchdowns.

Dave Grantz, a mountainous right end picked off an aerial in the Bucs' squeaker over St. Francis last Sunday. Cheyenne will also be busy with a fairy new addition to the Buc backfield, Dave Adamson, who has a knack for making holes when there are none.

On defense, again, the Pirates do not stand out as readily as Cheyenne. The Bucs have let 83 points seep thru their defenses.

Kadets, Widefield Post PPL Victories

Last year's defending Pikes Peak League champions from Air Academy High stormed past Fountain, 34-0, while the Gladiators of Widefield drubbed faltering Manitou Springs, 53-6, in Friday night's PPL slate.

Today's agenda calls for the PPL finale as the present loop runner-ups from Harrison host winless Leadville and Florence journeys to Salida. Meanwhile, the 1963 PPL champions, Cheyenne Mountain, entertains St. Mary's in a non-league game. A victory for Harrison would sew up the second place position in league standings for Terry MacKey's highly improved Panthers.

Fullback Rodney Coates, and halfback Claude Burke led the onslaught of the Mustangs as the two Widefield backs gather in all by one of the nine touchdowns.

Burke tallied the first two TDs of the contest, and finished the night with four six-pointers. Coates also gathered in four touchdowns to spearhead the overwhelming victory.

For Larry Olsen's Mustangs, George Wheeler grabbed an 18-yard pass from John Fletcher to avoid a shutout. The Manitou squad was completely dominated by the potent Gladiators. At halftime the Widefield team had accumulated 385 yards, while the Gladiator forward wall stifled the Mustangs to a minus nine yards.

Roger Karolick and Rob Stockhouse each tallied two touchdowns to spearhead the 34-0 victory over pesky Fountain. End Bill Culver added the final score on a 60-yard gallop.

Offensively, the Kadets picked up 304 total yards, while the Trojans had to settle for 125 yards.

BYU Frosh Wallops AFA, 44-0

Behind quarterback Virgial Carter's surperb passing, the BYU freshmen team walloped the Air Force Academy frosh, 44-0, Friday afternoon at the Cadet Lighted Field.

The Cougars exploded to compile 501 total yards, while the Falcons had to settle for 264 yards. But the home team did manage to come out ahead in first down tallied as the Academy frosh accumulated 13 to the victors' 12 first downs.

Carter was a continual menace to the Falcons. He passed for four touchdowns, threw two PAT aerials, and lugged the pigskin over for another PAT to help account for 40 points. In addition, Carter picked up 270 yards from his aerial bombardments, and gained 32 yards rushing for a total of 302 yards.

The Academy team failed to capalized on its lone scoring threat in the final quarter when they drove down to the BYU five-yard line only to yield to a stubborn Cougar line. This was the Falcons' fourth loss compared to only one victory in five outings.

Teague Leads Wasson Past Eagles

UP AND OVER — Mike Teague, Wasson's outstanding senior fullback, spills over the line for short yardage during the Thunderbirds' 12-7 South Central League victory over Pueblo East Friday night at Wasson Stadium. Teague, who already had broken the season rushing record, snapped the single game mark with 144 yards in raising his total for the year to 1,032. Wasson completed the campaign in second place in the SCL with an 8-2 record.

T-Birds End 8-2 Season As Bulldogs Grab Title

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Wasson concluded the 1963 football season Friday night minus the South Central League title it had held when the firing started nearly two months ago — but before 3,500 fans at Wasson Stadium, the Thunderbirds still bowed out like champions.

With fullback Mike Teague, one of the brightest stars in the galaxy of the northside school, strewing records in his path, Gib Funk's team pounded its way past Pueblo East 12-7 in a performance characteristic of the ones that produced eight victories in 10 starts this fall. That ranks as the finest overall record in Wasson's five year history.

One disappointing note hung over the Wasson gridiron Friday. While the Thunderbirds battled to keep their hopes of a title tie alive, Pueblo Centennial was washing away any chance with a smashing 48-0 triumph over South in Pueblo. The feat awarded the Bulldogs the crown and sends them into the AAA playoffs against the Denver League champ Nov. 23.

Wasson's windup triumph was especially rewarding for the coaching staff and players who had toiled thru another oustanding campaign. It erased much of the gloom hanging over the local camp after the 41-7 drubbing by Centennial a week ago. That the T-Birds could rebound with such a performance against a rugged East team was a tribute to all concerned.

The Thunderbirds actually dominated the action to an extent not indicated by the final score. The Springs' team amassed 344 yards of offense to 170 for the Eagles and ran up a whopping 21 first downs to just seven for the visitors. East's touchdown came on a brilliant 59 yard dash by fleet Bill Meeks in the final minute of the first half and aside from a third quarter march deep into Wasson territory, the Eagles had little else in the way of offense. In fact, they simply ddin't have the ball as the T-Birds exercised their ball control tactics to perfection, running 68 plays to just 35 for the Pueblo team.

Teague, in closing out an exceptional career, enjoyed his finest night. The smart-stepping Thunderbird fullback gained 144 yards in 28 carries to bring his total for the season to an astounding 1032. The evening's production eclipsed a single game rushing mark of 144 set by Doug Dienelt in 1961. Teague has smashed past the told season record of 869 (also by Dienelt) last weekend.

SCORING SUMMARY

East	0	7	0	0—7
Wasson	6	6	0	0—12

Wasson — Teague, three yard run. Kick failed.
Wasson — Scales, five yard pass from Chambers. Kick failed.
East — Meeks, 59 yard run. Aragon kick.

Combining with Teague was sharp quarterbacking by Clay Chambers and a fine all-around performance by halfback Jim Smith. "Smitty" gained 70 yards on 14 carries and picked off a pass that halted the final East threat at the Wasson nine.

Following the opening kick, East marched for one first down before stalling at midfield. Pat Rollison, back to punt, was forced to run by a low snap from center and was dropped at the Eagles' 44, setting Wasson up with an opportunity that the T-Birds cashed in quickly.

Wasson slammed downfield in 11 plays with a 12 yards pass from Chambers to Ron Nighswonger at the three setting up across on the next play. Chambers booted the point but offsetting penalties forced him to try again and this time the kick slid off to the right.

The Thunderbirds powered 75 yards to the East two the next time they handled the ball but the drive fizzled at that point, inches shy of a first down. Three downs later the Eagles were forced to punt and the ball was downed at the East 37.

This time Wasson moved across in six plays with Chambers firing to end John Scales for the final five yards. Chambers again missed the conversion attempt, however, under the harrassment of a strong rush.

That score came with 1:37 left in the half and it took East less than a minute to slide into the margin. The kick was returned to the 34 from where Meeks ripped to the 41 and then cracked over the middle on the following play, eluded several tacklers, and scampered to the end zone. John Aragon added the point.

Wasson had a third quarter drive carry to the East 16 but could move no father and the Eagles then launched a slick drive that looked like disastor as it moved to a first down at the Thunderbirds' nine. A clipping penalty applied the crusher at that point and Frank Albo fumbled away the ball at the 15 on the following play.

The T-Birds still had some anxious minutes, However. Chambers bobbled the ball and East recovered at the Wasson 28 early in the final period. Three plays afterwards, Smith picked off an aerial at the nine, tho, and Wasson then fired up a 19 play drive tha thad carried to the East two at the gun.

Alongi Takes Split Decision From Chuvalo

By CHARLES S. ALDINGER
United Press International

Referee Si Gottfriet warned Chuvalo five times for hitting on the break and for rabbit punches. He gave the fight to Alongi, 95-93, and said he took away the last round from Chuvalo on a rabbit punch.

Judge Bunny Lovitt gave the decision to Chuvalo, 99-23, and Jim Ruby scored it 95-93 for Alongi. The United Press International card had it 98-95 for Chuvalo.

Alongi weighed 207 pounds and Chuvalo 210.

Terrors Conclude SCL Slate Tonight

Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

PUEBLO— Colorado Springs Palmer, a strong contender for the South Central League title just two short weeks ago, will be attempting to salvage a first division berth out of its windup contest with Pueblo Central at Public Schools Stadium here tonight. Kickoff time for the game, which will officially close the regular SCL season, is 7:30 p.m.

The Terrors, flying high with five straight wins at mid-season, have one victory in their last four outings and that was by a slim 7-6 margin over Pueblo South. Since a 7-6 loss to Pueblo Centennial Oct. 11, the Tribe's problems have multiplied week by week. As injuries stacked up, the team went on to lose to Wasson 27-0 and to Trinidad 7-0 last weekend.

Still, Bill Westbay's team has already assured the school of its finest gridiron record since the old Colorado Springs High broke down into two spearate institutions in 1959. The six victories are one more than any of the previous four clubs managed and a win tonight would provide the team with an excellent final mark of 7-3.

Palmer will have to be braced for some stout warfare to pull it off. Central is one of the SCL's stronger teams and the Wildcats will have every intention of closing out their season on a successful note. Also in dispute is the third place spot in the final standings. Central and Palmer are currently tied for that position with tonight's winner assured of finishing there. Fate could be even worse for the loser than appears on the surface. If East upset Wasson Friday night, the vanquished club this evening will plunge into the second division.

As has been the case all too frequently during the last half of the campaign; Palmer will enter the Central game crippled by injuries. The worst trouble spot is at end where regular, Terry Elliott, hobbling much of the campaign, is definitely lost. So is his replacement, Pete Freeman, which means that the job will be turned over to Frank Wilson, 158 pound junior.

Palmer's backfield has also been injury plagued but Westbay expects to have his regular quartet available for starting duty. The all-senior group features quarterback Walt Hylton, halfbacks Alan Snyder and Jim Glaskin, and fullback Ray Cool. Junior Wardell Patterson, the team's top breakaway threat, alternates at the left halfback post.

To win tonight, the Tribe will obviously have to get more underway offensively than has been the case the past two weeks. Wasson and Trinidad both pinned shutouts on the Terrors, altho there were several opportunities to get over the goal in the first half of the Trinidad contest.

Much of the trouble has been in the line where the Terrors have not been getting the necessary blocking. Central will present another stout challenge in that department as the Wildcats have posted three shutout and only Wasson and Centennial have managed two touchdowns against the Pueblo club.

The Central attack is guided by senior quarterback Jim Soldano, who is in his third year as a regular. He saw some duty as a starter with the Wildcat's state championship team two seasons back. Top runners are fullback Bruce Heath and halfback Bill Chapparo but Wildcats also throw well, with Soldano especially adept at action-type passes.

Central will be trying to climb over the .500 mark in its final outing. The Wildcats have three victories and three losses for the campaign, along with ties with Pueblo Catholic (6-6), East (0-0), and Grand Junction (7-7).

PALMER STANDOUT — When Palmer's Terrors take the field for their final game of the 1963 season tonight in Pueblo, it will also mark the final appearance of Roderick Ross, a two-year standout at center for the Terrors. Ross has manned the pivot post and played defensively with equal skill since transferring here from Hawaii at the start of his junior year. The Terrors will be attempting to salvage a first division berth in the South Central League and a 7-3 overall record when they tangle with Central tonight.

DU-Canadian Game Here Cancelled

There has been one important change in the local collegiate hockey schedule, as announced earlier. The game between the University of Denver and the Canadian Olympic team, slated for the Broadmoor World Arena on Dec. 14 has been cancelled.

It has also been announced that the games between Denver's Pioneers and the Russian Olympic squad, set for Jan. 3 and 4, will be televised nationally. Plans now call for Friday night's game to be taped by the National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) and shown on Saturday afternoon. Original plans were to telecast the Saturday game live in the afternoon, but now that contest will be played at night.

Other games on the local schedule involving team preparing for the Winter Olympics this year will have Colorado College facing the United States team on Nov. 26 and 30 at the Broadmoor World Arena.

Colorado College, which opened practice last weekend, will open its slate in two weeks, against the CC Freshmen in Friday and Saturday night games, Nov. 22 and 23. The U.S. Olympic team is next on the schedule, followed by the first league game in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association against Michigan State, Dec. 20 and 21.

CC has been working out all this week on the school's new ice rink near Cossett Hall. The rink now gives the Tigers more than twice the practice time allowed when they only had the World Arena for drills.

Palmer Takes Wills Masters Lead

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Arnold Palmer, who just two weeks ago teamed with Jack Nicklaus to give the United States the Canada Cup "world championship," fired 77 Friday for a one - stroke lead at the halfway mark of the weather-beaten Wills Masters golf tournament.

Palmer's second-round score gives him a combined total of 145 for the two rounds, one over par and one stroke better than Australian Kel Nagle, the first-round leader.

Friday's play was marred by howling winds which at times reached gale intensity. Only one player, Australian Bruce Devlin, managed to equal par 72.

Player, the little South African, also shot a 77 as did Nicklaus. Player is third, two strokes behind Palmer with an aggregate score of 147.

Nicklaus, who only two days ago scored 62 on the same Lakes course in a practice round, took a disastrous nine on the long fifth hole—including seven strokes to reach the green.

Nicklaus, generally regarded as the tournament favorite after his individual victory in the Canada Cup, now has a total of 151.

The Thunderbirds actually dominated the action to an extent not indicated by the final score. The Springs' team amassed 344 yards of offense to 170 for the Eagles and ran up a whopping 21 first downs to just seven for the visitors. East's touchdown came on a brilliant 59 yard dash by fleet Bill Meeks in the final minute of the first half and aside from a third quarter march deep into Wasson territory, the Eagles had little else in the way of offense. In fact, they simply ddin't have the ball as the T-Birds exercised their ball control tactics to perfection, running 68 plays to just 35 for the Pueblo team.

Teague, in closing out an exceptional career, enjoyed his finest night. The smart-stepping Thunderbird fullback gained 144 yards in 28 carries to bring his total for the season to an astounding 1032. The evening's production eclipsed a single game rushing mark of 144 set by Doug Dienelt in 1961. Teague has smashed past the told season record of 869 (also by Dienelt) last weekend.

Combining with Teague was sharp quarterbacking by Clay Chambers and a fine all-around performance by halfback Jim Smith. "Smitty" gained 70 yards on 14 carries and picked off a pass that halted the final East threat at the Wasson nine.

Following the opening kick, East marched for one first down before stalling at midfield. Pat Rollison, back to punt, was forced to run by a low snap from center and was dropped at the Eagles' 44, setting Wasson up with an opportunity that the T-Birds cashed in quickly.

Wasson slammed downfield in 11 plays with a 12 yards pass from Chambers to Ron Nighswonger at the three setting up across on the next play. Chambers booted the point but offsetting penalties forced him to try again and this time the kick slid off to the right.

The Thunderbirds powered 75 yards to the East two the next time they handled the ball but the drive fizzled at that point, inches shy of a first down. Three downs later the Eagles were forced to punt and the ball was downed at the East 37.

This time Wasson moved across in six plays with Chambers firing to end John Scales for the final five yards. Chambers again missed the conversion attempt, however, under the harrassment of a strong rush.

That score came with 1:37 left in the half and it took East less than a minute to slide into the margin. The kick was returned to the 34 from where Meeks ripped to the 41 and then cracked over the middle on the following play, eluded several tacklers, and scampered to the end zone. John Aragon added the point.

Wasson had a third quarter drive carry to the East 16 but could move no father and the Eagles then launched a slick drive that looked like disastor as it moved to a first down at the Thunderbirds' nine. A clipping penalty applied the crusher at that point and Frank Albo fumbled away the ball at the 15 on the following play.

The T-Birds still had some anxious minutes, However. Chambers bobbled the ball and East recovered at the Wasson 28 early in the final period. Three plays afterwards, Smith picked off an aerial at the nine, tho, and Wasson then fired up a 19 play drive tha thad carried to the East two at the gun.

Kadets, Widefield Post PPL Victories

Last year's defending Pikes Peak League champions from Air Academy High stormed past Fountain, 34-0, while the Gladiators of Widefield drubbed faltering Manitou Springs, 53-6, in Friday night's PPL slate.

Today's agenda calls for the PPL finale as the present loop runner-ups from Harrison host winless Leadville and Florence journeys to Salida. Meanwhile, the 1963 PPL champions, Cheyenne Mountain, entertains St. Mary's in a non-league game. A victory for Harrison would sew up the second place position in league standings for Terry MacKey's highly improved Panthers.

Fullback Rodney Coates, and halfback Claude Burke led the onslaught of the Mustangs as the two Widefield backs gather in all by one of the nine touchdowns.

Burke tallied the first two TDs of the contest, and finished the night with four six-pointers. Coates also gathered in four touchdowns to spearhead the overwhelming victory.

For Larry Olsen's Mustangs, George Wheeler grabbed an 18-yard pass from John Fletcher to avoid a shutout. The Manitou squad was completely dominated by the potent Gladiators. At halftime the Widefield team had accumulated 385 yards, while the Gladiator forward wall stifled the Mustangs to a minus nine yards.

Roger Karolick and Rob Stockhouse each tallied two touchdowns to spearhead the 34-0 victory over pesky Fountain. End Bill Culver added the final score on a 60-yard gallop.

Offensively, the Kadets picked up 304 total yards, while the Trojans had to settle for 125 yards.

BYU Frosh Wallops AFA, 44-0

Behind quarterback Virgial Carter's surperb passing, the BYU freshmen team walloped the Air Force Academy frosh, 44-0, Friday afternoon at the Cadet Lighted Field.

The Cougars exploded to compile 501 total yards, while the Falcons had to settle for 264 yards. But the home team did manage to come out ahead in first down tallied as the Academy frosh accumulated 13 to the victors' 12 first downs.

Carter was a continual menace to the Falcons. He passed for four touchdowns, threw two PAT aerials, and lugged the pigskin over for another PAT to help account for 40 points. In addition, Carter picked up 270 yards from his aerial bombardments, and gained 32 yards rushing for a total of 302 yards.

The Academy team failed to capalized on its lone scoring threat in the final quarter when they drove down to the BYU five-yard line only to yield to a stubborn Cougar line. This was the Falcons' fourth loss compared to only one victory in five outings.

Alongi Takes Split Decision From Chuvalo

By CHARLES S. ALDINGER
United Press International

Referee Si Gottfriet warned Chuvalo five times for hitting on the break and for rabbit punches. He gave the fight to Alongi, 95-93, and said he took away the last round from Chuvalo on a rabbit punch.

Judge Bunny Lovitt gave the decision to Chuvalo, 99-23, and Jim Ruby scored it 95-93 for Alongi. The United Press International card had it 98-95 for Chuvalo.

Alongi weighed 207 pounds and Chuvalo 210.

Terrors Conclude SCL Slate Tonight

Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

PUEBLO— Colorado Springs Palmer, a strong contender for the South Central League title just two short weeks ago, will be attempting to salvage a first division berth out of its windup contest with Pueblo Central at Public Schools Stadium here tonight. Kickoff time for the game, which will officially close the regular SCL season, is 7:30 p.m.

The Terrors, flying high with five straight wins at mid-season, have one victory in their last four outings and that was by a slim 7-6 margin over Pueblo South. Since a 7-6 loss to Pueblo Centennial Oct. 11, the Tribe's problems have multiplied week by week. As injuries stacked up, the team went on to lose to Wasson 27-0 and to Trinidad 7-0 last weekend.

Still, Bill Westbay's team has already assured the school of its finest gridiron record since the old Colorado Springs High broke down into two spearate institutions in 1959. The six victories are one more than any of the previous four clubs managed and a win tonight would provide the team with an excellent final mark of 7-3.

Palmer will have to be braced for some stout warfare to pull it off. Central is one of the SCL's stronger teams and the Wildcats will have every intention of closing out their season on a successful note. Also in dispute is the third place spot in the final standings. Central and Palmer are currently tied for that position with tonight's winner assured of finishing there. Fate could be even worse for the loser than appears on the surface. If East upset Wasson Friday night, the vanquished club this evening will plunge into the second division.

As has been the case all too frequently during the last half of the campaign; Palmer will enter the Central game crippled by injuries. The worst trouble spot is at end where regular, Terry Elliott, hobbling much of the campaign, is definitely lost. So is his replacement, Pete Freeman, which means that the job will be turned over to Frank Wilson, 158 pound junior.

Palmer's backfield has also been injury plagued but Westbay expects to have his regular quartet available for starting duty. The all-senior group features quarterback Walt Hylton, halfbacks Alan Snyder and Jim Glaskin, and fullback Ray Cool. Junior Wardell Patterson, the team's top breakaway threat, alternates at the left halfback post.

To win tonight, the Tribe will obviously have to get more underway offensively than has been the case the past two weeks. Wasson and Trinidad both pinned shutouts on the Terrors, altho there were several opportunities to get over the goal in the first half of the Trinidad contest.

Much of the trouble has been in the line where the Terrors have not been getting the necessary blocking. Central will present another stout challenge in that department as the Wildcats have posted three shutout and only Wasson and Centennial have managed two touchdowns against the Pueblo club.

The Central attack is guided by senior quarterback Jim Soldano, who is in his third year as a regular. He saw some duty as a starter with the Wildcat's state championship team two seasons back. Top runners are fullback Bruce Heath and halfback Bill Chapparo but Wildcats also throw well, with Soldano especially adept at action-type passes.

Central will be trying to climb over the .500 mark in its final outing. The Wildcats have three victories and three losses for the campaign, along with ties with Pueblo Catholic (6-6), East (0-0), and Grand Junction (7-7).

PALMER STANDOUT — When Palmer's Terrors take the field for their final game of the 1963 season tonight in Pueblo, it will also mark the final appearance of Roderick Ross, a two-year standout at center for the Terrors. Ross has manned the pivot post and played defensively with equal skill since transferring here from Hawaii at the start of his junior year. The Terrors will be attempting to salvage a first division berth in the South Central League and a 7-3 overall record when they tangle with Central tonight.

Palmer Takes Wills Masters Lead

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Arnold Palmer, who just two weeks ago teamed with Jack Nicklaus to give the United States the Canada Cup "world championship," fired 77 Friday for a one-stroke lead at the halfway mark of the weather-beaten Wills Masters golf tournament.

Palmer's second-round score gives him a combined total of 145 for the two rounds, one over par and one stroke better than Australian Kel Nagle, the first-round leader.

Friday's play was marred by howling winds which at times reached gale intensity. Only one player, Australian Bruce Devlin, managed to equal par 72.

Player, the little South African, also shot a 77 as did Nicklaus. Player is third, two strokes behind Palmer with an aggregate score of 147.

Nicklaus, who only two days ago scored 62 on the same Lakes course in a practice round, took a disastrous nine on the long fifth hole—including seven strokes to reach the green.

Nicklaus, generally regarded as the tournament favorite after his individual victory in the Canada Cup, now has a total of 151.

DU-Canadian Game Here Cancelled

There has been one important change in the local collegiate hockey schedule, as announced earlier. The game between the University of Denver and the Canadian Olympic team, slated for the Broadmoor World Arena on Dec. 14 has been cancelled.

It has also been announced that the games between Denver's Pioneers and the Russian Olympic squad, set for Jan. 3 and 4, will be televised nationally. Plans now call for Friday night's game to be taped by the National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) and shown on Saturday afternoon. Original plans were to telecast the Saturday game live in the afternoon, but now that contest will be played at night.

Other games on the local schedule involving team preparing for the Winter Olympics this year will have Colorado College facing the United States team on Nov. 26 and 30 at the Broadmoor World Arena.

Colorado College, which opened practice last weekend, will open its slate in two weeks, against the CC Freshmen in Friday and Saturday night games, Nov. 22 and 23. The U.S. Olympic team is next on the schedule, followed by the first league game in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association against Michigan State, Dec. 20 and 21.

CC has been working out all this week on the school's new ice rink near Cossett Hall. The rink now gives the Tigers more than twice the practice time allowed when they only had the World Arena for drills.

Howard's MVP Award Tells Yanks Prowess

By OSCAR FRALEY
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Elston Howard's selection as the American League's Most Valuable Player is another example today of the long range planning which keeps the New York Yankees perennially on top.

Howard's case is, in a way, similar to that of Ralph Houk and so many others who labored long in the Yankee vineyards before receiving recognition. Houk was never better than a third string catcher with the Yankees but he bypassed the stars to become manager.

Howard was tabbed by the Yankees nine years ago as their first Negro player even though only in the last two years has he become the regular catcher.

Back in 1954 the NAACP picketed Yankee Stadium because the Yankees had no colored players. They tried to force the Yankees to bring up from their then Kansas City farm club a first baseman named Vic Power who had hit .349 in the American Association the previous year.

Howard was an outfielder and catcher on that same team and had batted only .286. But Yankee owner Dan Topping wasn't to be pressured and his remark of then is even more significant now.

"We are thinking in terms of Elston Howard, not Power, he said.

Two years later Howard was up with the Yankees. Power never made it with them and was traded off.

You can make a case for other players in this year's AL most valuable race but you can't get away from the fact that the Yankees breezed to the pennant by 10½ games with Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris out a great deal of the time.

Now you probably couldn't say that without Howard the Yanks wouldn't have won the pennant. But certainly his dependability, sturdiness and fine play as he became the top catcher in the major leagues was a significant factor in the Yankee stroll.

Admitting that it isn't a compelling selection, you still would have to contend that Howard deserved recognition as he finally emerged from under the shadow of Yogi Berra. Through seven worrisome years he never had a regular position. But he did fill the gap wherever they needed him, behind the plate, at first base or in the outfield.

Because of this maneuverability, he was much sought by other clubs each winter when trade talks arose. And each year he feared that, not making the varsity solidly, he would be traded away.

As Lou Gehrig for most of his career dwelt in the shade cast by Babe Ruth, so, too, did Howard languish behind Berra. But at no time were the Yankees inclined to let him go. He was to be the aging Berra's replacement and meanwhile his value increased because of the varied positions he could play.

In 1957 when Moose Skowron was hurt, he took over at first base in the World Series. In 1958 against the Braves, Norm Siebern was going bad in left field. Howard replaced him and the Yanks rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win the series.

Seldom spectacular but always rocks solid, Howard at last has earned his spurs. If you had to honor a Yankee because of the team's cakewalk, Howard deserved the recognition.

Rip Engle Frets Over Fumbles

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sports of all sorts:

Rip Engle, Penn State's worrisome football coach, is fretting because his team has fumbled 10 times this season . . . "That has got to stop if we're going to stay close to Ohio State Saturday," says Rip. "The boys must learn the football is the most precious thing on that field and they're just got to hang onto it."

Jack Price, who retired Carry Back from racing for the second time, has retired himself for the first time . . . "I'll never saddle another horse," says Jack, now an ex-trainer.

Nick Skorich, coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, is looking for his first victory Sunday over Allie Sherman of the New York Giants . . . They both became head coaches in '61 and Sherman is 5-0 over Nick so far.

Bo Belinsky of the Los Angeles Angels is working as a host in a Honolulu restaurant during the off-season and will do a night club act at Las Vegas starting Nov. 25 . . . Jim Bunting, Detroit pitcher, prefers a more serious sideline . . . He sells securities in Cincinnati and Louisville while waiting for spring training.

Pittsburg, at Notre Dame this week, credits an improved pass defense for its loftier rating this season . . Panthers surrendered 35 touchdowns on passes in 1961-62 but only three so far this season.

Since Ivy League footballers rarely rate much mention on major "all" teams at the end of the season, the scouts are beginning to check on Princeton fullback Cosmo Iacavazzi, current national scoring leader . . . Answer: He's one of the best, either on offense or defense.

Gene Mori, race horse breeder and owner of Garden State Park and Hialeah, last year "sold" a yearling named Tosmah to Tony Imbesi of Briardale Farms but the price never was fixed because they decided to wait and see how she turned out . . . Tosmah went on to become one of the top two-year-old fillies of 1963 and has won $121,188 . . . Finally it was agreed Imbesi will be allowed to choose between keeping the horse or the earnings but not both when her racing days are done . . . With good brood mare prospects still as scarce as ever, the betting is even money Imbesi will take the horse.

North Carolina's football team allowed only 62 points in its first seven games . . . Michigan State got exactly half that total against the Tar Heels in the second game of the season.

Bill's Lamonica Sidelined As Kemp Returns

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Daryle Lamonica, hero in the Buffalo Bills' 30-28 victory over the Denver Broncos, will sit on the bench in the Buffalo-Denver American Football League game here Saturday night, Coach Lou Saban said tonight.

Lamonica, who stepped in after regular quarterback Jack Kemp suffered strained neck muscles, threw two touchdown passes in a come-from-behind effort at Denver last Sunday.

Coach Lou Saban said Friday he would stick with Kemp, his regular quarterback for the latter half of last season and this year.

When asked whether he would use Lamonica, a rookie from Notre Dame, if Kemp had "one of those days", Saban answered:

"I would use Daryle only if Kemp appeared to be completely off. And by completely off, I don't mean a slow start."

A. J. Foyt Unofficially Sets '500' Speed Mark

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)— National driving champion A..J Foyt Friday became the first man in history to unofficially better 154 miles per hour at the Speedway.

Foyt, driving the same car in which he won the 1961 500-mile race, was clocked at 153.8 m.p.h. on his first lap during tire tests and then hit 154.5 m.p.h. on the second lap.

The unofficial record for the speedway was 153.5 m.p.h., set by Parnelli Jones in May during practice for the "500." Jones also holds the official one and four-lap Speedway records of 151.847 and 151.153 m.p.h. respectively.

Louisville Lip Says He's Ready for Physical

CHICAGO (UPI) — Heavyweight challenger Cassius Clay said Friday night that when the time comes for his Army draft-board physical examination, "I'll be there."

That was his reaction to Friday's announcement in his home town, Louisville, Ky., that he had been ordered to report for his initial pre-induction Nov. 21 —an order that might wreck his fabulously rich title fight with champion Sonny Lsiton in February.

Clay, stopping at a Chicago motel with his private bus — enroute to New York — confirmed that he had been ordered to appear for the physical examination.

Then he went Clayesque and wisecracked: "Looks like Uncle Sam wants to miss out on the tax money from 15 million dollars, don't it. Well, that's his lookout."

Meanwhile, at Baltimore, Bob Nilon — executive vice president of Inter-Continental Promotions, Inc. — said, "we are going right ahead with our plans for the February fight because we are confident that the United States government is too beneficent not to grant Clay a four-months-deferment so he can make the most of the greatest opportunity in his life—to fight for the world heavyweight crown and the wealth that goes with it."

Nilon, who explained that he had spent five and one-half years in the Army at the time of the Second World War — "four of them overseas"—emphasized:

"If his country was in a crisis now, I'm sure Clay would go into the Army immediately and we would urge him to. As it after the February fight, whether he wins or loses, he can be inducted."

Cowboys, Lobos Need WAC Win

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) —New Mexico speed runs head-on into traditional Wyoming hard-nosed football Saturday in a key Western Athletic Conference contest at University Stadium.

Lobo speed has only prevailed twice in the last nine meetings between the two schools—13-12 in 1958 and 25-21 last year — with both upset victories coming in Laramie.

The only time the Lobos have whipped Wyoming two years in a row was in 1952-53 by 7-0 and 9-7 scores.

Wyoming, with its usual grind em out running game and one of the finest passing games in the area ,is solidly favored to make sure UNM doesn't achieve back-to-back victories.

Both the Lobos and Cowboys must win Saturday to stay in the running for the WAC crown, a prize that Wyoming was unhappy to see UNM garner a year ago.

Academy Preps Bomb Penitentiary, 65-0

A 65-0 lathering of Colorado State Penitentiary brought the Air Force Academy Prep School's grid season to a close Friday night. The win gives the preps a 7-1 record for the season with their only loss coming at the hands of the Air Academy Junior Varsity.

The Prep School walloped the "Pen State" team picking up 609 rushing yards to the latter's 147. The Preps added 268 more yards in the air as they completed 10 out of 12 passes. Penitentiary gained 60 yards passing, which is a relatively small sum.

Several long runs contributed to Academy's landslide victory. Of these, John Gibson's "one-two punch" was the most outstanding. Gibson took the ball on two straight plays and picked up 76 yards and a touchdown.

Uncle Sam Wants Cassius Clay

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Uncle Sam may deliver a knock out blow that will hit Cassius Clay right square in the wallet.

The brash Louisville heavyweight faces a possibility of being knocked out of his scheduled fight for Sonny Liston's championship in February by induction into the Army.

The U.S. Selective Service Board here disclosed Friday that Clay has been sent a notice ordering him to report for his initial pre-induction physical examination Nov. 21.

Clay, reportedly en route to New York City from Denver in his private bus, was not immediately available for comment on the "greetings" from his draft board. Chances are when he is contacted by newsmen, the verbose Clay will be as nearly speechless as he's ever been.

Ironically, if the Clay-Liston title bout is postponed, the biggest loser would be Uncle Sam. The government's take from taxes would far exceed what Clay and Liston would get to keep.

Some ringsiders have estimated that the gross income from a Clay-Liston fight would be in the neighborhood of $10 million. Clay, himself, gradiosely sets the figure at $20 million.

Clay and Liston signed for the match last Tuesday in Denver, climaxing several months of on-and-off negotiations. The site of the encounter was not designated, nor was the precise date.

A spokesman from Clay's draft board ventured no opinion on when the Louisville Lip might be called to the Army, assuming he passes the physical.

However, he pointed out that Selective Service regulations require at least 21 days between the notification of acceptability and induction. It's possible the two noticies could be mailed at the same time, in which case Clay might find himself in khaki before the first of the year.

The draft board spokesman said a recent decree by President Kennedy which exempts married men has caused accelerated drafting of single men like Clay, who will be 22 years old Jan. 17.

Clay could obtain a postponement of induction up to 120 days, if he decides to go into the National Guard or the reserves and has a legitimate reason for deferment.

Bill Faversham, spokesman for Clay's sponsoring group of 11 prominent businessmen, said the group would ask a deferment of four to six months enabling the title - hungry fighter to keep his date with Liston.

"We don't want Clay to have something he isn't entitled to, but we feel this is an extenuating circumstance," Faversham explained. "If his entry into service were delayed a few months it would give him his big opportunity."

Weedin' Begins for Bowls Bid Pickin'

By GEORGE C. LANGFORD
UPI Sports Writer

The weedin' begins Saturday with pickin' time just three weeks off. The harvest includes Cotton, Orange, Rose and Sugar — Bowls.

More than two dozen college football teams will have their budding bowl hopes riding the outcome of clashes Saturday with critical post-season bowl prelates scruitinizing their performances.

A future Cotton Bowl invitation might be in the offing for the Texas-Baylor winner. The first - ranked Longhorns will match their sixth-rated ground offense (Texas has used more running plays than any other major team in the nation) against the nation's best passing attack, quarterbacked by the best passer and offensive leader, Don Trull of the Bears.

Eleventh-rated Baylor also has the No. 1 pass catcher among the major colleges — wingback Larry Elkins.

Texas is unbeaten in its last 18 games, including seven this season, but the last three wins have been a direct result of the stocking-foot of Tony Crosby, who has kicked 21 of 21 extra point attempts and chipped in with seven field goals this season. The Southwest Conference leadership also will go the the winner. Baylor is tied with the Longhorns with a 4-0 league mark.

The annual Elliott coaches feud is important nationally for the first time this season — especially should Pete's second-ranked Illinois crew win. Not only would it give Pete his first victory over brother Bump at Michigan but it would insure the Illini of remaining in at least a tie for the big 10 lead and a possible trip to the Rose Bowl.

Michigan State, No. 8, shares the Big 10 lead with the Illini and Ohio State. The Spartans, leading the nation in rushing defense and closing in on a league defensive record, tackle Purdue, the Big 10's most formidable offensive machine. Ohio State faces Penn State in a non-conference bout.

A pitchers' duel is advertised when Navy's Roger Staubach encounters Maryland's Dick Shiner. The Middies are No. 4 in the nation and a prime selection for several bowls with their 6-1 record.

Auburn, one of three major unbeaten-united teams, tangles with stubborn Mississippi State. The Tigers will be trying to improve their No. 5 rating and take the lead over Mississippi for the top spot in the Southeastern Conference. Both are looking for bowl berths.

Mississippi, No. 3, like Auburn has a 4-0 record in the SEC, but steps out of the conference to take another of its frequent "breathers," this time against Tampa.

Sixth - ranked Oklahoma and 10th-rated Nebraska, both undefeated in the Big Eight Conference, will be trying to impress Orange Bowl talent scouts. The Sooners play defense - minded Iowa State and Nebraska tests Kansas.

Notre Dame meets its second Eastern opponent in two weeks, hosting ninth-ranked Pittsburgh after being crushed by Navy.

Washington, winner of four straight after losing three in a row, engages California. The Huskies apparently are headed for the Rose Bowl behind quarterback Bill Douglas, who has completed 30 of 42 passes in the four wins for 508 yards and five touchdowns.

Robinson May Become Athletic Chairman of NY

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Jackie Robinson, the first Negro to play in major baseball leagues, is in line for appointment as chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, it was learned Friday.

One source said Gov. Nelson Rockefeller would name the former Brooklyn Dodger infielder to the $20,475-a-year state post "within the next month or so."

Robinson is expected to aid the governor's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

It was understood that Robinson would move his legal residence from Connecticut to New York City in order to clear up any question about appointing an out-of-stater to a top post in the New York government.

He would replace Melvin Krulewitch of New York as head of the three-member commission, which supervises professional boxing bouts and wrestling exhibitions.

Robinson said that he and Rockefeller had discussed the possible appointment "some time ago" and that "there was no commitment."

Cleveland-Pittsburgh Game Key National Football League Tilt

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

This is rematch time in pro football. The big one this weekend is the second go-around between the Cleveland Browns and the Pittsburgh Seelers at Pitt Stadium.

Before the National Football League swings into action with seven Sunday games —six of them rematches—the American Football League had Friday night's Oakland at Kansas City game and Saturday night's Denver at Buffalo pairing. The AFL also has two games Sunday with San Diego at Boston in a possible title preview and New York at Houston. All four are rematches.

The intense rivalry between Pittsburgh and Cleveland that always results in a large visiting delegation from Cleveland will sell out Pitt Stadium with 55,000 plus. It will be the largest pro crowd in Pittsburgh history.

Cleveland, leading the East by one game, needs to win to keep a step in front of the charging New York Giants, who are heavily favored to handle Philadelphia's battered Eagles with ease at Yankee Stadium. The Giants thumped the Eagles 37-14 in September.

The Browns, shaken by the Giants, leaned heavily on Jimmy Brown's running last week in Philadelphia when Frank Ryan was not hitting with his passes. The Steelers come off a rugged game with Green Bay, knowing they must win to stay alive. Jimmy Brown gained 175 yards when the Browns beat the Steelers 35-23 in October.

Incidentally, there will be five sellouts in the NFL—at Pittsburgh, New York, Chicago, Green Bay and Baltimore.

Chicago and Green Bay, steaming toward their second meeting Nov. 17 at Wrigley Field, are supposed to win without too much trouble. The Bears are at home to the Los Angeles Rams, a team they beat 52-14 earlier. The Packers entertain —if that is the word—the Minnesota Vikings, who gave them fits the first time around. The Packers finally won it 37-28 after Hank Gremminger had run 80 yards with a blocked field goal try.

St. Louis, now two games back in the Eastern race, will try to get back in stride against Washington at St. Louis. The Cardinals won the first time 21-7.

They may boo Johnny Unitas in Baltimore but they still show up. Another sellout will see the Colts take on the Detroit Lions for the second time in their last four games. Since shading the Lions 25-21, Oct. 20 the Colts have lost to Green Bay and Chicago.

The only new match on the NFL schedule is the East-West pairing of Dallas at San Francisco, two second division teams. The East leads 5-3 in the weekly series this year.

In the AFL rematches, the first time winners were Oakland 10-7 over Kansas City and Buffalo 30-28 over Denver, both last week. San Diego shaded Boston 17-13, and New York beat Houston 24-17, both in September.

Ray Floyd, Finsterwald Deadlocked

By CHARLES MAHER

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —Dow Finsterwald and Ray Floyd, both starting badly and finishing strongly, tied for the 36-hole lead Friday in the $50,000 Frank Sinatra Invitational Open Golf Tournament.

Each had a two-day score of 138, four under par.

Floyd, at 21 the youngest tournament winner on the PGA tour, bogied two of his first three holes, but picked up seven birdies later in the round and shot a 3-under-par 68.

Finsterwald took a double bogey on the first hole, and was three over par going to the fourth tee. He got five birdies the rest of the way and came in with a 69, the same score he had Thursday.

Floyd and Finsterwald were a stroke ahead of Billy Casper who scored a spectacular eagle-2 on the 16th and took a 70. He had a 69 Thursday.

A stroke behind Casper, at 140, were Frank Beard, Tommy Aaron, Dan Sikes, Phil Rodgers, Don Whitt and first-round leader Bob Rosburg. Rosburg shot a 4-under-par 67 Thursday but slipped to 73 Friday.

Only 13 players finished 36 holes under par. The field will be cut to 80 for the final 36 holes Saturday and Sunday. A score of 148 was needed to qualify for the last two rounds.

Bills Favorite to Top Broncos in AFL Play

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—It's been another of those years for the Pittsburgh Steelers — close but not close enough.

Standing in their line of frustration this Sunday are the Cleveland Browns, leading the National Football League's Eastern Conference by a game over the New York Giants. It says here that by Sunday evening, the Steelers will have yanked the Browns back into a first place tie.

Last week's Saturday-Sunday pickings turned up a 7-3 result, and a season mark of 55-25-2 for .687. Once more as the swan sings.

NFL

Pittsburgh 20, Cleveland 17—The Steelers just missed against the Browns earlier in Cleveland, without John Henry Johnson. The challenge of comparison with the great Jim Brown just might turn John Henry into a pile-drivin' man this time.

New York 38, Philadelphia 24—Y. A. is O. K. and the Giants' running game is starting to click, too. Only ball control beats the Giants and the Eagles too erratic for that.

Green Bay, 31, Minnesota 17—Eighth in a row for the Packers, who will start counting the hours until they can get at the Bears next week. Much of the pressure off John Roach, Bart Starr's sub, now that Jim Taylor back in top shape.

Chicago 28, Los Angeles 10—It won't be 52-14 like it was in their first meeting but Rams haven't improved THAT much. One chance for upset is that Billy Wade & Co. are looking ahead to Green Bay next week.

St. Louis 31, Washington 21—Bill Triplett and Joe Childress are hobbled but Charlie Johnson's passing is enough for Cards against the Redskin defense.

Detroit 27, Baltimore 20—Earl Morrall has given Lions' an attack to go with that tough defense. Colts could be down after tough games with the Packers and Bears last two weeks.

Dallas 24, San Francisco 17—Cowboys finally shaping up into something like what Tom Landry had in mind at the start of the season. They'll beat any team that doesn't give their defense too much pressure.

AFL

Buffalo 30, Denver 21 (Saturday night)—Bills did it at Denver last Sunday and they do it again back home as they continue late drive toward Eastern Division title.

Houston 24, New York 17—Jets concentrated on defense all week before last Saturday's 53-7 loss to San Diego. Oilers' pass game dominates with Jets' pass receivers ailing.

Boston 30, San Diego 24—The Chargers can lost this one and still win their division; the Patriots can't—and won't. Boston could take it all if Babe Parilli stays sound.

Oakland Topples K.C., 22-7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Tom Flores passed for two touchdowns and Mike Mercer kicked a pair of field goals Friday night to lead the Oakland Raiders to a 22-7 triumph over the Kansas City Chiefs in an American Football League game.

It was the fourth victory in a row for the Raiders, who beat the Chiefs 10-7 Sunday at Oakland. Defending champion Kansas City now has lost five straight. The Chiefs were a four-point favorite.

Oakland scored all its points in the first half. Mercer kicked field goals of 14 and 41 yards, and Flores tossed touchdown passes of 24 and 34 yadrs to Art Powell.

Oakland had a two-point safety late in the second period when Chief kicker Jerry Wilson punted from behind his end zone into goal post. Wilson retrieved the ball and tried to run it out, but Archi Matsos tackled him behind the goal.

Flores completed 12 of 23 passes for 148 yards. Halfback Clemon Daniels, Oakland's leading rusher, gained 122 yards on 31 carries.

Kansas City	0	0	7	0—7
Oakland	3	19	0	0—22

Scoring:
Oak — FG Mercer 14
Oak —FG Mercer 41
Oak — Powell 24 pass from Flores (Mercer kick)
Oak — Safety Wilson tackled in end zone
Oak — Powell 34 pass from Flores (Mercer kick)
KC — McClinton 4 run (Spikes kick)

Howard's MVP Award Tells Yanks Prowess

By OSCAR FRALEY
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Elston Howard's selection as the American League's Most Valuable Player is another example today of the long range planning which keeps the New York Yankees perennially on top.

Howard's case is, in a way, similar to that of Ralph Houk and so many others who labored long in the Yankee vineyards before receiving recognition. Houk was never better than a third string catcher with the Yankees but he bypassed the stars to become manager.

Howard was tabbed by the Yankees nine years ago as their first Negro player even though only in the last two years has he become the regular catcher.

Back in 1954 the NAACP picketed Yankee Stadium because the Yankees had no colored players. They tried to force the Yankees to bring up from their then Kansas City farm club a first baseman named Vic Power who had hit .349 in the American Association the previous year.

Howard was an outfielder and catcher on that same team and had batted only .286. But Yankee owner Dan Topping wasn't to be pressured and his remark of then is even more significant now.

"We are thinking in terms of Elston Howard, not Power, he said.

Two years later Howard was up with the Yankees. Power never made it with them and was traded off.

You can make a case for other players in this year's AL most valuable race but you can't get away from the fact that the Yankees breezed to the pennant by 10½ games with Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris out a great deal of the time.

Now you probably couldn't say that without Howard the Yanks wouldn't have won the pennant. But certainly his dependability, sturdiness and fine play as he became the top catcher in the major leagues was a significant factor in the Yankee stroll.

Admitting that it isn't a compelling selection, you still would have to contend that Howard deserved recognition as he finally emerged from under the shadow of Yogi Berra. Through seven worrisome years he never had a regular position. But he did fill the gap wherever they needed him, behind the plate, at first base or in the outfield.

Because of this maneuverability, he was much sought by other clubs each winter when trade talks arose. And each year he feared that, not making the varsity solidly, he would be traded away.

As Lou Gehrig for most of his career dwelt in the shade cast by Babe Ruth, so, too, did Howard languish behind Berra. But at no time were the Yankees inclined to let him go. He was to be the aging Berra's replacement and meanwhile his value increased because of the varied positions he could play.

In 1957 when Moose Skowron was hurt, he took over at first base in the World Series. In 1958 against the Braves, Norm Siebern was going bad in left field. Howard replaced him and the Yanks rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win the series.

Seldom spectacular but always rocks solid, Howard at last has earned his spurs. If you had to honor a Yankee because of the team's cakewalk, Howard deserved the recognition.

Rip Engle Frets Over Fumbles

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sports of all sorts:

Rip Engle, Penn State's worrisome football coach, is fretting because his team has fumbled 10 times this season ... "That has got to stop if we're going to stay close to Ohio State Saturday," says Rip. "The boys must learn the football is the most precious thing on that field and they're just got to hang onto it."

Jack Price, who retired Carry Back from racing for the second time, has retired himself for the first time ... "I'll never saddle another horse," says Jack, now an ex-trainer.

Nick Skorich, coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, is looking for his first victory Sunday over Allie Sherman of the New York Giants ... They both became head coaches in '61 and Sherman is 5-0 over Nick so far.

Bo Belinsky of the Los Angeles Angels is working as a host in a Honolulu restaurant during the off-season and will do a night club act at Las Vegas starting Nov. 25 ... Jim Bunting, Detroit pitcher, prefers a more serious sideline ... He sells securities in Cincinnati and Louisville while waiting for spring training.

Pittsburg, at Notre Dame this week, credits an improved pass defense for its loftier rating this season .. Panthers surrendered 35 touchdowns on passes in 1961-62 but only three so far this season.

Since Ivy League footballers rarely rate much mention on major "all" teams at the end of the season, the scouts are beginning to check on Princeton fullback Cosmo Iacavazzi, current national scoring leader ... Answer: He's one of the best, either on offense or defense.

Gene Mori, race horse breeder and owner of Garden State Park and Hialeah, last year "sold" a yearling named Tosmah to Tony Imbesi of Briardale Farms but the price never was fixed because they decided to wait and see how she turned out ... Tosmah went on to become one of the top two-year-old fillies of 1963 and has won $121,188 ... Finally it was agreed Imbesi will be allowed to choose between keeping the horse or the earnings but not both when her racing days are done ... With good brood mare prospects still as scarce as ever, the betting is even money Imbesi will take the horse.

North Carolina's football team allowed only 62 points in its first seven games ... Michigan State got exactly half that total against the Tar Heels in the second game of the season.

Bill's Lamonica Sidelined As Kemp Returns

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Daryle Lamonica, hero in the Buffalo Bills' 30-28 victory over the Denver Broncos, will sit on the bench in the Buffalo-Denver American Football League game here Saturday night, Coach Lou Saban said tonight.

Lamonica, who stepped in after regular quarterback Jack Kemp suffered strained neck muscles, threw two touchdown passes in a come-from-behind effort at Denver last Sunday.

Coach Lou Saban said Friday he would stick with Kemp, his regular quarterback for the latter half of last season and this year.

When asked whether he would use Lamonica, a rookie from Notre Dame, if Kemp had "one of those days", Saban answered:

"I would use Daryle only if Kemp appeared to be completely off. And by completely off, I don't mean a slow start."

A. J. Foyt Unofficially Sets '500' Speed Mark

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)— National driving champion A. J Foyt Friday became the first man in history to unofficially better 154 miles per hour at the Speedway.

Foyt, driving the same car in which he won the 1961 500-mile race, was clocked at 153.8 m.p.h. on his first lap during tire tests and then hit 154.5 m.p.h. on the second lap.

The unofficial record for the speedway was 153.5 m.p.h., set by Parnelli Jones in May during practice for the "500." Jones also holds the official one and four-lap Speedway records of 151.847 and 151.153 m.p.h. respectively.

Cowboys, Lobos Need WAC Win

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) —New Mexico speed runs head-on into traditional Wyoming hard-nosed football Saturday in a key Western Athletic Conference contest at University Stadium.

Lobo speed has only prevailed twice in the last nine meetings between the two schools—13-12 in 1958 and 25-21 last year — with both upset victories coming in Laramie.

The only time the Lobos have whipped Wyoming two years in a row was in 1952-53 by 7-0 and 9-7 scores.

Wyoming, with its usual grind em out running game and one of the finest passing games in the area ,is solidly favored to make sure UNM doesn't achieve back-to-back victories.

Both the Lobos and Cowboys must win Saturday to stay in the running for the WAC crown, a prize that Wyoming was unhappy to see UNM garner a year ago.

Louisville Lip Says He's Ready for Physical

CHICAGO (UPI) — Heavyweight challenger Cassius Clay said Friday night that when the time comes for his Army draft-board physical examination, "I'll be there."

That was his reaction to Friday's announcement in his home town, Louisville, Ky., that he had been ordered to report for his initial pre-induction Nov. 21 —an order that might wreck his fabulously rich title fight with champion Sonny Lsiton in February.

Clay, stopping at a Chicago motel with his private bus — enroute to New York — confirmed that he had been ordered to appear for the physical examination.

Then he went Clayesque and wisecracked: "Looks like Uncle Sam wants to miss out on the tax money from 15 million dollars, don't it. Well, that's his lookout."

Meanwhile, at Baltimore, Bob Nilon — executive vice president of Inter-Continental Promotions, Inc. — said, "we are going right ahead with our plans for the February fight because we are confident that the United States government is too beneficent not to grant Clay a four-months-deferment so he can make the most of the greatest opportunity in his life—to fight for the world heavyweight crown and the wealth that goes with it."

Nilon, who explained that he had spent five and one-half years in the Army at the time of the Second World War — "four of them overseas"—emphasized:

"If his country was in a crisis now, I'm sure Clay would go into the Army immediately and we would urge him to. As it after the February fight, whether he wins or loses, he can be inducted."

Academy Preps Bomb Penitentiary, 65-0

A 65-0 lathering of Colorado State Penitentiary brought the Air Force Academy Prep School's grid season to a close Friday night. The win gives the preps a 7-1 record for the season with their only loss coming at the hands of the Air Academy Junior Varsity.

The Prep School walloped the "Pen State" team picking up 609 rushing yards to the latter's 147. The Preps added 268 more yards in the air as they completed 10 out of 12 passes. Penitentiary gained 60 yards passing, which is a relatively small sum.

Several long runs contributed to Academy's landslide victory. Of these, John Gibson's "one-two punch" was the most outstanding. Gibson took the ball on two straight plays and picked up 76 yards and a touchdown.

Weedin' Begins for Bowls Bid Pickin'

By GEORGE C. LANGFORD
UPI Sports Writer

The weedin' begins Saturday with pickin' time just three weeks off. The harvest includes Cotton, Orange, Rose and Sugar — Bowls.

More than two dozen college football teams will have their budding bowl hopes riding the outcome of clashes Saturday with critical post-season bowl prelates scruitinizing their performances.

A future Cotton Bowl invitation might be in the offing for the Texas-Baylor winner. The first - ranked Longhorns will match their sixth-rated ground offense (Texas has used more running plays than any other major team in the nation) against the nation's best passing attack, quarterbacked by the best passer and offensive leader, Don Trull of the Bears.

Eleventh-rated Baylor also has the No. 1 pass catcher among the major colleges — wingback Larry Elkins.

Texas is unbeaten in its last 18 games, including seven this season, but the last three wins have been a direct result of the stocking-foot of Tony Crosby, who has kicked 21 of 21 extra point attempts and chipped in with seven field goals this season. The Southwest Conference leadership also will go the the winner. Baylor is tied with the Longhorns with a 4-0 league mark.

The annual Elliott coaches feud is important nationally for the first time this season — especially should Pete's second-ranked Illinois crew win. Not only would it give Pete his first victory over brother Bump at Michigan but it would insure the Illini of remaining in at least a tie for the big 10 lead and a possible trip to the Rose Bowl.

Michigan State, No. 8, shares the Big 10 lead with the Illini and Ohio State. The Spartans, leading the nation in rushing defense and closing in on a league defensive record, tackle Purdue, the Big 10's most formidable offensive machine. Ohio State faces Penn State in a non-conference bout.

A pitchers' duel is advertised when Navy's Roger Staubach encounters Maryland's Dick Shiner. The Middies are No. 4 in the nation and a prime selection for several bowls with their 6-1 record.

Auburn, one of three major unbeaten-united teams, tangles with stubborn Mississippi State. The Tigers will be trying to improve their No. 5 rating and take the lead over Mississippi for the top spot in the Southeastern Conference. Both are looking for bowl berths.

Mississippi, No. 3, like Auburn has a 4-0 record in the SEC, but steps out of the conference to take another of its frequent "breathers," this time against Tampa.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Tom Flores passed for two touchdowns and Mike Mercer kicked a pair of field goals Friday night to lead the Oakland Raiders to a 22-7 triumph over the Kansas City Chiefs in an American Football League game.

It was the fourth victory in a row for the Raiders, who beat the Chiefs 10-7 Sunday at Oakland. Defending champion Kansas City now has lost five straight. The Chiefs were a four-point favorite.

Oakland scored all its points in the first half. Mercer kicked field goals of 14 and 41 yards, and Flores tossed touchdown passes of 24 and 34 yadrs to Art Powell.

Oakland had a two-point safety late in the second period when Chief kicker Jerry Wilson punted from behind his end zone into goal post. Wilson retrieved the ball and tried to run it out, but Archi Matsos tackled him behind the goal.

Flores completed 12 of 23 passes for 148 yards. Halfback Clemon Daniels, Oakland's leading rusher, gained 122 yards on 31 carries.

Kansas City	0	0	7	0	—7
Oakland	3	19	0	0	—22

Scoring:
Oak — FG Mercer 14
Oak —FG Mercer 41
Oak — Powell 24 pass from Flores (Mercer kick)
Oak — Safety Wilson tackled in end zone
Oak — Powell 34 pass from Flores (Mercer kick)
KC — McClinton 4 run (Spikes kick)

Uncle Sam Wants Cassius Clay

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Uncle Sam may deliver a knock out blow that will hit Cassius Clay right square in the wallet.

The brash Louisville heavyweight faces a possibility of being knocked out of his scheduled fight for Sonny Liston's championship in February by induction into the Army.

The U.S. Selective Service Board here disclosed Friday that Clay has been sent a notice ordering him to report for his initial pre-induction physical examination Nov. 21.

Clay, reportedly en route to New York City from Denver in his private bus, was not immediately available for comment on the "greetings" from his draft board. Chances are when he is contacted by newsmen, the verbose Clay will be as nearly speechless as he's ever been.

Ironically, if the Clay-Liston title bout is postponed, the biggest loser would be Uncle Sam. The government's take from taxes would far exceed what Clay and Liston would get to keep.

Some ringsiders have estimated that the gross income from a Clay-Liston fight would be in the neighborhood of $10 million. Clay, himself, gradiosely sets the figure at $20 million.

Clay and Liston signed for the match last Tuesday in Denver, climaxing several months of on-and-off negotiations. The site of the encounter was not designated, nor was the precise date.

A spokesman from Clay's draft board ventured no opinion on when the Louisville Lip might be called to the Army, assuming he passes the physical.

However, he pointed out that Selective Service regulations require at least 21 days between the notification of acceptability and induction. It's possible the two noticies could be mailed at the same time, in which case Clay might find him self in khaki before the first of the year.

The draft board spokesman said a recent decree by President Kennedy which exempts married men has caused accelerated drafting of single men like Clay, who will be 22 years old Jan. 17.

Clay could obtain a postponement of induction up to 120 days, if he decides to go into the National Guard or the reserves and has a legitimate reason for deferment.

Bill Faversham, spokesman for Clay's sponsoring group of 11 prominent businessmen, said the group would ask a deferment of four to six months enabling the title - hungry fighter to keep his date with Liston.

"We don't want Clay to have something he isn't entitled to, but we feel this is an extenuating circumstance," Faversham explained. "If his entry into service were delayed a few months it would give him his big opportunity."

KEEP YOUR WATER BALANCE

It has been said that too much of anything, including water is poisonous. The middle aged patient of a colleague of mine found this out after drinking 30 to 50 quarts of soda pop daily, including up to 90 cola drinks.

He was admitted to the hospital bloated and in a state of uremia. His kidneys refused to work and, for several days, he could not produce a drop of urine. As a result, he was unusually fatigued and suffered from nausea and vomiting. In addition, he was confused, restless, and agitated. The condition became so serious, the medicos considered using an artificial kidney. But his own renal organs finally responded and eliminated the excess fliud.

The usual causes for increased thirst, including diabetes, were investigated but the tests showed no abnormalties along this line. The patient was overweight, had heart disease, gout, and some evidence of renal infection. These disorders may have hastened the appearance of symptoms of poisoning.

The medical literature has many reports on water intoxication. Five years ago we wrote about two Seattle, Wash., men who developed an unquenchable thirst. One consumed glass after glass of water until he had convulsions. The other drank hot water at the rate of one glass every 5 minutes for 2 hours, in an attempt to cure constipation. He became so irrational and agitated he had to be committed to a psychiatric ward. Both men recovered within a few days.

Water intoxication occurs because the individual takes in more liquid than the kidneys can excrete. The brain becomes swollen and convulsions usually ensue. The heart and kidneys may be normal and no evidence of diabetes insipidus or other glandular disorders exists. The condition is a nervous disorder in which the victim is driven by a compulsion to drink more and more fluid.

Thirst is one of the best guides to the need for water. Civilized man has been led to believe that he drinks too little water and, as a result, some suffer from an excess. In addition, the amount consumed is based on what pleases his palate rather than his thirst.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics is stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Reactions To Cortisone

F. G. writes: Can cortisone, taken over a long period, cause a person to do things he would not normally do?

Reply

Not unless the cortisone leads to a mental disorder. Many users of this hormone become euphoric and feel more secure or brazen than they would normally. Toxicity leads to emotional irritability, manic psychoses, or depressed states.

Pep From Thyroid

Mrs. B. writes: My doctor has prescribed daily thyroid tablets because the gland is sluggish. Since taking them I have difficulty sleeping at night. Is this the usual reaction to this drug?

Reply

No. I doubt if the medicine is responsible unless you are feeling better and getting ideas that keep you awake.

Hpercritical

J. C. writes: Is there any illness that makes a person highly critical of everyone and everything about him?

Reply

Anyone who is emotionally upset or not feeling up to par may be hypercritical of others. The same applies to the mentally deranged.

Large Seed

R. P. writes: Are apricot seeds poisonous to eat?

Reply

No, but they are a bit too big to swallow.

Fair Manager Asks Funds for Construction

DENVER (UPI)—Officials of the Colorado State Fair asked the Legislature's Joint Budget Committee Friday to appropriate $133,516 from the General Fund for the 1964 State Fair at Pueblo.

Fair Manager Clyde Fugate also requested $224,271 for capital construction.

Fugate presented a total 1964 budget of $340,000. Fair revenues would pay the difference.

During the current fiscal year, the Legislature appropriated $92,500 from the General Fund and provided for no capital construction.

Fugate also asked a supplemental appropriation of $26,397 he said is needed because the Legislature cut the 1963 Budget request.

Rep. Oakley Wade, R - Las Animas, chairman of the committee, said he could give no assurance that the supplemental appropriation would be made. Several committee members missed the meeting.

Fugate urged favorable action because "Colorado deserves a whale of a good fair." The capital construction request includes $75,000 to convert the poultry building to cafeteria, $30,000 to pipe natural gas to the grounds for heating and $45,000 to surface a parking lot.

Being Actor's Wife Difficult, TV Star Says

By DICK KLEINER

NEW YORK, (NEA) — Jack Ging paid a high price for his career. Only now, as the psycholgist on The Eleventh Hour, is he beginnig to reap the rewards.

"You have to pay a price for everything you really want," says Ging. "I wanted to be an actor."

"There was the price of waiting — selling books door to door, clerking in a liquor store, not making it as an actor, while you watch people you know you can act rings around getting ahead.

"And all along I and my wife have to take it. We were college sweethearts. (Ging was a football star at Oklahoma.) And old friends would would come to Los Angeles, men who had gone into business and were very successful. They'd talk about their two cars. And the golf clubs they belonged to. And houses. And my wife who was used to those things, would have to listen. Things like that are more important to a girl than to a man.

"And, later, there was the price of pride. Like walking out on a show because it didn't give you a chance, and risking being blackballed in the industry. Walking out on Wells-Fargo."

Ging paid these prices. He says he paid them easily. And he says it was his college football coach, Bud Wilkinson, who gave him the clue.

"On our squad," he says, "there were fifth-string players who never got into a game. They could have been first-string at many other colleges. Wilkinson made them believe that they would get their break some day — and that they would have to be ready when the break came. So I knew my break would come, and I'd be ready. When you believe that, you can pay any price."

Being a master of ceremonies? An easy job, says Bill Cullen.

It looks easy the way Bill handles things on The Price Is Right. And he says it's so easy that he can't understand the problems networks seem to have in finding new MCs.

"Whenever the networks have a new show," he says, "they always complain that all the MCs are working, and that they can't find a new one. That's nonsense — anybody in show business can be an MC. All you need is to be reasonably O.K. in appearance and to have a good voice. The rest you pick up as you go.

"The hardest things to learn are pace and anticipation. And the only way to learn them is through experience. You'll learn how to anticipate the good things and the possible problems."

Cullen says that once a new MC has a steady job, his work is bound to improve.

"When you have job security," he says, "that helps. If you know you'll be back on the show the next day, you don't have to press so hard. When a contestant says something funny, you don't have to try to top him."

Cullen admits that doing The Price Is Right is very easy for him. And sitting on the panel of I've Got a Secret is even easier.

"I don't have to do a thing," he says, "except show up."

State Patrol Asks Increase 'n 1964 Budget

DENVER (AP)—The Colorado State Patrol requested Friday a 1964 budget of $4,583,623, up 4.7 per cent from the current year's appropriation of $4,381,118.

Patrol Chief Gilbert Carrel told the legislature's Joint Budget Committee that of the increase, 2.6 per cent is for annual salary increments.

He requested the addition of three new employes—two radio technicians and one clerk. They are to be hired in connection with the installation of additional radio and microwave stations at Montrose and Durango.

Carrel noted that of the total budget increase, 1.9 per cent is actually for operations, and this was due to the additional radio stations.

Carrel said also that the International Association of Chiefs of Police had recommended that the patrols' complement be increased to 441 officers compared with the present 337 uniformed personnel authorized. "But we're not asking for more now —we'll do the best with what we have," Carrel said, adding that the state has 50,000 automobile registrations each year.

KEEP YOUR WATER BALANCE

It has been said that too much of anything, including water is poisonous. The middle aged patient of a colleague of mine found this out after drinking 30 to 50 quarts of soda pop daily, including up to 90 cola drinks.

He was admitted to the hospital bloated and in a state of uremia. His kidneys refused to work and, for several days, he could not produce a drop of urine. As a result, he was unusually fatigued and suffered from nausea and vomiting. In addition, he was confused, restless, and agitated. The condition became so serious, the medicos considered using an artificial kidney. But his own renal organs finally responded and eliminated the excess fliud.

The usual causes for increased thirst, including diabetes, were investigated but the tests showed no abnormalties along this line. The patient was overweight, had heart disease, gout, and some evidence of renal infection. These disorders may have hastened the appearance of symptoms of poisoning.

The medical literature has many reports on water intoxication. Five years ago we wrote about two Seattle, Wash., men who developed an unquenchable thirst. One consumed glass after glass of water until he had convulsions. The other drank hot water at the rate of one glass every 5 minutes for 2 hours, in an attempt to cure constipation. He became so irrational and agitated he had to be committed to a psychiatric ward. Both men recovered within a few days.

Water intoxication occurs because the individual takes in more liquid than the kidneys can excrete. The brain becomes swollen and convulsions usually ensue. The heart and kidneys may be normal and no evidence of diabetes insipidus or other glandular disorders exists. The condition is a nervous disorder in which the victim is driven by a compulsion to drink more and more fluid.

Thirst is one of the best guides to the need for water. Civilized man has been led to believe that he drinks too little water and, as a result, some suffer from an excess. In addition, the amount consumed is based on what pleases his palate rather than his thirst.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics is stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

Reactions To Cortisone

F. G. writes: Can cortisone, taken over a long period, cause a person to do things he would not normally do?

Reply

Not unless the cortisone leads to a mental disorder. Many users of this hormone become euphoric and feel more secure or brazen than they would normally. Toxicity leads to emotional irritability, manic psychoses, or depressed states.

Pep From Thyroid

Mrs. B. writes: My doctor has prescribed daily thyroid tablets because the gland is sluggish. Since taking them I have difficulty sleeping at night. Is this the usual reaction to this drug?

Reply

No. I doubt if the medicine is responsible unless you are feeling better and getting ideas that keep you awake.

Hpercritical

J. C. writes: Is there any illness that makes a person highly critical of everyone and everything about him?

Reply

Anyone who is emotionally upset or not feeling up to par may be hypercritical of others. The same applies to the mentally deranged.

Large Seed

R. P. writes: Are apricot seeds poisonous to eat?

Reply

No, but they are a bit too big to swallow.

Fair Manager Asks Funds for Construction

DENVER (UPI)—Officials of the Colorado State Fair asked the Legislature's Joint Budget Committee Friday to appropriate $133,516 from the General Fund for the 1964 State Fair at Pueblo.

Fair Manager Clyde Fugate also requested $224,271 for capital construction.

Fugate presented a total 1964 budget of $340,000. Fair revenues would pay the difference.

During the current fiscal year, the Legislature appropriated $92,500 from the General Fund and provided for no capital construction.

Fugate also asked a supplemental appropriation of $26,397 he said is needed because the Legislature cut the 1963 Budget request.

Rep. Oakley Wade, R - Las Animas, chairman of the committee, said he could give no assurance that the supplemental appropriation would be made. Several committee members missed the meeting.

Fugate urged favorable action because "Colorado deserves a whale of a good fair." The capital construction request includes $75,000 to convert the poultry building to cafeteria, $30,000 to pipe natural gas to the grounds for heating and $45,000 to surface a parking lot.

Being Actor's Wife Difficult, TV Star Says

By DICK KLEINER

NEW YORK, (NEA) — Jack Ging paid a high price for his career. Only now, as the psychologist on The Eleventh Hour, is he beginnig to reap the rewards.

"You have to pay a price for everything you really want," says Ging. "I wanted to be an actor."

"There was the price of waiting — selling books door to door, clerking in a liquor store, not making it as an actor, while you watch people you know you can act rings around getting ahead.

"And all along I and my wife have to take it. We were college sweethearts. (Ging was a football star at Oklahoma.) And old friends would would come to Los Angeles, men who had gone into business and were very successful. They'd talk about their two cars. And the golf clubs they belonged to. And houses. And my wife who was used to those things, would have to listen. Things like that are more important to a girl than to a man.

"And, later, there was the price of pride. Like walking out on a show because it didn't give you a chance, and risking being blackballed in the industry. Walking out on Wells-Fargo."

Ging paid these prices. He says he paid them easily. And he says it was his college football coach, Bud Wilkinson, who gave him the clue.

"On our squad," he says, "there were fifth-string players who never got into a game. They could have been first-string at many other colleges. Wilkinson made them believe that they would get their break some day — and that they would have to be ready when the break came. So I knew my break would come, and I'd be ready. When you believe that, you can pay any price."

Being a master of ceremonies? An easy job, says Bill Cullen.

It looks easy the way Bill handles things on The Price Is Right. And he says it's so easy that he can't understand the problems networks seem to have in finding new MCs.

"Whenever the networks have a new show," he says, "they always complain that all the MCs are working, and that they can't find a new one. That's nonsense — anybody in show business can be an MC. All you need is to be reasonably O.K. in appearance and to have a good voice. The rest you pick up as you go.

"The hardest things to learn are pace and anticipation. And the only way to learn them is through experience. You'll learn how to anticipate the good things and the possible problems."

Cullen says that once a new MC has a steady job, his work is bound to improve.

"When you have job security," he says, "that helps. If you know you'll be back on the show the next day, you don't have to press so hard. When a contestant says something funny, you don't have to try to top him."

Cullen admits that doing The Price Is Right is very easy for him. And sitting on the panel of I've Got a Secret is even easier.

"I don't have to do a thing," he says, "except show up."

State Patrol Asks Increase 'n 1964 Budget

DENVER (AP)—The Colorado State Patrol requested Friday a 1964 budget of $4,583,623, up 4.7 per cent from the current year's appropriation of $4,381,118.

Patrol Chief Gilbert Carrel told the legislature's Joint Budget Committee that of the increase, 2.6 per cent is for annual salary increments.

He requested the addition of three new employes—two radio technicians and one clerk. They are to be hired in connection with the installation of additional radio and microwave stations at Montrose and Durango.

Carrel noted that of the total budget increase, 1.9 per cent is actually for operations, and this was due to the additional radio stations.

Carrel said also that the International Association of Chiefs of Police had recommended that the patrols' complement be increased to 441 officers compared with the present 337 uniformed personnel authorized. "But we're not asking for more now —we'll do the best with what we have," Carrel said, adding that the state has 50,000 automobile registrations each year.

Woman Fails To Appear; Fined $50

A woman who failed to appear in Municipal Court Friday was fined a total of $50 after Judge Allan Asher ordered that the trial proceed in the absence of the defendant.

Violet Wilson, 41, of 331 N. Logan St. was fined $25 for speeding and another $25 for a signal light violation. Colorado Springs Police Officer Henry Fryer testified against Mrs. Wilson.

Fryer ticketed her on Sept. 17 at N. Circle Drive and Palmer Park Boulevard.

George Bell, 25, no address, and Alfred Quinn, 33, no address, were both given 15-day jail sentences for vagrancy. Police officer Donald L. Watts testified against Quinn.

The judge continued the case of James Dillion, 21, of Chicago, until Nov. 15. Dillion is also charged with vagrancy.

The cases against two men charged with riotous conduct and breach of the peace were dismissed. Richard Weber, 40, of 534 E. Rio Grande St., and Oliver Harris, 20, of 639 E. Maple St. had been charged with the offenses. The judge dismissed the cases at the request of the complaining witness after City Attorney Robert Issac said he had no objection.

The case of James Cirton, 27, of 222 Pueblo Ave., was continued until Nov. 21. Cirton has pleaded not guilty to a signal light violation.

Police officer Charles Maloney testified against Billie Brooks, 22, of 538 E. Rio Grande St., who was charged with drunkeness.

Brooks was found guilty and fined $35. However, Judge Asher suspended half of the fine on condition that Brooks not appear before the court on a similar offense for a period of one year.

Morris Lopez, 39, of 2417 W. Kiowa St. pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkeness and was given a 10-day jail sentence. Carl Rentie, 41, (no address given) was fines $25 for drunkeness.

Another man charged with drunkeness, Robert Christian, 34, of 115 S. 23rd St., failed to appear to answer the charge. The judge ordered that Christian's $25 bond be forfeited.

Judge Places Defendant on Probation

Wardell Harden Patterson, guilty of accessory during the fact to larceny, received a suspended sentence of one year in county jail and was placed on probation Friday by District Judge G. Russell Miller.

Patterson, 43, of 415 S. Weber St. had his charge amended to the lesser offense.

The defendant was accessory to a companion case, Gary Paul Caster, 24, no permanent address, who was given probation Aug. 9 for burglary.

He stole a cash register and money worth a total of $160 from Vinyards Bay Service, 31 W. Colorado Ave. June 26.

James M. Dillon, 21, of Ft. Carson was also placed on probation after he pleaded guilty earlier to conspiracy.

Dillon conspired with Douglas Miles Connor to defraud the Broadmoor Hotel out of $85, May 14.

Connor, 19, of 2004 E. Jackson St. was sent to the state reformatory July 26 for his part in the offense.

Herman A. Ratner appeared for the district attorney's office.

22 Entries Set For Carson Fall Horse Show

Twenty-two entries have been received for the annual Fall horse show and gymkhana to be held Sunday, at Ft. Carson by the Cavalier Riding Club. The show is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. at the Carson stables.

Events will include both English and western type contests according to Hugh Trabandt, manager of the riding stables.

Ample parking space for cars and trailers will be available.

Four ribbons per event will be awarded with a cup going to the high-point winner of western events.

Providing entertainment will be the 179th Army band.

Elected to fill vacancies on the Cavalier board of directors were Col. (Ret.) W. S. Bowers, Mrs. John Spooner, and M. Sgt. Dayton Hare.

Denver Man Fined $200 In JP Court

Manuel Mesa, 32, of Denver was fined $200 and costs by Justice of the Peace H. C. McShane Friday for driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Mesa was arrested Nov. 2 on U. S. Highway 85-87 by State Patrolman A. G. Murin.

Charles S. Ballard, 24, of Ft. Carson paid a $6 fine and costs for being without a valid operator's license when driving on U. S. Highway 85-87 Oct. 29. The officer was State Patrolman Robert DeFelice.

DeFelice also cited Samuel A. Tafoya, 39, of 2122 W. Bijou St. for driving a vehicle with no emergency lighting equipment. The violation happened Oct. 8 on North Nevada Avenue and a $5 fine and costs was imposed.

Failing to give information after an accident on Brookside Street Oct. 1 resulted in a $20 fine and costs for Loren Leroy Swaim, 42, of 4212 E. Brookside St. J. D. Morrissey was the state patrolman.

Sophia Augusta Meckauer, 75, of 600 Cheyenne Blvd. received a $10 fine and costs for failing to yield the right of way on Colorado Highway 115 Oct. 31. Morrissey was the officer.

Careless driving on Morningside Drive Sunday cost Judith Jane Hereford, 16, of 823 Starlet Dr. $15 and costs. State Patrolman Ken Smith issues the summons.

Donald Creed Fox was cited for driving on the wrong side of the road and being without a valid operator's license. Fox, 26, of 2221 E. Uintah St. who was fined $15 and costs, was given the ticket by State Patrolman Pete Thiel.

Thomas Morrison Carnegie Jr. 17, of 10 Crossland Rd., was charged with careless driving and fined $15 and costs. He was ticketed Nov. 2 on 8th Street by State Patrolman Ken Smith.

Two Withdraw Pleas in District Court

Two defendants withdrew their pleas in District Court Friday.

The first was Jack D. Nash, 30, of Dalhart, Tex. charged with no account check.

The defendant previously pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity but a subsequent examination by Dr. Paul Draper found him sane. He withdrew the insanity plea but still stands on the innocent plea and will be tried Dec. 17.

He is alleged to have given a $25 no account check to Safeways Store Inc. July 13.

James Albert Browder's attorney, Bruce Craig withdrew from the case and Robert Dunlap was appointed in his place.

Browder, 21, of Ft. Carson, is accused of indecent liberties and according to information made an assault upon a 7-year-old girl. The incident is said to have happened Sept. 14 at the house where the defendant was staying. Arraignment was continued to Nov. 15.

Hunter D. Hardeman was the judge and Richard Webster the deputy district attorney.

Denver Youths Get Suspended Jail Sentences

Two Denver youths, John M. Monohan, 18, and Mark Loras, 19, pleaded guilty in Justice of the Peace James F. Quine's court Friday to malicious mischief and received a suspended sentence of six months each in county jail.

They broke four lights between Palmer Lake and Monument belonging to Intermountain REA Oct. 25. The equipment was worth $148.50.

The defendants were ordered to make full restitution and pay $7 costs each.

Man Wanted in Florida Is Picked Up Here

In response to a call from the sheriff's office, Orlando, Fla. Sheriff Earl L. Sullivan's office arrested Donald Blume, 33, of Orlando, Fla. Thursday night.

Blume is wanted for grand larceny.

Sullivan received a description of the vehicle the defendant was driving and the arrest was made by Deputy Sheriff Franklin T. Ripey who finaly located the wanted man at the Rodeo Court, 3024 N. Nevada Ave.

HARD MAN TO KEEP DOWN—Even tho he has been hospitalized twice from heart attacks, City Traffic Engineer Don L. Smith is currently recuperating in St. Francis Hospital and is able to do some light administrative and paper work from his bed. Here he is doing some dictating to Dorothy Agee, secretary in the Traffic Engineering Department, even as a nurse, Mrs. Shirley Dankesreiter, prepares to check his blood pressure. Smith's physician permits him to do the paper work as long as the traffic engineer continues to show improvement and provided he doesn't overdo it. Smith is showing decided improvement and hopes that he can be back on a full time basis at City Hall before too long.

Four New Sirens To Be Installed For Civil Defense

Three additional civil defense warning sirens will be installed within the next two to three months, it was announced Friday by Charles W. Willoughby, city-county civil defense director.

There were 21 sirens were installed in the fall of 1959 "but additional ones are needed now because of the growth of the city and in fringe areas," he said.

One of the new sirens will be located in Cragmoor near the Katherine Lee Bates School while another will be at Bijou Street and Chelton Road. The third is to be installed in Stratmoor Hills.

The one in Stratmoor Hills will have a dual purpose in that different from the civil defense warning, will be used for fire alarm purposes for the Stratmoor Hills fire district. The extra cost of this fire signal will be paid by the fire district.

Willoughby said there is $10,000 budgeted for the siren installation.

Biersach and Niedermeyer Co., Milwaukee, Wis., recently submitted a low bid of $7,605 to supply the three sirens. There was only one other bidder.

Man Booked Into Jail After Hassle

John Caulder, 27, of 128 E. Navajo St. was booked into county jail Friday for alleged assault and battery and bonded out shortly afterwards, the sheriff's department reported.

According to Deputy Sheriffs Charles Dietsche and Bob Newman, Caulder was at the Navajo Hogan night club and drinking heavily in the small hours of Thursday morning.

He kept trying to start an argument with the waitress, Sarah Berce, and demanded she go out with him. Finally, the report says, he became very abusive, used profanity, struck her several times and dragged her round the room by the hair.

Other employees came to her rescue and Caulder left and was picked up later in the day.

Judge Takes Suit Under Advisement

A $50,000 suit was taken under advisement Friday by District Judge William M. Calvert after a seven-day hearing.

The case concerns Frank H. and Helen M. Weatherly who have brought an action against Albert N. and Beatrice M. Gregerson and concerns an exchange of land, the Pla-Mor Mobile Village at 3100 Wood Ave. for an 80-acre tract of land in Illinois.

The Weatherlys allege the defendants falsely represented the area of the local tract as 13 acres instead of 10.97.

Group Would Set Assessment At 25 Per Cent

By STEPHEN M. AUG

DENVER (AP) — A special legislative committee voted Friday to set 25 per cent tentatively as the percentage of actual value at which property would be assessed for taxation.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Rep. Palmer Burch, R-Denver, is working on a proposed bill to establish a basis for property taxation. Last fall, voters repealed a constitutional provision requiring property to be assessed at full cash value.

The provision never has been carried out. Figures gathered by the state through the urban sales ratio program indicate that in recent years property has been assessed at about 28 per cent of its current sale price.

The suggestion to set a tentative percentage came from Rep. Ray Simpson, R-Cope, who said that such a figure would awaken interest in the committee's activities and bring further word from local assessors and other officials.

The committee debated the proposal for about one hour, mostly to overcome Burch's objections. He did not want a figure set, but preferred to get additional opinions from both other committee members and from outside sources.

It had been predicted for some time that the figure ultimately set by the committee would be between 20 and 30 per cent. Excluded from this provision are oil and gas properties and producing mines.

Simpson told committee members that the percentage chosen should be the same as the present assessed valuation. He said that a survey he'd made in Kit Carson and Washington counties showed that 27 per cent represented a good average.

Other committee members suggested 30 per cent, and Rep. Betty Kirk West, D-Pueblo, noted that in her area 35 per cent appeared to be the norm. But she said she did not necessarily favor such a figure.

Committee members also noted that the proposed legislation includes utility companies which are currently assessed at between 30 and 35 per cent of their value. The possibility of a sizable revenue loss if a much lower percentage was decided upon was also mentioned.

Before committee members voted, Burch suggested a compromise 27.5 per cent figure. The final vote was 6-4 in favor of the 25 per cent figure.

Driver Injured As Car Leaves Road

Alton R. Richardson, 32, of Ft. Carson, was injured when he ran his car off the road into a barrow pit, side-swiped a telephone pole, knocked down two fence posts, and came to a stop in a section of barbed wire fence.

The state patrol reported that the accident occurred one mile north of Security on Colorado 27 about 2:30 a.m., Friday.

Richardson suffered possible fracture of the left foot and laceration of the left side of the head, according to the state patrol. He was taken to the Ft. Carson Hospital.

Car damage was estimated at approximately $700 by the state patrol.

Commissioners Answer On Trianon Zoning

The Board of County Commissioners issued a statement Friday relative to the Trianon property. The Board's statement follows:

"A vote of 252 to 1 against rezoning the Trianon, and cast by the people of El Paso County is responsible for the present dilemma of the Trianon Foundation. The Board of County Commissioners denied the zoning on the basis of this vote.

"At a public hearing held two and one-half years ago, John Metzger of the Trianon Foundation applied for the creation of a new zone in El Paso County to be known as R-H (Residence Historical). His petition was considered by the Board of County Commissioners at a public hearing, which was well publicized and in which all residents of El Paso County were invited to participate.

"No particular area was entitled to any more representation than any other area as this question was of county-wide interest. The hearing was held in a packed court room, and after much testimony on each side, the vote was taken. Those residents of El Paso Coutny which showed enough interest to come to this hearing voted the proposal down by the ratio of 252 to 1.

"Had this zone been created it would have allowed for a museum in a residential district and the Trianon could then have petitioned to change from its present R (Residence) to the new R-H (Historical) zone, at which time the wishes and desires of the immediate neighborhood would have been the prime consideration. Whether changing the Trianon to this historical zone would have relieved the financial problems of the Trianon Foundation is problematical. The failure of the Trianon appears to be strictly a matter of dollars and cents and the lack of interest by the people of El Paso County.

"The Board of County Commissioners are anxious that the Trianon should not be destroyed and stands ready and willing at any time to receive a petition from this foundation for any zone change it may desire. This petition must originate with the owner of the property rather than the Board of County Commissioners.

"It is contrary to our form of government for the Commissioners to force rezoning upon any porperty owner who has no desire to be rezoned. Metzger has shown no inclination to rezone the Trianon since the public turned his petition down two and one-half years ago.

"At that time Metzger threatened to dismantle the Trianon, haul it to Denver and reerect it in the Tri-County area. Apparently this was only a threat as it did not materialize. Since that time Mr. Metzger has subdivided the Trianon property into building sites and filed a plat of this development with the County Planning Department. None of the 24 lots which he shows on his plat have been sold, and it therefore would appear foolish to tear the building down to gain five or six more lots to add to these 24 unsold building sites.

"If Metzger feels that rezoning the Trianon will bail him out of his financial troubles, he should immediately petition the county for whatever zone he may consider compatible with his plans.

"The Board of County Commissioners will be governed by the desires of the residents of this county and of the immediate neighborhood, but it should be clearly understood that a negative vote of 252 to 1 would probably again prohibit the Trianon Foundation from obtaining its commercial type zoning.

"Any and all petitions, requests and complaints should be directed to Mr. Metzger as El Paso County cannot force a zone change upon him without his consent and the approval of the taxpayers of El Paso County."

Two May Face Prosecution On Krebiozen

CHICAGO (AP)—The federal government took action Friday that could lead to prosecution of Drs. Andrew C. Ivy and Stevan Durovic for claiming the drug Krebiozen is effective in the treatment of cancer.

The Food and Drug Administration directed them to appear at an informal closed hearing Nov. 18 in Chicago to show cause why they should not be prosecuted.

A spokesman for the agency said a hearing officer can recommend that the case be referred to the Department of Justice if it appears federal law has been violated.

Dr. Ivy, physiologist and chief scientific sponsor of the drug, said he welcomed a hearing.

"The whole campaign against Krebiozen has been one of misrepresentation made possible by deliberate concealment of facts by those in authority," he said in a statement.

"It is high time that the real facts be developed by correct judicial procedures. This will show the effectiveness of Krebiozen in the treatment of some hopeless cancer patients."

Krebiozen was developed by Dr. Durovic, a former Yugoslav physician.

Controversy began to swirl about the substance soon after it was introduced in March 1951 at a news conference in Chicago.

The American Medical Association said in 1951 the drug had no beneficial effects.

The FDA said Sept. 7 this year that an analysis showed Krebiozen was nothing more creatine, a chemical normally present in human bodies.

The National Cancer Institute said Oct. 15 that 24 specialists had evaluated the 504 "best cases" treated with Krebiozen and found the drug to be of no benefit.

The federal government banned Krebiozen from interstate shipment.

Notices of the hearing also were sent to Marko Durovic, brother of Stevan; Dr. William F. P. Phillips, a Chicago physician; and the Krebiozen Research Foundation.

Burglars Hit Springs Store

The Colorado Springs Lerner's Shops, Inc., 7 N. Tejon St., was burglarized Thursday night, according to the police.

Woman Fails To Appear; Fined $50

A woman who failed to appear in Municipal Court Friday was fined a total of $50 after Judge Allan Asher ordered that the trial proceed in the absence of the defendant.

Violet Wilson, 41, of 331 N. Logan St. was fined $25 for speeding and another $25 for a signal light violation. Colorado Springs Police Officer Henry Fryer testified against Mrs. Wilson.

Fryer ticketed her on Sept. 17 at N. Circle Drive and Palmer Park Boulevard.

George Bell, 25, no address, and Alfred Quinn, 33, no address, were both given 15-day jail sentences for vagrancy. Police officer Donald L. Watts testified against Quinn.

The judge continued the case of James Dillion, 21, of Chicago, until Nov. 15. Dillion is also charged with vagrancy.

The cases against two men charged with riotous conduct and breach of the peace were dismissed. Richard Weber, 40, of 534 E. Rio Grande St., and Oliver Harris, 20, of 639 E. Maple St. had been charged with the offenses. The judge dismissed the cases at the request of the complaining witness after City Attorney Robert Issac said he had no objection.

The case of James Cirton, 27, of 222 Pueblo Ave., was continued until Nov. 21. Cirton has pleaded not guilty to a signal light violation.

Police officer Charles Maloney testified against Billie Brooks, 22, of 538 E. Rio Grande St., who was charged with drunkeness.

Brooks was found guilty and fined $35. However, Judge Asher suspended half of the fine on condition that Brooks not appear before the court on a similar offense for a period of one year.

Morris Lopez, 39, of 2417 W. Kiowa St. pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkeness and was given a 10-day jail sentence. Carl Rentie, 41, (no address given) was fines $25 for drunkeness.

Another man charged with drunkeness, Robert Christian, 34, of 115 S. 23rd St., failed to appear to answer the charge. The judge ordered that Christian's $25 bond be forfeited.

HARD MAN TO KEEP DOWN—Even tho he has been hospitalized twice from heart attacks, City Traffic Engineer Don L. Smith is currently recuperating in St. Francis Hospital and is able to do some light administrative and paper work from his bed. Here he is doing some dictating to Dorothy Agee, secretary in the Traffic Engineering Department, even as a nurse, Mrs. Shirley Dankesreiter, prepares to check his blood pressure. Smith's physician permits him to do the paper work as long as the traffic engineer continues to show improvement and provided he doesn't overdo it. Smith is showing decided improvement and hopes that he can be back on a full time basis at City Hall before too long.

Four New Sirens To Be Installed For Civil Defense

Three additional civil defense warning sirens will be installed within the next two to three months, it was announced Friday by Charles W. Willoughby, city-county civil defense director.

There were 21 sirens were installed in the fall of 1959 "but additional ones are needed now because of the growth of the city and in fringe areas," he said.

One of the new sirens will be located in Cragmoor near the Katherine Lee Bates School while another will be at Bijou Street and Chelton Road. The third is to be installed in Stratmoor Hills.

The one in Stratmoor Hills will have a dual purpose in that different from the civil defense warning, will be used for fire alarm purposes for the Stratmoor Hills fire district. The extra cost of this fire signal will be paid by the fire district.

Willoughby said there is $10,000 budgeted for the siren installation.

Biersach and Niedermeyer Co., Milwaukee, Wis., recently submitted a low bid of $7,605 to supply the three sirens. There was only one other bidder.

Youth Sentenced To Reformatory

It had been predicted for some time that the figure ultimately set by the committee would be beween 20 and 30 per cent. Excluded from this provision are oil and gas properties and producing mines.

Simpson told committee members that the percentage chosen should be the same as the present assessed valuation. He said that a survey he'd made in Kit Carson and Washington counties showed that 27 per cent represented a good average.

Other committee members suggested 30 per cent, and Rep. Betty Kirk West, D-Pueblo, noted that in her area 35 per cent appeared to be the norm. But she said she did not necessarily favor such a figure.

Committee members also noted that the proposed legislation includes utility companies which are currently assessed at between 30 and 35 per cent of their value. The possibility of a sizable revenue loss if a much lower percentage was decided upon was also mentioned.

Before committee members voted, Burch suggested a compromise 27.5 per cent figure. The final vote was 6-4 in favor of the 25 per cent figure.

Driver Injured As Car Leaves Road

Alton R. Richardson, 32, of Ft. Carson, was injured when he ran his car off the road into a barrow pit, side-swiped a telephone pole, knocked down two fence posts, and came to a stop in a section of barbed wire fence.

The state patrol reported that the accident occurred one mile north of Security on Colorado 27 about 2:30 a.m., Friday.

Richardson suffered possible fracture of the left foot and laceration of the left side of the head, according to the state patrol. He was taken to the Ft. Carson Hospital.

Car damage was estimated at approximately $700 by the state patrol.

Commissioners Answer On Trianon Zoning

The Board of County Commissioners issued a statement Friday relative to the Trianon property. The Board's statement follows:

"A vote of 252 to 1 against rezoning the Trianon, and cast by the people of El Paso County is responsible for the present dilemma of the Trianon Foundation. The Board of County Commissioners denied the zoning on the basis of this vote.

"At a public hearing held two and one-half years ago, John Metzger of the Trianon Foundation applied for the creation of a new zone in El Paso County to be known as R-H (Residence Historical). His petition was considered by the Board of County Commissioners at a public hearing, which was well publicized and in which all residents of El Paso County were invited to participate.

"No particular area was entitled to any more representation than any other area as this question was of county-wide interest. The hearing was held in a packed court room, and after much testimony on each side, the vote was taken. Those residents of El Paso Coutny which showed enough interest to come to this hearing voted the proposal down by the ratio of 252 to 1.

"Had this zone been created it would have allowed for a museum in a residential district and the Trianon could then have petitioned to change from its present R (Residence) to the new R-H (Historical) zone, at which time the wishes and desires of the immediate neighborhood would have been the prime consideration. Whether changing the Trianon to this historical zone would have relieved the financial problems of the Trianon Foundation is problematical. The failure of the Trianon appears to be strictly a matter of dollars and cents and the lack of interest by the people of El Paso County.

"The Board of County Commissioners are anxious that the Trianon should not be destroyed and stands ready and willing at any time to receive a petition from this foundation for any zone change it may desire. This petition must originate with the owner of the property rather than the Board of County Commissioners.

"It is contrary to our form of government for the Commissioners to force rezoning upon any porperty owner who has no desire to be rezoned. Metzger has shown no inclination to rezone the Trianon since the public turned his petition down two and one-half years ago.

"At that time Metzger threatened to dismantle the Trianon, haul it to Denver and reerect it in the Tri-County area. Apparently this was only a threat as it did not materialize. Since that time Mr. Metzger has subdivided the Trianon property into building sites and filed a plat of this development with the County Planning Department. None of the 24 lots which he shows on his plat have been sold, and it therefore would appear foolish to tear the building down to gain five or six more lots to add to these 24 unsold building sites.

"If Metzger feels that rezoning the Trianon will bail him out of his financial troubles, he should immediately petition the county for whatever zone he may consider compatible with his plans.

"The Board of County Commissioners will be governed by the desires of the residents of this county and of the immediate neighborhood, but it should be clearly understood that a negative vote of 252 to 1 would probably again prohibit the Trianon Foundation from obtaining its commercial type zoning.

"Any and all petitions, requests and complaints should be directed to Mr. Metzger as El Paso County cannot force a zone change upon him without his consent and the approval of the taxpayers of El Paso County."

Two May Face Prosecution On Krebiozen

CHICAGO (AP)—The federal government took action Friday that could lead to prosecution of Drs. Andrew C. Ivy and Stevan Durovic for claiming the drug Krebiozen is effective in the treatment of cancer.

The Food and Drug Administration directed them to appear at an informal closed hearing Nov. 18 in Chicago to show cause why they should not be prosecuted.

A spokesman for the agency said a hearing officer can recommend that the case be referred to the Department of Justice if it appears federal law has been violated.

Dr. Ivy, physiologist and chief scientific sponsor of the drug, said he welcomed a hearing.

"The whole campaign against Krebiozen has been one of misrepresentation made possible by deliberate concealment of facts by those in authority," he said in a statement.

"It is high time that the real facts be developed by correct judicial procedures. This will show the effectiveness of Krebiozen in the treatment of some hopeless cancer patients."

Krebiozen was developed by Dr. Durovic, a former Yugoslav physician.

Controversy began to swirl about the substance soon after it was introduced in March 1951 at a news conference in Chicago.

The American Medical Association said in 1951 the drug had no beneficial effects.

The FDA said Sept. 7 this year that an analysis showed Krebiozen was nothing more creatine, a chemical normally present in human bodies.

The National Cancer Institute said Oct. 15 that 24 specialists had evaluated the 504 "best cases" treated with Krebiozen and found the drug to be of no benefit.

The federal government banned Krebiozen from interstate shipment.

Notices of the hearing also were sent to Marko Durovic, brother of Stevan; Dr. William F. P. Phillips, a Chicago physician; and the Krebiozen Research Foundation.

Burglars Hit Springs Store

The Colorado Springs Lerner's Shops, Inc., 7 N. Tejon St., was burglarized Thursday night, according to the police.

Nathan Sidon, manager of the store, said that approximately $70 was taken from the petty cash box.

Fifty duplex electrical receptacles, to the value of $85, were taken sometime betwen Tuesday and Thursday from the Cooper Theater, which is under construction at 17 S. Nevada Ave., according to a report made to the police.

The receptacles were the property of the Berwick Electric Co., 129 Costilla St., said the police.

Benet Hill Academy to Hold Open House

Benet Hill Academy, 2555 Chelton Road, will hold open house for residents of Colorado Springs and surrounding area as well as for parents and prospective students between four and seven p.m. Sunday. Students and Faculty will be hostess at that time.

On Monday the Bendictine Sisters of Benet Hill Priory will have Open House for the Clergy and Sisters of Colorado Springs. A buffet supper will be served at this time.

Benet Hill Academy, with a present enrollment of 38, will add one year each succeeding term until it becomes a full four-year senior High School. Freshmen follow a regular ninth grade schedule of Religion, English, Latin, World History, Algebra, Speech, Physical Education and Chorus. Sophomores are enrolled in Religion, English, Geometry, Biology, Latin II, Speech, Physical Education and Chorus.

Extracurricular organizations include Student Council, Sodality, a Latin Club affiliated with the Junior Classical League, a Sports Club and a Press Club. Sister Clarita sponsors the Sodality and Latin Club while the Press Club under its Moderator, Sister Paula, produces "Benevents" a monthly school paper.

In addition to the two above mentioned faculty members and the principal, Sister Liguori, the faculty included Rev. James Mahrer, O. S. B., instructor in Religion and Mrs. Evelyn Crandell, physical education director.

Recent renovations have produced a well-equipped Biology laboratory, a Little Theatre, a language laboratory, St. Anne Hall in which lunches are served, and a school chapel for fifty in which Mass is offered daily.

Present facilities will permit classes of only twenty-five for the coming few years until a building program is begun. Registration and reservations are now being made for classes in the term of 1964-65.

Coin Club Meet Slated Sunday

The Zebulon Pike Coin Club has issued an open invitation to it's regular semi-monthly meeting at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The club meets at 414 West Pikes Peak Ave. and the doors open at 1:30 for the convenience of those who wish to buy, sell or 'swap,.

You do not have to be an advanced collector, or for that matter, a collector to enjoy these meetings. If you have a few old coins and wish to learn more about them, bring them to this meeting and some of the members will be happy to help you in any way possible.

Leroy Bennett, Pueblo is the program chairman.

The usual fast moving 100 lot auction will contain silver and gold commemorative coins, Canadian and American coins including a rare three dollar gold coin that was minted in 1854 and is valued just under $200.

There will be door prizes, refreshments and it is all free and all are invited.

Defective Brakes Bring Driver Fine

J. Jones Stowall, 21, of 325 S. 11th St. was fined $5 and costs in Justice of the Peace James F. Quine's court Friday for having defective brakes. The violation happened Monday on 8th Street and the officer was Arnold C. Ferrero.

In a companion case, Marion Marie Adams, 22, also of 325 S. 11th St. received a $5 fine and costs for failing to yield the right of way.

Wilbert Henry Herbin, 25, of 511 N. Royer St. paid a $5 fine and costs for driving on North Circle Drive Tuesday without a valid operator's license. Ken Shiflet of the state patrol was the officer.

'Mary, Mary' Showing at Peak

"Mary, Mary", now showing at the Peak Theatre with features at 1, 3:41, 6:22 and 9:03 p.m. daily, is the newest in the sequence of top-hit films made from top-hit stage vehicles which has become the specialty of Warner Bros. Recent Warner pictures in the sequence have been "Gypsy," "The Music Man" and "A Majority of One." Ahead lies "My Fair Lady."

The basis o f"Mary, Mary" is a play, by Jean Kerr, author of "Please Don't Eat the Daisies," that ran more than 1,000 performances on Broadway while two road-companies toured it all over the U. S. and a third covered Europe.

Having acquired this prized property, Warner's gave it the A-treatment. Mervyn LeRoy, noted behind-camera figure, became producer and director. Debbie Reynolds was cast as the contrary Mary whose romantic ups-and-downs form the plot.

Barry Nelson and Michael Rennie, who for the stage created the hilarious roles respectively of an excitable ex-husband and a fading movie-idol, were chosen to do the same for the Technicolor screen.

Diane McBain, fast-rising television and movie beauty, was cast as a head-strong socialite.

Hiram Sherman, well-known comic actor, was lured to the coast for a rare screen appearance as a puckish lawyer. William Travilla, the fame of whose designs has spread far beyond Filmville, was assigned to create the wardrobe of the Misses Reynolds and McBain.

Good Ski Weather

Sun Valley, Idaho's average mean temperature is 36 degrees during the winter ski season—December thru March. Nevertheless, the dry semi-arid climate of the mile-high resort and brilliant mountain sunshine allow a skier to sunbathe comfortably during the warmer daylight hours.

'Hamlet' Screened Tuesday

"Hamlet," the eloquent British screen interpretation of the Shakespearian classic, will be shown at the Fine Arts Center at 2:30, 6:45 and 9:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Starring Sir Laurence Oliver and Jean Simmons, the movie is seen as absolute proof that Shakespear's poetic dramas are magnificently suited to the screen. Just as Oliver's ingenious and spectacular "Henry V" set out new visual limits for Shakespeare's historical plays, his "Hamlet" envisions new vistas in the great tragedies of the Bard.

Altho the stage has claimed unquestionable dominance in matters Shakespearian over these many years, it is now realized by but only a few profound die-hards that the screen has brought a new dimension,—the visual privelege of partaking in some of the most intimate moments of the plays.

Certainly this close-up examination is enhanced by the performance of Laurence Olivier who brings an openness to the dark and brooding character of Hamlet which makes him reasonably comprehensible. Vibram and real, too, are the performances of Eileen Herlie as the Queen and Jean Simmons as the truly fair Ophelia.

Lot of Raspberries

Are you one of the knowing gourmets who sings the praises of the succulent French liqueur, Framboise? If so, you know that it is rare delicious and by no means inexpensive. Air France experts on wine and liqueurs say that the price tag of Framboise is understandable when one takes into account that it requires more than 110 pounds of fragrant raspberries to make only one-fifth of a gallon.

'Stolen Hours' Coming to Chief

Filmed in the playgrounds of the international jet set, against a backdrop of the glittering social whirls of England's Mayfair and the danger-and-death-races at Monza, the Mirisch-Barbican Films shattering drama, "Stolen Hours," in wide screen Color by DeLuxe, and opening Wednesday at the Chief Theatre, thru United Artists release, stars the beautiful Academy Award-winning Susan Hayward in the most powerful and evocative role of her brilliant motion picture career.

"Stolen Hours" is the dramatic and compelling story of a capricious and promiscuous woman's tumultuous emotional and psychological upheaval from a life of profligacy that forced her to use men like pep-up pills to the culminating discovery of the value of the precious gifts of real love.

In the role of the wealthy American playgirl who roams the world in an unceasing search for new kicks and thrills in "Stolen Hours," Miss Hayward feels she has finally found the same kind of pivotal, demanding and challenging screen assignment which won her the Motion Picture Academy's coveted "Oscar" for her performance in "I Want to Live!"

'Giant' Will Be Shown at 8th St.

One of Hollywood's most attractive young actresses, famed for her talent at portraying drab older women, co-stars with Elizabeth Taylor and Rock Hudson in "Giant," the George Stevens' classic production starting Wednesday at the 8th Street Drive-In Theatre.

Setting the pace for meteoric screen career with rare distinction by winning an Academy Award in her first role as an unglamorous secretary to a politician in "All the King's Men," Miss McCambridge plays Luz, the embittered and jealous elder sister of Bick Benedict in the screen version of Edna Ferber's best selling novel.

James Dean is also topcast in "Giant," which co-stars Jane Withers, Chill Wills, Carroll Baker, Dennis Hopper, Rod Taylor, Earl Holliman and Sal Mineo.

Suspicions Confirmed

Comic Marty Ingels, on the set of "Wild and Wonderful," starring Tony Curtis and Christine Kaufmann, received a letter with 10 cents postage due. Inside was a dime refund from the telephone company.

'Mad, Mad World' Premiers Amid Laugh Marathon

HOLLYWOOD—Stanley Kramer gave us and 8-hour marathon of laughs when he opened "Mad Mad, Mad, Mad, World" in our new Cinerama Theatre, which is round as a full moon. We went in circles from 6 p.m. until 2 a.m. watching the film and cheering the comics in person at the ball later. Despite its length, the picture's one of the funniest you'll ever see. We used to laugh at Mack Sennett's chases, but even he could not dream up anything this whacky. Ethel Merman darn near stole the show, but, gad, how I'd hate to have her for a mother-in-law. That was what Milton Berle had to endure.

When you get one good comic in a night club you're lucky; at the Beverly Hilton ball they were thick as tumbleweeds in west Texas. Milton Berle was a great emcee. Making early exits were Phil Silvers (his wife's expecting their fifth), Mickey Rooney (he had an early call), and Merman, the singing sensation of the century. She had to leave immediately after the show because she was opening at New York's Persian room.

Sid Ceasar performed. English import Terry-Thomas did an imitation of Ezio Pinza singing "Some Enchanted Evening." Jonathan Winters, who can imitate anything—animal, vegetable or mineral—had on his 1880 style shoes. That's why he wears his pants so short.

Dick Shawn scored with his gibes about the clan. Says he's 123 on the waiting list—waiting for the leader to call him in for a film. He finished by doing an imitation of a not so he-mannish baseball pitcher, that had ups falling on the floor.

EDIE ADAMS looked as tho she was auditioning for a Russian circus in an all-fur evening costume complete with trousers. Dorothy Provine and Madlyn Rhue took bows.

Buster Keaton didn't go on stage, but he, Joe E. Brown, Jim Backus, Bill Demarest, Rochester, and Peter Falk got terrific hands. If they'd all performed, we'd be there yet.

Hollywood should give Kramer a vote of thanks for bringing 250 corespondents from all over the world for the opening of his picture, a venture that will set him back $400,000 and get him millions in favorable publicity.

Newsmen caught planes trains, buses to catch up with the charter flights that came in from Europe and New York. The Japanese, Russian, and Honolulu reporters flew commercial air lines. All were housed at the Beverly Hilton where a press room was set up beside the swimming pool equipped with 25 typewriters, a separate switchboard with 15 phones, messenger service, three photographers, and a transportation desk that gave orders to 8 buses and 30 limousines. Guests were given carte blanche to sign for any meals and drinks in the hotel.

Secretary Shirley Thompson, who kept the mad press room clicking, was hired by the Kramer office because she'd worked on a Fort Wayne, Ind., newspaper and later with a travel agency.

The newspaper people toured Disneyland, saw the Jerry Lewis show, were given a luncheon at Universal where they're doing so much building you can scarcely walk without falling into a foundation. It opened the eyes of the out-of-towners who'd heard a big rumor that Hollywood was dying.

Saw many of my old friends at the luncheon: Bryan Buckingham of London's News of the World, Pierre Galante of Paris Match, Charlotte Peters of Station KSD in St. Louis, Kaspar Monahan of the Pittsburgh Press.

Fifi d'Orsay got a terrific hand when she was introduced during lunch. I asked Ethel Merman where she was going as she rushed out ahead of me. "To a chiropodist," she said. "My feet are killing me!"

'Rampage' Now Showing at Chief

Robert Mitchum's role in "Rampage," drama in Technicolor now at the Chief Theatre, gives him a lot of range—drawing—room to jungle, evening clothes to sloppy pants, brandy snifter to holstered pistol. There are also some tantalizing detours such as the shower-bath where co-star Elsa Martinelli catches him barefooted, as it were, and the moving train where his other co-star, Jack Hawkins, tries to have him destroyed by a wild animal. All these ins -and -outs Mitchum meets with the aplomb that is his trademark.

The brawny actor let himself be lured out of his 200-acre Maryland farm by the provocative "Rampage" role, that of a big-game trapper on an expedition for two tigers and a fabled beast known as "The Enchantress." The jaunt includes big-game trapper Hawkins and his youthful mistress, personified by Miss Martinelli. At the end of the hunt, Mitchum has his cats, the girl has him, and Hawkins has jealousy enough to try murder.

SUSANNAH YORK MONTGOMERY CLIFT

'Secret Passion' At Ute Thursday

"There are no monuments to acting—except in the minds of people," says Montgomery Clift. "In fact, acting is rather a selfess occupation."

The star was in a philosophical mood as he relaxed in his set chair on location in Vienna, between scenes of John Huston's "The Secret Passion," in which he enacts the principal role. Starring Clift, Susannah York, Larry Parks, Susan Kohner, Eric Portman and Eileen Herlie, the film will begin on Thursday at the Ute Theatre.

"Actors are in the business of creating illusion," Monty continued thoughtfully, "and our monuments lie in the impressions we make on the lives of other people."

Although this theory doesn't apply to all actors, it does fit Clift. In each of his pictures, he has created an individual character, a definite illusion. For the character of Freud in "The Secret Passion", he grew a luxuriant chin covering to effect a greater resemblance to the famous Viennese doctor who first explored the secret receses of the human mind.

'Mouse' to Show At Broadmoor

There's no international shenanigans involved and nary a cloak or dagger, but that rocket you'll see in the Eastmancolor comedy spoof "The Mouse on the Moon," the Walter Shenson production offered by Lopert Pictures and opening Wednesday at the Broadmoor Theatre, was made from secret Russian plans!

Well, they were once secret Russian plans, anyway.

John Howell, the art director, who was called upon to produce a rocket—to be used by the mythical Duchy of Fenwick to reach the moon before the United States or Russia does—built his rocket from authentic plans published in the Russian newspaper Pravada. It's an obsolete model to be sure, but so is the one the Fenwickians get from Russia to fire at the moon in the movie, which is based on the famous and hilarious Leonard Wibberley novel.

Showing for the last four days, Henry Fonda and Maureen O'-Hara are starred in "Spencer's Mountain."

CLASSICAL MUSIC IN JAIL

MILAN, Italy (AP)—The convicts sat in rapt silence. After each piece of music there was eager applause. For even in jail the Italian is a music lover.

The "Famiglia Artistica Catalani," an Italian musical society, took this into consideration when it worked out its new series of concerts this year.

The first of them—with solos by some of Italy's best known singers and classic music of Schubert, Verdi, Bizet, Gounod and Puccini by an orchestra—was given in Milan's San Vittore for the prisoners.

Seventy more concerts are scheduled in hospitals, jails and psychopathic clinics.

The catch of codfish in the United States last year was three million pounds less than a year previous.

Aircadia Books Bonus Feature

A bonus feature has been added to the regular program tonight at the Aircadia Drive-in Theatre.

Robert Cummings and Dorothy Malone are starred in "Beach Party," a story of today's riotous youth. The second feature, "The Haunted Palace," is a horror thrill hit starring Vincent Price and Lon Chaney. The third and bonus hit, "T-Bird Gang," tells of a group of hot rod hoodlums.

No extra admission is charged for the bonus feature.

Aircadia Opens 'Hud' Wednesday

Paul Newman is "Hud" in the bold, upcompromising screen drama which opens Wednesday at the Aircadia Drive-in Theatre. Already hailed as an outstanding screen achievement, "Hud" was filmed on location in the Texas Panhandle and tells the story of contemporary cattle ranching.

The plot revolves around the character of Hud, played by Paul Newman. Hud is a selfish, brutal man, dedicated to his own self-gratification and ignominious goals. Hud's attitudes conflict with those of his father, played by Melvyn Douglas. His nephew, played by Brandon de Wilde is confused over whether his loyalties should lie with his Uncle Hud or his Grandfather. Alma, the housekeeper, played by Patricia Neal, is caught up in the family warfare, and when violence finally erupts, she is the one who suffers.

Directed and produced by Martin Ritt, from a novel by the 24-year-old Texan Larry McMurtry called "Horseman, Pass By," "Hud" figures to be a strong contender in next year's Academy Award presentations.

Laurence Olivier and Simon Signoret are starred in the second feature, "Term of Trial."

Old Wood Tempts Tourists

By ROBERT K. WALKER

HOLBROOK, Ariz. (AP)—For some, a visit to the nation's newest national park is a petrifying experience.

They find that by picking up souvenirs which would have cost small change in curio shops outside the park, they must pay fines up to $25.

So far this year, more than 100 persons have been cited for carrying off chips and logs from the Petrified Forest in north-eastern Arizona. Although a national monument since 1906, the forest acquired park status only last Dec. 8.

Visitors entering the park from busy U.S. 66 make their first stop at the new $1.5 million park headquarters complex, which includes a privately operated gift shop. Only polished wood is sold here, with small pieces costing 50 cents to $1. A set of bookends will run $30.

Once inside the park the tourist finds himself surrounded by the largest concentration of petrified logs in the world. The logs, ranging up to 160 feet, won't fit in pockets or car trunks.

However, millions of rough chips and small chunks lying on all sides beckon dishonest spirits.

Occasionally there is an attempt at wholesale theft in order to make a profit out of the 180-million-year-old wood, valued up to $40 a pound.

"It isn't the big commercial thieves that hurt so much," explains Chief Ranger R. H. Viklund, "it's the little chips that are hauled off day by day. We can't grow any more to replace it."

In the first seven months of 1963, citations went to 95 persons who paid $1,770 in fines of $15 to $25 each. Some 1,432 pounds of petrified wood was collected in searches of 365 cars.

Searches of cars have turned up wood concealed in pillow cases, under car hoods, in tissue boxes and in hub caps. One little boy reminded a ranger he hadn't looked inside a bean pot. The ranger lifted the lid and found the contraband.

Cooper's Dressing Room Handed to Steve McQueen

HOLLYWOOD—The dressing room Gary Cooper occupied for so many years was paneled in knotty pine. On the walls a few small pictures hung—Montana days, that African safari, hunting with friend Hemingway in Idaho. And except for the pictures, No. 122 remained as Gary Cooper left it, the quaintest billet on Paramount's dressing-room row, till Steve McQueen came along.

Modernizing it for McQueen without his even asking, Paramount removed the paneling. Now the walls were off-white plaster, with pictures of helmeted, grimy-faced daredevils bestriding motorcycles or at the wheels of racing cars. The new man, starring with Jackie Gleason in "Soldier in the Rain" for tenant company Allied Artists, was not the type to live with a ghost.

"They put me down the street when I was here before," he said.

"The Great Escape," released between his departure after finishing "Love With the Proper Stranger" and his return for the Blake Edwards movie had made the difference.

Life, hailing him "the next major movie star," had given him The Cover. Its positive sister in the news field Time, had touted him as "white-hot." Producers were crowding him with "piece of the picture" offers. Paramount's accolade was Gary Cooper's dressing room.

But the point of that seemed lost now. The premises were unrecognizable. Another little Hollywood landmark had passed away.

And where had they put the Great Gleason up?

"Oh, he's back in New York now, all finished. But they made a suite for Jackie—FIVE rooms. And man," McQueen laughed, "he needed it. Kept it jumpin' all the time. Me, I'm like old Coop one way anyhow—I dig privacy."

Like Cooper he appears to be in nothing else, except indeed in the strong lines bracketing his mouth; and to meet him is to be confronted by living evidence of how the tastes of audiences change. McQueen is a man of his time—an ex-racing driver, middling tall, blond, close-cropped, intense-blue-eyed, and hip-talking, with a reckless, fatalistice air; a figure perhaps instantly acceptable in the heroic image to a generation spreading its wings in the dawn of the Space Age.

A waiter arrived with lunch. McQueen doesn't eat in the commissary any more. At the studio, he's all business, and when not being interviewed likes to use the lunch hour to prepare himself for the afternoon.

But there was only one lunch on this tray. McQueen took his out of the ice-box—a snack from the health store. What is known as a "dedicated" actor, he lives up to the conviction that being careful about his health is part of his business. He works out in the gym three evenings a week.

He talks with concentration and sincerity. In "Soldier in the Rain," he said, he and Gleason play a couple of sergeants, buddies, at an army camp in this country.

"It's sort of a switch for me. Broad comedy. I've done a lot of that on TV here and there, sure, but nothing like this in pictures. So man, I've got my fingers crossed."

"But it's not all comedy. Like, if we've got what we think we've got—what we hope we've got—you'll come out of that theater with your eyes wet. Okay?"

About Gleason: "That man is tops in my book. There's people! But he's not a comic in this. He's got a lot of pathos; and with that stuff, Jackie can really get TO you. But cool? He can steal a scene with just his eyes. You got to watch him."

And on Tuesday Weld: "I was surprised how much perception that little chick has. I mean she knows. She can reach WAY down. And you know she's only 20?"

The talk got around to sports car racing. While already a star, McQueen has competed in the Sebring Grand Prix and other international events. But he said he's giving up auto racing. "The pressure from the insurance people, the producers, and my old lady (actress-dancer Neile Adams) got too heavy for me."

The phone rang. Time for his date in the still gallery.

Outside waited his low-slung charger, capable, he said, of 185 miles per hour. The engine's growl had the authority of a lion's. He pulled away with a wave of the hand, observing the studio speed limit and yet managing, as he turned a corner, to make the rubber scream.

Long-legged "old Coop" used to pump his way around the lot on a bicycle.

Stamps in the News

British colonies all over the world are honoring the centenary of the Red Cross by issuing special stamps of identical design. Each of the 34 territories is issuing two stamps with the denominations varying as to the locality. The design features the wording "International Red Cross Centenary" and a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, with the exception of Tonga which bears a portrait of Queen Salote and for Zanzibar which has a portrait of Sultan Abdulla. The Red Cross and the dates 1863-1963 are emblazoned in red in the center. Queen Elizabeth is very much interested in this particular work as she is vice president of the British Red Cross Society.

Venezuela has issued a set of four stamps honoring Dag Hammarskjold, late secretary general of the United Nations and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. Two lower values are for regular mail and the two higher values are for air mails. Featured on the stamps is a portrait of Hammarskjold with a map in the background. The inscription on the stamp reads "Dag Hammarskjold, Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize 1961."

The recently issued United States 5 cent stamp honoring Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is somewhat unique in that Mrs. Roosevelt was the first President's wife to be honored on a U.S. postage stamp since Martha Washington. In recent years U.S. stamps only infrequently have honored women. This year, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, a commemorative stamp honored Amelia Earhart. It is expected that 20 other nations will issue stamps paying tribute to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Volume One of Scotts' 1964 Standard Postage Stamp Catalog will contain 994 pages — 32 pages less than last year. Scotts Publications has achieved this squeeze by lengthening the pages ¼ inch. The publishing company announced that there were 19,415 price changes of which 8,515 were for Latin America, 1,604 in the United States and the rest in the British Commonwealth.

The Republic of China, located on the island of Formosa, has issued a new set of stampd commorating the recognition of the contributions made by the Red Cross to human welfare during the past 100 years. With this set of two stamps Nationalist China joins the many nations who this year issued stamps to help the Red Cross celebrate its centenary. One stamp features a Red Cross nurse in profile. The other stamp depicts the globe encicled by a band.

A SORRY SILENCE

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A crowd watched in silence here as 14,000 gallons of beer were poured down a street storm water drain.

Two workers stood up to their knees in the froth, helping the stream of beer along with shovels.

Only one man in the crowd had the presence of mind to look around for a mug, but he couldn't find one.

The beer came from the sequestered estate of David Gin, a brewery director who died recently.

To get the excise duty already paid on it refunded, the beer had to be destroyed. Two customs and excise officials supervised while the taps of the huge barrels were opened.

Old Wood Tempts Tourists

By ROBERT K. WALKER

HOLBROOK, Ariz. (AP)—For some, a visit to the nation's newest national park is a petrifying experience.

They find that by picking up souvenirs which would have cost small change in curio shops outside the park, they must pay fines up to $25.

So far this year, more than 100 persons have been cited for carrying off chips and logs from the Petrified Forest in north-eastern Arizona. Although a national monument since 1906, the forest acquired park status only last Dec. 8.

Visitors entering the park from busy U.S. 66 make their first stop at the new $1.5 million park headquarters complex, which includes a privately operated gift shop. Only polished wood is sold here, with small pieces costing 50 cents to $1. A set of bookends will run $30.

Once inside the park the tourist finds himself surrounded by the largest concentration of petrified logs in the world. The logs, ranging up to 160 feet, won't fit in pockets or car trunks.

However, millions of rough chips and small chunks lying on all sides beckon dishonest spirits.

Occasionally there is an attempt at wholesale theft in order to make a profit out of the 180-million-year-old wood, valued up to $40 a pound.

"It isn't the big commercial thieves that hurt so much," explains Chief Ranger R. H. Viklund, "it's the little chips that are hauled off day by day. We can't grow any more to replace it."

In the first seven months of 1963, citations went to 95 persons who paid $1,770 in fines of $15 to $25 each. Some 1,432 pounds of petrified wood was collected in searches of 365 cars.

Searches of cars have turned up wood concealed in pillow cases, under car hoods, in tissue boxes and in hub caps. One little boy reminded a ranger he hadn't looked inside a bean pot. The ranger lifted the lid and found the contraband.

Stamps in the News

British colonies all over the world are honoring the centenary of the Red Cross by issuing special stamps of identical design. Each of the 34 territories is issuing two stamps with the denominations varying as to the locality. The design features the wording "International Red Cross Centenary" and a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, with the exception of Tonga which bears a portrait of Queen Salote and for Zanzibar which has a portrait of Sultan Abdulla. The Red Cross and the dates 1863-1963 are emblazoned in red in the center. Queen Elizabeth is very much interested in this particular work as she is vice president of the British Red Cross Society.

Venezuela has issued a set of four stamps honoring Dag Hammarskjold, late secretary general of the United Nations and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. Two lower values are for regular mail and the two higher values are for air mails. Featured on the stamps is a portrait of Hammarskjold with a map in the background. The inscription on the stamp reads "Dag Hammarskjold, Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize 1961."

The recently issued United States 5 cent stamp honoring Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is somewhat unique in that Mrs. Roosevelt was the first President's wife to be honored on a U.S. postage stamp since Martha Washington. In recent years U.S. stamps only infrequently have honored women. This year, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, a commemorative stamp honored Amelia Earhart. It is expected that 20 other nations will issue stamps paying tribute to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Volume One of Scotts' 1964 Standard Postage Stamp Catalog will contain 994 pages — 32 pages less than last year. Scotts Publications has achieved this squeeze by lengthening the pages ¼ inch. The publishing company announced that there were 19,415 price changes of which 8,515 were for Latin America, 1,604 in the United States and the rest in the British Commonwealth.

The Republic of China, located on the island of Formosa, has issued a new set of stampd commorating the recognition of the contributions made by the Red Cross to human welfare during the past 100 years. With this set of two stamps Nationalist China joins the many nations who this year issued stamps to help the Red Cross celebrate its centenary. One stamp features a Red Cross nurse in profile. The other stamp depicts the globe encicled by a band.

Cooper's Dressing Room Handed to Steve McQueen

HOLLYWOOD—The dressing room Gary Cooper occupied for so many years was paneled in knotty pine. On the walls a few small pictures hung—Montana days, that African safari, hunting with friend Hemingway in Idaho. And except for the pictures, No. 122 remained as Gary Cooper left it, the quaintest billet on Paramount's dressing-room row, till Steve McQueen came along.

Modernizing it for McQueen without his even asking, Paramount removed the paneling. Now the walls were off-white plaster, with pictures of helmeted, grimy-faced daredevils bestriding motorcycles or at the wheels of racing cars. The new man, starring with Jackie Gleason in "Soldier in the Rain" for tenant company Allied Artists, was not the type to live with a ghost.

"They put me down the street when I was here before," he said.

"The Great Escape," released between his departure after finishing "Love With the Proper Stranger" and his return for the Blake Edwards movie had made the difference.

Life, hailing him "the next major movie star," had given him The Cover. Its positive sister in the news field Time, had touted him as "white-hot." Producers were crowding him with "piece of the picture" offers. Paramount's accolade was Gary Cooper's dressing room.

But the point of that seemed lost now. The premises were unrecognizable. Another little Hollywood landmark had passed away.

And where had they put the Great Gleason up?

"Oh, he's back in New York now, all finished. But they made a suite for Jackie—FIVE rooms. And man," McQueen laughed, "he needed it. Kept it jumpin' all the time. Me, I'm like old Coop one way anyhow—I dig privacy."

Like Cooper he appears to be in nothing else, except indeed in the strong lines bracketing his mouth; and to meet him is to be confronted by living evidence of how the tastes of audiences change. McQueen is a man of his time—an ex-racing driver, middling tall, blond, close-cropped, intense-blue-eyed, and hip-talking, with a reckless, fatalistice air; a figure perhaps instantly acceptable in the heroic image to a generation spreading its wings in the dawn of the Space Age.

A waiter arrived with lunch. McQueen doesn't eat in the commissary any more. At the studio, he's all business, and when not being interviewed likes to use the lunch hour to prepare himself for the afternoon.

But there was only one lunch on this tray. McQueen took his out of the ice-box—a snack from the health store. What is known as a "dedicated" actor, he lives up to the conviction that being careful about his health is part of his business. He works out in the gym three evenings a week.

He talks with concentration and sincerity. In "Soldier in the Rain," he said, he and Gleason play a couple of sergeants, buddies, at an army camp in this country.

"It's sort of a switch for me. Broad comedy. I've done a lot of that on TV here and there, sure, but nothing like this in pictures. So man, I've got my fingers crossed."

"But it's not all comedy. Like, if we've got what we think we've got—what we hope we've got—you'll come out of that theater with your eyes wet. Okay?"

About Gleason: "That man is tops in my book. There's people! But he's not a comic in this. He's got a lot of pathos; and with that stuff, Jackie can really get TO you. But cool? He can steal a scene with just his eyes. You got to watch him."

And on Tuesday Weld: "I was surprised how much perception that little chick has. I mean she knows. She can reach WAY down. And you know she's only 20?"

The talk got around to sports car racing. While already a star, McQueen has competed in the Sebring Grand Prix and other international events. But he said he's giving up auto racing. "The pressure from the insurance people, the producers, and my old lady (actress-dancer Neile Adams) got too heavy for me."

The phone rang. Time for his date in the still gallery.

Outside waited his low-slung charger, capable, he said, of 185 miles per hour. The engine's growl had the authority of a lion's. He pulled away with a wave of the hand, observing the studio speed limit and yet managing, as he turned a corner, to make the rubber scream.

Long-legged "old Coop" used to pump his way around the lot on a bicycle.

A SORRY SILENCE

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A crowd watched in silence here as 14,000 gallons of beer were poured down a street storm water drain.

Two workers stood up to their knees in the froth, helping the stream of beer along with shovels.

Only one man in the crowd had the presence of mind to look around for a mug, but he couldn't find one.

The beer came from the sequestered estate of David Gin, a brewery director who died recently.

To get the excise duty already paid on it refunded, the beer had to be destroyed. Two customs and excise officials supervised while the taps of the huge barrels were opened.

Camera Club Salon Winners Told

The annual salon banquet of the Pikes Peak Camera Club was held recently at Ruth's Oven. Present with their wives were the three men who served as judges, Ray Schmad of Denver, Jim Bates of the Alexander Film Company, and Bill Bowers well-known local photographer.

Before the awards were announced, the judges commented on the high quality of the entries and the difficulty they had in choosing the winners.

Claire Rutledge took top honors, receiving a trophy for high points in color for the year and for high points in color for the salon, as well as a trophy for third place for her slide, "Salad," plus three honorable mention ribbons for "Austrian Harvest," "Air Borne," and "Rock Lettuce."

First place in the color division went to Jim Doolittle, the club president, for "Golden Morn." He also received honorable mention for "So Comes Autumn."

Second place went to Allen Mathies for "Wall Street." He also took three honorable mention ribbons with "Surf Swimmers," "On Guard" and "Mountain Top Mine." Others who won three honorable mentions were Eva Keller with "Blue Grape Still Life," "Marigolds in Pink Glass," and "Little Acorns;" and Willard Sheldon with "Mrs. Wren Provides," "Fishing," and "Kaibab Path."

Jean Strang took two honorable mentions with "Dreaming" and "End of Summer" while the following won one honorable mention: Sam Vickerman for "Gossamer"; Margaret Sharp for "Sailing Into the Sun"; Helen Wilson for "Windmill"; Ethel Mechling for "Mimosa"; Bill McMillion for "Rose Pips"; George White for "Woodland Glade"; Gene Manfrin for "Red, White and Blue"; Edith McMillion for "Heather"; and Jim McCaffrey for "Coming Around the Mountain."

In the monochrome print division, George White won the trophy for high points in the salon, while the trophy for high points for the year went to Sam Vickerman. First place in prints went to Clyde Glover for "Taking Flight." He also won an honorable mention ribbon for "Casting for Mullet." Margaret Sharp took second place with "Built On" and honorable mention for "Navajoland." George White not only won third place with "Hurry Up, I'm Next," but also three honorable mention ribbons for "Indian Summer," "Old Wood and New Snow," and "The Problem."

Others winning honorable mention were: Sam Vickerman for "Suddenly It's Evening;" Gene Manfrin for "Hey, Open Up;" and Wanetta Draper for "Dallas Divide."

All the black and white prints entered in the salon will be on display at Ruth's Oven for the next few weeks.

DIRECTORS' RING AROUND

NEW YORK (AP)—Three inbound Broadway musicals are involved in an unplanned ring-around of directors.

Because of a delay in production plans, Gower Champion stepped out of the staging assignment for "I Picked a Daisy," that had been planned as a creative collaboration of Richard Rodgers and Alan Jay Lerner. The latter is now working on a revised version with another partner, Burton Lane. Bob Fosse was signed to direct.

Garson Kanin has taken over "Funny Girl," which Fosse had been nominated to handle previously. And Champion is at work on "Hello, Dolly."

Award Nights Photography Can Hold Many Booby Traps

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Most camera fans, sooner or later are asked to photograph an awards presentation or a speaker at their club, lodge, school, business or civic organization. It sounds like a simple request but it holds many booby traps for the unitiated.

If a photographer at these affairls doesn't observe certain rules of camerao etiquette, he can be an annoying distraction to officials, the speaker and to the audience. In addition his pictures may come up with a back view of the award recipient . . . or the microphone over his face . . . or the lectern hiding most of the speaker . . . or grotesque fixtures growing out of the honored guest's head.

The first thing to do is to arrive well ahead of time to see the room where the speech or presentation will take place. Study it for camera angles, distances, lighting, position of lectern and for any possibly distracting wall fixtures, mirrors or disturbing backgrounds. Then you can plan where to shoot from and determine your exact focusing distance and exposure.

Next consult the person in charge and try to get the principal people involved to pose in advance. Most people are glad to cooperate when it is explained that this will produce better pictures. This gives you a chance to select the background carefully, to stand on a chair if necessary and to take several poses— someting you cannot do during the actual prodeedings.

It will be helpful to know from which direction award recipients will be coming and where they will stand so that you will be in position for the best camera angle. Ask the people beforehand to turn towards you so that you can get faces instead of the side or back of a head. Use a set distance for many awards so there will be no need for focusing.

During a speech, the photographer must be unobtrusive. He should take his pictures in the first few moments when the speaker acknowledges the welcoming applause and starts his introductory remarks. He should not jump up and down during the heart of the address. Nor should he remain poised, camera aimed while he is changing focus or exposure while the speaker and the audience wonder when he is going to snap that photo! He may get up when there is a distinct break, a joke with audience reaction or if the speaker holds up an object to make a telling point. The photographer must anticipate and be instantly ready for these dramatic highlights.

It is well to know the program of events so that you're not caught at the end of a roll of film during an important part of the proceedings. When in doubt, shoot off the last few frames of a roll of film and start a new one. Never leave your camera case with its supplies out of reach. When you need film or flashbulbs, they should be handy. Keep extra batteries, a synch cord or any necessary equipment for emergencies.

Take general views early because most rooms get smoky and hazy as the evening wears on.

Avoid shooting the guests of honor while they are eating. It is far better to picture them before or after eating when they are relaxing or chatting with their table companions. Use an official seating list to get correct names and positions of guests to avoid the embarrassment of asking who they are to identify your photos. When in doubt, you can discreetly ask strangers how to spell their names correctly.

Folk Trio Gets Top Three List

BURBANK, CALIF... For the first time in remembered history, one artist has three of the top five best-selling albums in the country.

Peter, Paul and Mary's first three Warner Bros. records albums have all hit the top of the best-seller charts. Two respected trade magazines of the music industry, "Cash Box" and "Billboard" list the three albums' sales rankings as one-three-four, and one-two-six, respectively.

The first Peter, Paul and Mary album ("Peter, Paul and Mary") has sold over a million copies domestically, without counting Record Club sales.

Their "Moving" album is now at the three-quarter of a million unit level, while their late-September release, " In The Wind," in one month, has topped 500,000 copies. Record Club and foreign sales would boost these figures considerably, Warner Bros. Records president J. K. Maitland stated.

The hot sales pace of Warner Bros. Records is also reflected in the fact that a second Warner Bros. artist, Allan Sherman, has hit the number one spot on the best-seller charts, both for LP's and singles, with every release he has made: "My Son, The Folk Singer," "My Son, The Celebrity," "My Son, The Nut," and the recent Sherman single, "Hello Mudduh, Hello Fadduh!"

According to Maitland, Warner Bros. Records has just passed through its most lucrative sales period to date, surpassing the previously record high year of 1961-2.

AAUW Sponsors 'Pied Piper'

The Children's Theatre Touring Company of the University of Denver will present a colorful and exciting adaptation of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" for the children of the community, Saturday, Nov. 16, at the Fine Arts Center.

Based on the classic poem by Robert Browning, children will love this warm, tender story of Dirk, the little lame boy, who was unable to keep up with the children the Piper led into the mountain. Through his efforts, and the generosity of the townspeople of Hamelin, Dirk is able to lead the children out of the mountainside.

Participating in the play are a number of local children who will rehearse with the cast an hour before the performance. They are Cheryl Aeschbach, Linda Blodgett, Ralph Gilcreest, Tim McConnell, Chesleigh Parrish, Thomas Parrish, Bobbie Jo Quimby, and Cheryl Quimby.

Medieval costumes and sets will add color to the production, as will the special music which was composed for it.

Brian Bell heads the cast of nine as The Pied Piper and David Dale plays the part of Dirk, the crippled boy. Directed by Ron Dobrin, settings are by Harvey Paul Jurik, costumes designed by Jack Vaughn, technical direction by Gary Giem and wardrobe by Alyce Gilbert.

"The Pied Piper of Hamelin," the third production sponsored by American Association of University Woman, will have two performances, one at 10 a.m and the other at 1:30 p.m., with tickets available in the elementary schools of Districts 11 and 12 prior to class time on Nov. 13.

Prices are 50 cents and 75 cents. Tickets may also be obtained from Mrs. Howard Shaw Jr., 633-0307, Mrs. Donald C. Smith, 632-1105, and Mrs. William Dean Goodbar, 635-7308, co-chairmen of the event.

CHARMING MUSIC—David Dale as Dirk, the crippled boy, plays a tune for the Mayor's daughter (Lois Pearlman) in "The Pied Piper of Hamelin." The play will be presented Saturday, Nov. 16, at the Fine Arts Center, for all children of the community.

Folk Trio Gets Top Three List

BURBANK, CALIF... For the first time in remembered history, one artist has three of the top five best-selling albums in the country.

Peter, Paul and Mary's first three Warner Bros. records albums have all hit the top of the best-seller charts. Two respected trade magazines of the music industry, "Cash Box" and "Billboard" list the three albums' sales rankings as one-three-four, and one-two-six, respectively.

The first Peter, Paul and Mary album ("Peter, Paul and Mary") has sold over a million copies domestically, without counting Record Club sales.

Their "Moving" album is now at the three-quarter of a million unit level, while their late-September release, " In The Wind," in one month, has topped 500,000 copies. Record Club and foreign sales would boost these figures considerably, Warner Bros. Records president J. K. Maitland stated.

The hot sales pace of Warner Bros. Records is also reflected in the fact that a second Warner Bros. artist, Allan Sherman, has hit the number one spot on the best-seller charts, both for LP's and singles, with every release he has made: "My Son, The Folk Singer," "My Son, The Celebrity," "My Son, The Nut," and the recent Sherman single, "Hello Mudduh, Hello Fadduh!"

According to Maitland, Warner Bros. Records has just passed through its most lucrative sales period to date, surpassing the previously record high year of 1961-2.

NEW LEAGUE PREXY

NEW YORK (AP) — Herman Bernstein has been elected president of the League of New York Theaters, the organization of Broadway show producers. He succeeds Herman Levin.

Other officials elected are Herman Shumlin, first vice president; Samuel Schwartz, second vice president; Louis Lotito, secretary; and Alfred de Liagre Jr., treasurer.

Riches, Renown, Reversals -- Three R's of TV Celebrities

By ERSKINE JOHNSON

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Eyes strained after years of television viewing? Jittery this morning because of a late, late show. Don't complain, you television fans. You're lucky.

Television stars are the ones who really have the headaches. Never before in show business have so many suddenly become so rich, so famous—and so unhappy.

Call it the day of the unhappy television millionaires.

The hectic, high-tension demands of television blended with the highly emotional natures of talented people is the foundation for the unhappiness. Television's demands are insatiable, but as capricious as a roulette wheel.

To be liked is the goal of the entertainer. To be versatile is the actor's dream. To be "wanted" means even more than money to both.

In television's shower of gold, however, actors and entertainers alike are facing hurdles new to the world of show business.

A career can be made and unmade in as short a time as 13 weeks. Television popularity rating systems still dictate life and death for the young hopeful or the old pro. The sudden end of a show because of low rating or a sponsor's change of mind breeds bitterness and unhappiness.

For the entertainer who becomes a hit there is the risk of overexposure killing off a career years in the making.

It happened to Milton Berle and Sid Caesar, once the kingpins of the little screen. Today they are rich, but unhappy. Berle craves straight dramatic roles and Sid hopes a new movie will renew his once bright career.

As a spectator to the rise and fall of Berle and Caesar on television, Danny Kaye resisted weekly show offers until this season. "How long will it last?" is the question Danny is already asking himself.

Judy Garland's desire to be liked on her new show has cued a series of backstage flare-ups which have brought changes in production and personnel.

When the "Burn & Allen Show" faded from the air, Gracie went into retirement. But the lure of the spotlight was too much for George. He doesn't need the money, but today he is on the road with a night club singing act.

With more money than he'll ever need, a pouting Jack Benny is leaving CBS because of the time spot given his show. He'll be on NBC next season.

For the actor, television blends riches with type casting so indelible that stars lose personal identity in the characters they play — a fate they look upon as worse than death.

For instance, seven years as the Paladin of "Have Gun, Will Travel" made Richard Boone a millionaire, gave him the chance to retire and enjoy the easy life. But he's back this season, working harder than ever on "The Richard Boone Show."

"Gunsmoke" put Dennis Weaver in the big money. But being typed as the limping Chester has turned his career into miserable frustration.

In attempting to escape from Dodge City, Weaver has made three bids for a series of his own far from the West. He has appeared, in white tie and tails, as a singer on a television variety show.

He's still playing Chester. He's rich, but unhappy and bitter.

Old Walter Brennan, a movie Oscar winner way back in 1936, became a millionaire for the second time via "The Real McCoys." Gone fishing now? Nope, returns to home screens next season in a new series in which he plays a business tycoon.

"I'd be miserable in retirement," he says, and he's probably right. He's the essence of unhappiness when he's not working.

A rich man today, Raymond Burr is woried about the image of "Perry Mason" haunting his acting career when the series ends — and all series eventually do end, you know. The quick end of the "Betty Hutton Show" left the one-time Hollywood star in such an emotional state that friends worried about her health.

At the more personal level, television's long working hours and nervous strain cost Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz their marriage. Jim Arness' marriage ended in a legal separation. His "Gunsmoke" fame and fortune were blamed.

The backstage television picture is not all unhappiness, of course. Its rich rewards have favored many, tempering their ambitions. But for many others, television breeds unhappiness in its pressures, its insatiable demands, its rating wars with top shows opposite one another, its overexposure, its type casting and, above all, in its frequent instability based on the whims of sponsors and the second-guesing of advertising agents.

BETTY HUTTON

NOT ALL SHAKESPEARE

STRATFORD, Ont. (AP) — Moliere and William Wycherley are being added to the dramatist panel for next season's Shakespeare Festival.

The Frenchman's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" and Wycherley's lusty Restoration comedy "The Country Wife" will share the repertory with "Richard II" and "King Lear."

Artistic director Michael Langham says that "Richard II" will start a five-year project to present the entire cycle of Shakespearean histories in chronological sequence.

200 PER CENT PROFIT

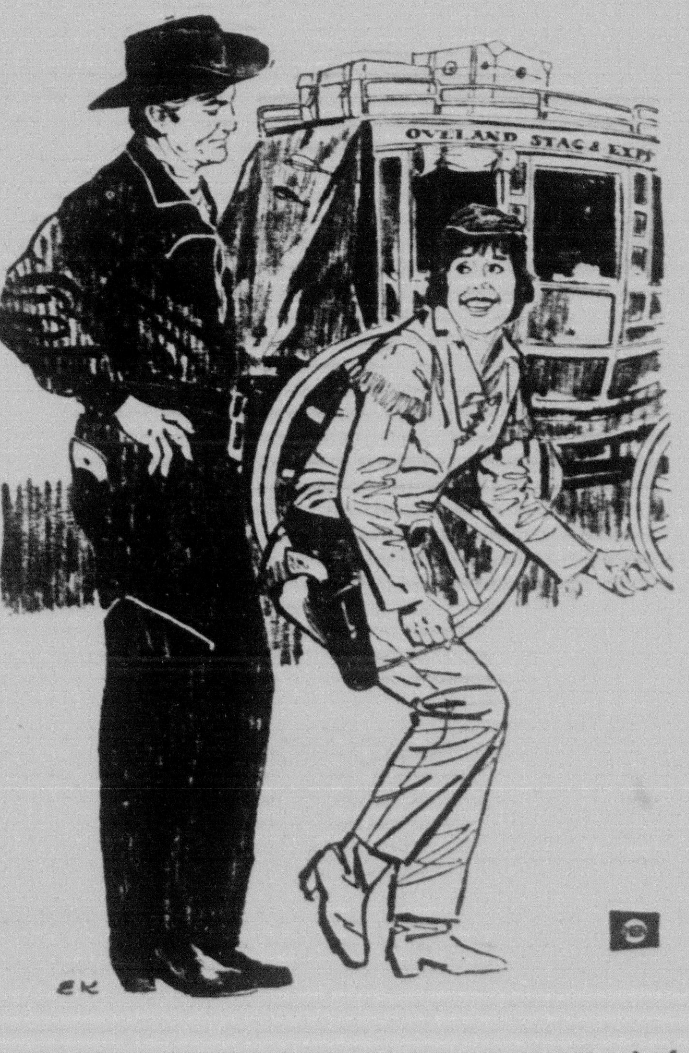
NEW YORK (AP)—The series of entertainments presented under the collective title Nine O'Clock Theater by producer Alexander H. Cohen during the past three Broadway seasons are reported to have reaped a 200 per cent profit on a total $210,000 investment.

Biggest winner is the still current "Beyond the Fringe," that has tallied a winning margin of $270,000 thus far. "At the Drop of a Hat" netted $65,000 and "The Nichols and May Show," $84,000. The series, actually staged at the Golden Playhouse, gets its name from Cohen's insistence on making the curtain time 9 p.m., so that customers can have more time for dinner than possible with the prevalent 8:40 starting hour.

Honest Cowpoke

Doug McClure, co-star of NBC-TV's "The Virginian," is one of the few real honest-to-gosh cowpokes on TV. He worked as a cowboy in Nevada during summer vacation in high school and college.

CAROL'S CALAMITY



Ebullient Carol Burnett brings her lively talents to the title role of "Calamity Jane," a 90-minute musical comedy over CBS-TV Nov. 12. As "Calamity Jane," Carol portrays a swaggering gal of the Old West with a penchant for tall tales. Art Lund costars as Will Bill Hickok. This special is based on the 1953 movie starring Doris Day and Howard Keel.

HOPE'S STARS — Jill St. John, left, and Kathryn Crosby costar with Bob Hope in "The House Next Door," a comedy drama on "Chrysler Presents a Bob Hope Comedy Special" at 6:30 p.m. Friday, on KOAA-TV. Kathryn Crosby (Mrs. Bing Crosby in real life) portrays the wife of a man from Connecticut (Hope) and Miss St. John plays a mobster's moll. The story concerns a modest, middle-class Connecticut couple conned into buying a Southern California estate next to a notorious gangster.

Mont Saint Michel

One of France's most favored tourist attractions is the Mont Saint Michel, founded in the 8th century. According to Air France travel experts, the tides around Mont Saint Michel are the most unusual in Europe. High tide sweeps around it at the speed of a trotting horse.

MILAN — An American trade center will be opened in this Italian industrial city.

JASON, LAUREN HONORED

NEW YORK (AP) — Jason Robards Jr. and his wife, Lauren Bacall, have been cited for the American Academy of Dramatics Arts 1963 award for achievement.

Both attended the school, which includes among other alumni Edward G. Robinson, Cecil B. De Mille, Kirk Douglas and Rosalind Russell.

PHOENIX TRIES MEMBERSHIP FEE

NEW YORK (AP)—The Phoenix Theater is trying a new subscription plan for its off-Broadway production season.

Instead of having supporters prebuy tickets to all shows, a flat membership fee ($4) entitles them to obtain cut-rate admission to any production during the first two weeks of its run.

Norris Houghton, co-director, said the method's value is flexibility — "we are not limited to a specific number of productions nor are we tied to a precommitted engagement of specific length."

'MERRY WIVES' IN AUSTRIA

SALZBURG (AP)—This Austrian festival center isn't overlooking the boxoffice potency of Shakespeare's 400th anniversary next year.

"Merry Wives of Windsor" will be staged by Rudolf Steinboeck, with decor by Lois Egg. The selection supersedes previous tentative choice of "The Tempest" for the 1964 celebration.

The production is to be taken over after exhibit here for a run at the Vienna Burgtheater.

Former Dentist

Thespian Sidewalk

Universal City Studios had to put up a fence without peepholes between the commissary and the site for its new 14-story office building because actors fascinated by the excavation work — were late getting back to the sound stages.

Oldfield Wrote TV Script For 'Road to Berlin'

While it may normally be hard to build a bridge from a television show to a scholarship fund, it will be done Sunday with Walter Cronkite's "20th Century" special, "The Road to Berlin" (4 p.m., KKTV, Channel 11).

The script for "The Road to Berlin" was written by Col. Barney Oldfield (USAF ret), formerly of Colorado Springs, and the $1,185 paid for it has been credited to the Kinman-Oldfield Scholarship Fund at the University of Nebraska Foundation in Lincoln.

Oldfield is now a member of the corporate public relations staff of Litton Industries Inc. at Beverly Hills, Calif. For eight years and eight months, he lived in Colorado Springs while serving as chief of information for Air Defense Command, Continental Air Defense Command and North American Air Defense Command.

BARNEY OLDFIELD

Oldfield was asked by Burton Benjamin, CBS "20th Century" executive producer, to do the writing chore because "Road to Berlin" is the story of the original Russian denial of access to Berlin for 53 days after World War II ended in Europe and he was in the abortive first column which attempted to get in on June 22, 1945, but didn't make it, as well as in the second column on July 1, 1945, which did make entry.

The Kinman-Oldfield Scholarship Fund, set up by the colonel and his wife and named for their parents, is designed as a military scholarship in that the ROTC recipient, regardless of service, has to seek a commission to be eligible for its benefits the last four semesters of his college time.

It has a long history of TV and other writing fee contributions since it was started in 1958. It was Groucho Marx' "You Bet Your Life" which provided the starting money (Oldfield named four world capitals and correctly tabbed Althea Gibson as the right woman tennis player).

Oldfield served twice on "to Tell the Truth" as a liar, got three votes on one occasion as Bing Crosby's brother and one vote on another as an admiral. This money went to the scholarship fund, too. Then he did a stint on the day time version of "Password" and managed to bank a little there as well.

A friendship between Oldfield and Cronkite has existed since World War II days, when Oldfield was always looking for people willing to go by parachute and glider to write about airborne operations. Cronkite was briefed for a total of 12 airborne attacks, which were planned and then scrubbed for one reason or another, and when he finally went on one it was the invasion of Holland in September, 1944.

Cronkite's mission was to set up the United Press bureau in the Netherlands after the initial messiness was over.

Bejamin rounde d up army Gens. Lucius Clay, Jim Gavin and Stuart Cutler for eyewitnesses, and has Floyd Parks and Frank Howley on film along with former State Department planner Philip Mosely.

FIRST SEASON MADE MONEY

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Tyrone Guthrie Theater company has completed its first season in the black.

A report by the management lists total income of $721, 941 and net revenue after deduction of expenses of $6,933.

During the May 7 - Sept. 22 run, 159 performances were witnessed by 193,000 spectators, giving an average attendance of 77.7 per cent of capacity. The most popular play was "The Three Sisters," followed in order by "The Miser," "Death of a Salesman" and "Hamlet."

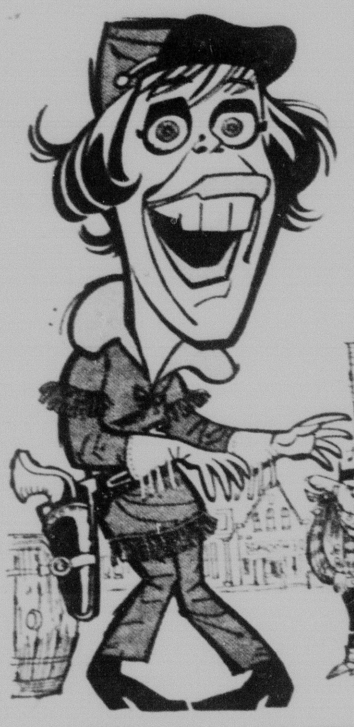
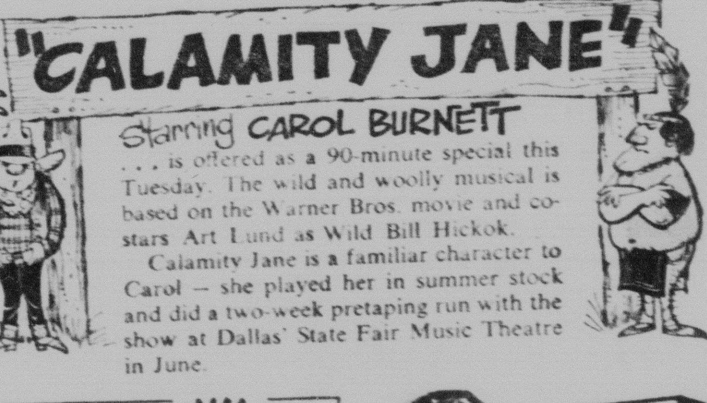
"MIND IF I PLAY THROUGH?"

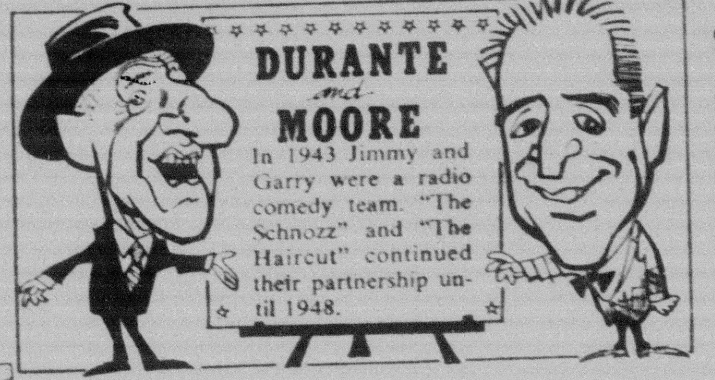




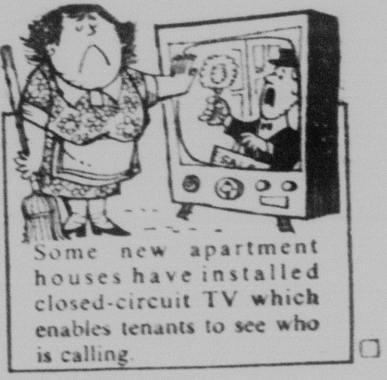
Starring CAROL BURNETT

. . . is offered as a 90-minute special this Tuesday. The wild and woolly musical is based on the Warner Bros. movie and co-stars Art Lund as Wild Bill Hickok.

Calamity Jane is a familiar character to Carol — she played her in summer stock and did a two-week pretaping run with the show at Dallas' State Fair Music Theatre in June.



In 1943 Jimmy and Garry were a radio comedy team. "The Schnozz" and "The Haircut" continued their partnership until 1948.



Some new apartment houses have installed closed-circuit TV which enables tenants to see who is calling.

MILES RECORDS GIL

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz trumpeter Miles Davis is providing background music for the upcoming Broadway suspense-comedy, "The Time of the Barracudas."

Davis has recorded a score written by Gil Evans, with whom he previously collaborated several times. The play, due to open here Dec. 2, stars Laurence Harvey and Elaine Stritch.

Sun Worshipper

Altho Cary Grant has a magnificent three-room oak panelled bungalow suite at Universal City, the famed actor who recently completed "Charade" with Audrey Hepburn, prefers conducting most of his studio conferences outdoors on the bungalow steps.

Things That 'Sting'

Eddie Albert, co-starring in "Captain Newman, M. D." starring Gregory Peck and Tony Curtis, spends his leisure time as a beekeeper and a winemaker.

'ALBATROSS' GETS LONDON START

NEW YORK (AP)—"The Albatross" is going to test its dramatic wings in London before venturing to Broadway.

The play by Howard Koch, suggested by the lives of Charles and Mary Lamb, is being done at Joan Littlewood's Theater Royal, following a trans-Atlantic tryout pattern set by several previous shows this season.

PHOENIX TRIES MEMBERSHIP FEE

NEW YORK (AP)—The Phoenix Theater is trying a new subscription plan for its off - Broadway production season.

Instead of having supporters prebuy tickets to all shows, a flat membership fee ($4) entitles them to obtain cut - rate admission to any production during the first two weeks of its run.

Norris Houghton, co-director, said the method's value is flexibility — "we are not limited to a specific number of productions nor are we tied to a precommitted engagement of specific length."

'MERRY WIVES' IN AUSTRIA

SALZBURG (AP)—This Austrian festival center isn't overlooking the boxoffice potency of Shakespeare's 400th anniversary next year.

"Merry Wives of Windsor" will be staged by Rudolf Steinboeck, with decor by Lois Egg. The selection supersedes previous tentative choice of "The Tempest" for the 1964 celebration.

The production is to be taken over after exhibit here for a run at the Vienna Burgtheater.

Former Dentist

Thespian Sidewalk

Universal City Studios had to put up a fence without peepholes between the commissary and the site for its new 14-story office building because actors fascinated by the excavation work — were late getting back to the sound stages.

'Time to Live' Televised At 5 Today

A filmed profile of Colorado Springs, "Time to Live," will be televised in color at 5 p.m. today on KRDO-TV, Channel 13.

Produced by the Alexander Film Company, the half-hour movie was financed by a number of local business firms including the Gazette Telegraph.

The Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce will use the movie as a promotion for the Pikes Peak Region to attract new residents, visitors and industries.

Newscaster Alex Dreier narrates the program which pictures many familiar scenes to local residents, notably Pikes Peak, the Garden of the Gods, and the U. S. Air Force Academy.

Greenhouse Doubles For Gerle

The Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra, in rehearsal for its concert on Nov. 21, is receiving unusual assistance from one of its members, Sgt. Norman Greenhouse.

For these rehearsals, Greenhouse has mastered the solo part of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto which guest artist, Robert Gerle, is to perform in the second concert of the season.

Greenhouse, who has been a member of the local orchestra for the past three years, first prepared the concerto several years ago for rehearsal with the National Symphony of Washington, D.C. The artist for whom Greenhouse was standing in on that occasion was Fritz Kreisler. At that time Greenhouse held the second chair with the National Symphony.

Sgt. Greenhouse attended the Julliard School of Music prior to going to Washington. Since 1950, he has served with the U. S. Air Force. He was a member of the Air Force Orchestra and has been with the U. S. Air Force Academy Band for three years.

Altho the versatile musician plays the clarinet and drum with the band and teaches piano to some twenty pupils, he is a first violinist with the Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra. Greenhouse has appeared as violin soloist at numerous local events both in town and at the Air Force Academy. He is also a member of the string quartet made up of symphony personnel under the direction of Walter Eisenberg.

The Mendelssohn Concerto is one of the best known and most popular with concert audiences, and is a classic in the violin repertoire.

TROUBLED JEFFERSON—Beset by personal worries which his long absence from Monticello has aggravated, Thomas Jefferson (Charlton Heston) writes his resignation as Secretary of State, in "The Patriots," at 7:30 p.m. Friday in color on NBC-TV's "Hallmark Hall of Fame," KOAA-TV, Channel 5.

I Used to Be a Newspaperman Says Actor-Martian Walston

By RAY WALSTON

I used to be a newspaperman myself. Heard that one lately?

I earned my credentials and a lordly eight dollars a week as a reporter on a metropolitan paper which since has gone out of business. Obviously it didn't go out of business because it threw money around.

I'm being paid the princely sum of nothing to write this, which probably proves that as a journalist I make a good Martian.

And so, with extra-terrestrial cunning, have I led up to a few words about my first television series, which is called "My Favorite Martian" and which is seen Sundays on the CBS Television Network.

I play the man from Mars of the title. And as an ex-newspaperman and critic, I can appreciate the role.

Critics have a wonderful time expertising on performances by actors who are playing mere Earthlings. Particularly by actors who play the roles of newspapermen.

I know a few columnists who have played newspapermen on television and have even hated themselves in the parts.

But what can a critic say about a guy playing a Martian? What standards of critical evaluation does he have?

Of course, it isn't difficult to find descriptions of men from Mars in popular fiction. But it's another matter finding any two fantasy writers who agree on what a Martian is really like.

And how many critics do you know who are Martians themselves? On second thought, some actor friends of mine have accused critics of being Martians and worse after reading reviews of their performances.

So if I come from Mars to Earth in a spaceship, who's going to argue? What other way of travel is there between these two points. As far as I know, there are not now any regularly scheduled commercial flights between the Red Planet and this globe.

And if, as a Martian, I leave no fingerprints on anything I touch, can you cavil? I say Martians have no fingerprints.

If I come to Earth on a purely peaceful mission, can anyone argue convincingly that it is unrealistic—that Martians all are warmongers?

How many other Martians have you seen on television?

When I cause inanimate objects to move through the sheer strength of my will, I ask you not to disbelieve that Martians are practicing telekinesists.

In short, our guess as to what a Martian is, thinks, does and feels is probably as good as yours—or any critic's.

But if the critics pay me no heed and do, indeed pan my performance, I simply shall play my hole card:

Martians can disappear at will.

Oldfield Wrote TV Script For 'Road to Berlin'

While it may normally be hard to build a bridge from a television show to a scholarship fund, it will be done Sunday with Walter Cronkite's "20th Century" special, "The Road to Berlin" (4 p.m., KKTV, Channel 11).

The script for "The Road to Berlin" was written by Col. Barney Oldfield (USAF ret), formerly of Colorado Springs, and the $1,185 paid for it has been credited to the Kinman-Oldfield Scholarship Fund at the University of Nebraska Foundation in Lincoln.

Oldfield is now a member of the corporate public relations staff of Litton Industries Inc. at Beverly Hills, Calif. For eight years and eight months, he lived in Colorado Springs while serving as chief of information for Air Defense Command, Continental Air Defense Command and North American Air Defense Command.

Oldfield was asked by Burton Benjamin, CBS "20th Century" executive producer, to do the writing chore because "Road to Berlin" is the story of the original Russian denial of access to Berlin for 53 days after World War II ended in Europe and he was in the abortive first column which attempted to get in on June 22, 1945, but didn't make it, as well as in the second column on July 1, 1945, which did make entry.

The Kinman-Oldfield Scholarship Fund, set up by the colonel and his wife and named for their parents, is designed as a military scholarship in that the ROTC recipient, regardless of service, has to seek a commission to be eligible for its benefits the last four semesters of his college time.

It has a long history of TV and other writing fee contributions since it was started in 1958. It was Groucho Marx' "You Bet Your Life" which provided the starting money (Oldfield named four world capitals and correctly tabbed Althea Gibson as the right woman tennis player).

Oldfield served twice on "to Tell the Truth" as a liar, got three votes on one occasion as Bing Crosby's brother and one vote on another as an admiral. This money went to the scholarship fund, too. Then he did a stint on the day time version of "Password" and managed to bank a little there as well.

A friendship between Oldfield and Cronkite has existed since World War II days, when Oldfield was always looking for people willing to go by parachute and glider to write about airborne operations. Cronkite was briefed for a total of 12 airborne attacks, which were planned and then scrubbed for one reason or another, and when he finally went on one it was the invasion of Holland in September, 1944.

Cronkite's mission was to set up the United Press bureau in the Netherlands after the initial messiness was over.

Mantovani Makes Recordings 'For People to Listen to'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Do people buy the lushly orchestrated music of Mantovani for real listening or as unobtrusive background melody?

"I think they act in both cases," answers Annunzio Paolo Mantovani, "but I record for people to listen. I do too many nuances in the orchestra really for background music. Background music is usually played at one level. I get first-class musicians and do some fine interpretations.

"I think it is the interpretations and the rather unique string sound that we have that attracts the public, you know."

The public has been attracted sufficiently to purchase 14 million records, Mantovani says, since he first started recording, for London, in 1951.

His orchestration and types of music he plays — pop and semiclassical pieces — are largely in the same manner today as then. Of some 40 LPs, Mantovani had done only one classical — Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and Concerto in F" — and only one with vocal — Mario del Monaco singing popular Italian songs.

The biggest change, Mantovani says, is that some types of music have gone out of style. "The greatest of the tangos—'Jalousie' — sounds old-fashioned today. It's the style of music. The rhythm is all wrong and yet 'Jalousie' has been a fabulous hit.

"I made a tango record about 1952 or '53 and I won't make another one. It's not because the music isn't something good, but it's gone by.

"Operettas have had it, too, all except Strauss. They're in another era."

The dark-haired, 52-year-old conductor continues, "We just recorded music from Manhattan — 'Slaughter on 10th Avenue,' 'Take the A Train' — and it worried me when I first thot of doing it. Is this going to sound dead?

"Actually, the music IS dated. But it still has a freshness if you reorchestrate it in such a way that there is nothing old about it. I'm very pleased with it, very pleased."

Mantovani studied classical music and the violin before deciding in the 1930s it might be more profitable to form an orchestra. He says, "This popular music, strangely enough, is a challenge. You perhaps have a simple piece, and with color and imagination and beautiful playing, you can hear a butterfly coming out of chrysalis."

Mantovani and his orchestra make three or four records a year. At present they are in the United States, traveling by car and bus, on a nine-week, 60-city concert tour which will end in New York Dec. 1.

The conductor does most of the orchestra's musical arrangements. He says, "I don't do them all, I haven't the time these days. I do as many as I can."

He says one of his major problems, with an orchestra which has 45 pieces at its minimum, is getting good musicians.

"Like everything else that is good, they are not always in quantity. Sometimes you'll write bits for a musician that you know he can play. Then he doesn't come for some reason and you really discover how few good musicians there are."

Mantovani was born in Venice, has lived in England since he was 3 and says, "I've never felt anything else but English." He and his wife have two grown children.

A Britisher with an Italian name, causes no surprise in America, Mantovani says, but his name is frequently misspelled and even more frequently mispronounced — MONtovani instead of MANtovani. But, he says graciously, "You get used to things like that."

Benny Suspicious

Jack Benny, held court recently at the Golden Rivet Ceremonies dedicating Universal City's multi-million-dollar building program. Said Benny: "Somehow I feel this whole thing will turn out as a pilot for a new TV series."

Tom Harmon Anchors Boat Show

Tho Tom Harmon's fame came thru football, the Michigan All-American halfback will be seen as anchor commentator for "ABC's Wide World of Sports" coverage of the National Inboard Power Boat Championships at San Diego's Mission Bay, at 3 p.m. today.

Many viewers may wonder why "01' 98" is covering a boat racing event.

Harmon, since he discarded his football cleats, has become one of the country's top all-around sports broadcasters, handling commentary on virtually every sport and hosting his seven-days-a-week ABC Radio sports show. And he does have some extra knowledge of power boats.

"I've covered four Gold Cup races on radio," he recalled. "In fact I've interviewed Bill Muncey, who happens to be our expert on this show, several times after Bill won the Cup.

"I've always had a deep interest in hydroplanes and power boats—and I even rode with the famous driver, the late Lou Fagol."

Harmon remembered one afternoon in Detroit when he watched in horror as Muncey cut a Coast Guard cutter in two with a hydroplane.

"It's better to be working with him at my side than to be thinking of him the day he crashed into that cutter," Harmon said.

Harmon keeps up with power boats on a year-round basis—in fact he owns one which he uses at California's Lake Arrowhead for water skiing.

As for racing power boats, Tom said he would stick to watching or calling the races, but he greatly admires the men who drive the big boats.

"This is a great example of a truly amateur sport. These men bring in their boats from all over the United States and Canada at their own expense. They do it for the pure sport of racing."

Up to His Ears

Marlon Brando put the "Method" in a closet for one of his comedy scenes in "Bedtime Story," starring Brando, David Niven and Shirley Jones. The "Method" requires the entire body to be used to convey emotions. In the scene, Marlon was buried up to his ears — in sand.

"At the start of the series," says Alan Young, "I promised 'Mister Ed' not to bite him if he'd promise not to bite me. We've kept our promises."

ARTS CHRONICLE by John Fetler

Sara Uffelman Paintings Shown at Pueblo Gallery

SARA UFFELMAN — The popular Pueblo artist, who is also well-known in Colorado Springs, is being given a one-man show at the Gallery 7th Red Door in Pueblo, with a reception and opening this Sunday afternoon. She is showing some 25 new paintings, primarily in oils and watercolors.

Joining the national trend, Mrs. Uffelman is featuring a number of "figure" paintings, a few of them recently returned from national juried exhibitions. In a newspaper criqitue, Paul Ihrig, head of Southern Colorado State College Art Department, explained: "Mrs. Uffelman's love of yellow, orange and red in their suble, high-value gradations gives a sparkle that is seldom seen in modern oil paintings. . Night gives Mrs. Uffelman a chance to use her brilliant colors, but in subdued areas to the dark that is dominant."

Mrs. Uffelman, by the way, has the reputation of being the most popular painter in Pueblo, judging from the number of purchases of her work. Born in Calcutta, India, Mrs. Uffelman has lived in the United States since childhood. She received a B. F. A. degree from Carnegie Institute in 1942, and her M.F.A. from the University of Colorado in 1950. She also studied with Max Beckman. After teaching at the University of Colorado, with her husband she moved to Pueblo. She teaches at Pueblo College. In 1962 her work appeared in eight juried or invitational art shows in five states, and won for her four prizes including three purchase prizes. So far in 1963 she has had work shown in seven shows. Her paintings are also shown in the Pueblo gallery on a regular basis. The gallery also features a number of Colorado Springs artists on a regular basis, and has reported some gratifying sales of their work to the Pueblo audience.

DEAR SUH — Writes Gladney Sylvester, the sculptor and eternal student of esoteric lore with a Louisiana drawl: "This is muh swan song, I did not know swans sung, but somebody sed 'yes they did but don't anymore,' anyway, this one does! Alas!

"Do not cry gentle reader because a nartist is born every minute sometimes two! Especially if twins — an shut up Gladney!

"The reason ah got in this mood wuz because ah read 'Huck Finn' fer the twelfth time an got stuck in the part what Huck learns of a girl artist which has died an she had left a picture of a girl about to jump off a bridge with three trial sets of arms; she wuz gonna rub out two but never got to do so. Alack!

"Another one was called 'I shall never hear thy sweet chirrup more, alas!' And another 'And art thou gone yes thou art gone alas.'

"Today the Beats would call her a 'gone guy' an out of style because success are now in fashion never mind about the 'Art' whatever that is.

"Rose colored glasses can't be worn alla time. Why not wear blue ones sometime an then everything is a "rhapsody in blue.' Hits lots of fun — so long. Gladney."

CULTURAL RESOURCES— We continue the list of cultural resources which has been compiled by the Chamber of Commerce, and which we have been featuring exactly as the compilers have written it at the Chamber, as supplied to the Chamber by the organizations mentioned:

COLORADO SPRINGS SYMPHONY ASSOCIATION — The Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra has been in existence over thirty years serving the citizens of the Pikes Peak Region with fine music thru the Winter Concert series as well as the extensive Youth Concert Program.

Under the leadership of its dynamic conductor, Walter Eisenberg, the symphony has, during the last ten years, grown in stature and prestige. The Winter Concert series presents the orchestra in six concerts with nationally famous guest artists appearing as soloists for five of these. The Youth Concert program has annually reached over 18,000 students in the Pikes Peak Region bringing concerts into the grade schools, junior high schools and — this year — the senior high schools. The overall program of community service also includes a winter Family Pops concert as well as summer Pops concerts.

The orchestra is composed of the finest musicians living in the entire Pikes Peak Region. Players from Pueblo, Denver and points between as well as those residing within the city limits all participate.

This excellent orchestra has been favorably compared with many in larger cities and is a vital, growing part of the cultural life of Colorado Springs.

COLORADO SPRINGS MINERALOGICAL SOCIETY —The Colorado Springs Mineralogical Society is a non-profit organization which was founded in 1936. It is affiliated with the Rocky Mountain Federation of Mineralogical Societies and a member of the American Federation of Mineralogical Societies.

The purposes of the club are: to promote knowledge about minerals and their uses; to encourage the collecting of specimens and lapidary work as a hobby; to conduct meetings, lectures, displays and field trips; and to sponsor special study groups.

Regular monthly meetings are held on the second Friday night of each month, from September thru May. The summer months are devoted to field trips. There are about 150 adult and 50 junior members. Newcomers or visitors to the area may write to P. O. Box 2515 for the details of current activities.

During the past seventeen years, the society has maintained a mineral display and a fluorescent mineral exhibit at the Pioneer Museum. It has furnished authoritative lecturers to civic and educational organizations, and has donated collections of mineral specimens to earth science classes in the public schools.

Currently, the members are assembling a representative collection of Colorado minerals for a university in Mexico. Another long-range project will be to identify and label the geologic formations of the Pikes Peak Region. During the summer and thruout the year, members are actively participating in the H.E.L.P. (Help Eliminate Litter, Please) campaign.

Special projects have included: furnishing displays, lectures and specimens for the Girl Scout Roundup in 1959; arranging for a mineral display and field trips for the Symposium on Thermionic Power Conversion in 1962; and assembling and cutting 6,000 square inches of Colorado semi-precious stone for the mosaics in the Air Force Academy Chapel.

TROUBLED JEFFERSON—Beset by personal worries which his long absence from Monticello has aggravated, Thomas Jefferson (Charlton Heston) writes his resignation as Secretary of State, in "The Patriots," at 7:30 p.m. Friday in color on NBC-TV's "Hallmark Hall of Fame," KOAA-TV, Channel 5.

I Used to Be a Newspaperman Says Actor-Martian Walston

By RAY WALSTON

I used to be a newspaperman myself. Heard that one lately?

I earned my credentials and a lordly eight dollars a week as a reporter on a metropolitan paper which since has gone out of business. Obviously it didn't go out of business because it threw money around.

I'm being paid the princely sum of nothing to write this, which probably proves that as a journalist I make a good Martian.

And so, with extra-terrestrial cunning, have I led up to a few words about my first television series, which is called "My Favorite Martian" and which is seen Sundays on the CBS Television Network.

I play the man from Mars of the title. And as an ex-newspaperman and critic, I can appreciate the role.

Critics have a wonderful time expertising on performances by actors who are playing mere Earthlings. Particularly by actors who play the roles of newspapermen.

I know a few columnists who have played newspapermen on television and have even hated themselves in the parts.

But what can a critic say about a guy playing a Martian? What standards of critical evaluation does he have?

Of course, it isn't difficult to find descriptions of men from Mars in popular fiction. But it's another matter finding any two fantasy writers who agree on what a Martian is really like.

And how many critics do you know who are Martians themselves? On second thought, some actor friends of mine have accused critics of being Martians and worse after reading reviews of their performances.

So if I come from Mars to Earth in a spaceship, who's going to argue? What other way of travel is there between these two points. As far as I know, there are not now any regularly scheduled commercial flights between the Red Planet and this globe.

And if, as a Martian, I leave no fingerprints on anything I touch, can you cavil? I say Martians have no fingerprints.

If I come to Earth on a purely peaceful mission, can anyone argue convincingly that it is unrealistic—that Martians all are warmongers?

How many other Martians have you seen on television?

When I cause inanimate objects to move through the sheer strength of my will, I ask you not to disbelieve that Martians are practicing telekinesists.

In short, our guess as to what a Martian is, thinks, does and feels is probably as good as yours—or any critic's.

But if the critics pay me no heed and do, indeed pan my performance, I simply shall play my hole card:

Martians can disappear at will.

'Time to Live' Televised At 5 Today

A filmed profile of Colorado Springs, "Time to Live," will be televised in color at 5 p.m. today on KRDO-TV, Channel 13.

Produced by the Alexander Film Company, the half-hour movie was financed by a number of local business firms including the Gazette Telegraph.

The Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce will use the movie as a promotion for the Pikes Peak Region to attract new residents, visitors and industries.

Newscaster Alex Dreier narrates the program which pictures many familiar scenes to local residents, notably Pikes Peak, the Garden of the Gods, and the U. S. Air Force Academy.

Greenhouse Doubles For Gerle

The Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra, in rehearsal for its concert on Nov. 21, is receiving unusual assistance from one of its members, Sgt. Norman Greenhouse.

For these rehearsals, Greenhouse has mastered the solo part of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto which guest artist, Robert Gerle, is to perform in the second concert of the season.

Greenhouse, who has been a member of the local orchestra for the past three years, first prepared the concerto several years ago for rehearsal with the National Symphony of Washington, D.C. The artist for whom Greenhouse was standing in on that occasion was Fritz Kreisler. At that time Greenhouse held the second chair with the National Symphony.

Sgt. Greenhouse attended the Julliard School of Music prior to going to Washington. Since 1950, he has served with the U. S. Air Force. He was a member of the Air Force Orchestra and has been with the U. S. Air Force Academy Band for three years.

Altho the versatile musician plays the clarinet and drum with the band and teaches piano to some twenty pupils, he is a first violinist with the Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra. Greenhouse has appeared as violin soloist at numerous local events both in town and at the Air Force Academy. He is also a member of the string quartet made up of symphony personnel under the direction of Walter Eisenberg.

The Mendelssohn Concerto is one of the best known and most popular with concert audiences, and is a classic in the violin repertoire.

Jazz Releases Include Pianos Of Erroll Garner, Peterson

AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you skipped Newport this year, haven't dropped in lately at Basin Street East or the Hickory House and didn't happen to be in Britain during October, you can still hear the good jazz pianists that you missed — on records.

Erroll Garner, who spent the month on concert tour in Britain, plays music from the movie, "A New Kind of Love," with orchestral background, for Mercury.

He also wrote most of it. There's a theme for Joan Woodward and one for Paul Newman, "Paris Mist," which he plays both waltz tempo and bossa nova and "Fashion Interlude," a waltz which he retitles "The Tease" when he swings its tempo. There's no "Misty" here, but "The Tease" is very appealing; it's somewhere between the "The Shortest Day of the Year" and "The Stripper."

And Garner's playing, always happy and rhythm perfect, gives freshness to oldies like "Mimi" and "Louise."

The Oscar Peterson Trio, which includes Ray Brown on bass and Ed Thigpen on drums, has checked out of Basin Street East and checked in to record racks with "Night Train" on Verve. They play as a trio, it isn't all Oscar Peterson, and they play with vitality, though most of the bands on this album are leisurely blues. None of the tunes are new — "Night Train," "Honey Dripper," "I Got It Bad and That Ain't Good."

Bill Evans, who has been described as "the romanticist of the modern jazz avante-garde," plays quite a bit of piano at New York's Hickory House.

But he's done something on his latest album that patrons there will never hear. Evans made a tape, then listening to a playback on headphones, recorded a second track. Listening again, he played a third track, turning himself into a jazz piano trio. None of the arrangements were written down before he started.

Results are listenable, musically very interesting. Evans calls the Verve album "Conversations with Myself."

"Martial Solal at Newport '63" was recorded live by RCA on July 7. The Algerian-born Frenchman, who came to this country for the Newport Jazz Festival, uses a lot of cadenzas and runs and always retains either the reality or the echo of the melody. Among his selections are two also found on the Bill Evans album — "Steila by Starlight" and "'Round Midnight" — in completely different style, of course, and "Boplicity."

Following Solal's visit, Capitol has reissued an album he previously recorded in France. Now titled "Vive la France! Vive le Jazz! Vive Solal!," it formerly was "Martial Solal." Only one selection duplicates the RCA album, Thelonious Monk's "'Round Midnight."

Great Goods news for lovers of modern jazz is another Capitol reissue, "Birth of the Cool," 11 legendary sides cut in 1949 and 1950 by Miles Davis.

"Move," "Jeru," "Budo" and "Godchild" were recorded Jan. 21, 1949, by Miles Davis, Kai Winding, Junior Collins, John Barber, Lee Konitz, Gerry Mulligan, Al Haig, Joe Shulman and Max Roach.

"Venus de Milo," "Boplicity," "Israel" and "Rouge" were done April 22, 1949, by Miles Davis, J. J. Johnson, Sandy Siegelstein, John Barber, Lee Konitz, Gerry Mulligan, John Lewis, Nelson Boyd and Kenny Clarke.

There are some masterpieces of sound here — intimate, serene, with a beautiful quality.

Jack's Wife Didn't Seek Protection

NEW YORK (AP)—Mary Livingston, wife of comedian Jack Benny, might not have lost $200,000 worth of jewels to a robber if she had accepted police protection, says Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy.

A man robbed Miss Livingston Nov. 2 in her suite at the Hotel Pierre. Benny had left earlier for an appearance in Pittsburgh. Miss Livingston was not harmed.

Murphy said Thursday the Bennys have not been the only celebrities to reject offers of protection.

Similar cases of refusal where thefts later occurred, Murphy said, involved singer Constance McGrath, who lost $40,000 worth of jewelry from her Hotel Plaza suite last Jan. 24, and Patrice Wymore, widow of Errol Flynn. Two fur coats valued at $8,000 were stolen Oct. 4 from her Drake Hotel suite.

Said Murphy: "We are doing everything we can to stop these crimes, but we need the cooperation of the public."

Murrow Will Return to Work

WASHINGTON (AP)—Edward R. Murrow, director of the United States Information Agency, is expected to return to work in another week or 10 days, a USIA spokesman said Thursday night.

Murrow underwent an operation for removal of his left lung on Oct. 5, following discovery of a malignant tumor.

When Gale Gordon of "Dennis the Menace" was a year old, his American thespian parents took him to England, where they performed for eight years.

SKI POINTERS—Bob Beattie, coach of the U.S. Olympic Alpine Ski team, offers pointers to team member Linda Meyers at Bend, Ore., training camp, on "IX Winter Olympic Games" at 4:30 today, on KRDO-TV, Channel 13. Beattie is one of the Olympic experts working on the series that will lead up to ABC-TV's exclusive coverage of the Winter Olympics from Innsbruck, Austria, next January.

Downhill Skiing Explored in 'IX Winter Olympic' Show

Ski experts Bob Beattie, Buddy Werner and Penny Pitou are studio guests as host Curt Gowdy explores the techniques and heroes of "Downhill Skiing," one of the most dangerous and challenging winter sports, on "IX Winter Olympic Games" today on KRDO-TV, Channel 13.

Beattie, coach of the United States Olympic Alpine team and ABC-TV's ski expert for the series of 15 programs leading to the network's exclusive coverage of the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria, next January, will point out the challenge facing the olympic skiers as they streak down Patscherkofel Mountain at speeds up to 70 miles per hour.

Shots of France's Jean Vuarnet, winner of the downhill event at Squaw Valley in 1960, with a special camera in his helmet recording the challenging terrain of La Piste Verte at Chamonix, France, will be unreeled.

Then Gowdy will discuss how downhill skiing became a part of the Olympic program as a single event at St. Moritz in 1948 as action footage is rolled illustrating such past Winter Games victors in action as France's Henry Oreiller and Switzerland's Hedi Schlunegger in 1948, Zeno Colo of Italy and Trude Jochum-Beiser of Austria in 1952, Austria's Toni Sailer and Swiss Madeleine Berthod in 1956, and Vuarnet and Heidi Biebl of Germany in 1960.

Miss Pitou, who narrowly missed winning the 1960 Gold Medal when she faltered slightly at the notorious Airplane turn at Squaw Valley, will tell Gowdy and the viewing audience of the thrills of Olympic competition, the disappointments, the hard work of training and the skills required in downhill skiing.

Beattie, for the benefit of the audience's ski enthusiasts, will then give a studio demonstration of how to wax skis.

The U.S. Alpine team will be seen training at Bend, Oregon, the French team in France and the Austrian team in their homeland as they prepare for the 1964 Winter Olympics.

Also to be seen in action are Gold Medal downhill contenders Guy Perillat and Marielle Goitschel of France, Karl Schranz, Egon Zimmerman and Christal Haas of Austria, and Buddy Werner of the U. S.

Werner and coach Beattie will then discuss America's Alpine chances at the upcoming games while footage is shown of U. S. skiers Billy Marold, Jean Saubert, and Joan Hannah.

Australia and New Zealand will replace their pounds and shillings with dollars and cents in 1966.

WINE FLOWS FREE

MARINO, Italy (AP)—Would you like to see wine spouting from the city's fountains—and free for anyone to drink?

Come to the vineyard city in the hills outside Rome.

It only happens one day a year. But on the day of the annual vineyard festival, the water is turned off and wine flows from both of the city's fountains.

There are, naturally, quite a few visitors to the city on that day.

Mantovani Makes Recordings 'For People to Listen to'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Do people buy the lushly orchestrated music of Mantovani for real listening or as unobtrusive background melody?

"I think they act in both cases," answers Annunzio Paolo Mantovani, "but I record for people to listen. I do too many nuances in the orchestra really for background music. Background music is usually played at one level. I get first-class musicians and do some fine interpretations.

"I think it is the interpretations and the rather unique string sound that we have that attracts the public, you know."

The public has been attracted sufficiently to purchase 14 million records, Mantovani says, since he first started recording, for London, in 1951.

His orchestration and types of music he plays — pop and semiclassical pieces — are largely in the same manner today as then. Of some 40 LPs, Mantovani had done only one classical — Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and Concerto in F" — and only one with vocal — Mario del Monaco singing popular Italian songs.

The biggest change, Mantovani says, is that some types of music have gone out of style. "The greatest of the tangos—'Jalousie' — sounds old-fashioned today. It's the style of music. The rhythm is all wrong and yet 'Jalousie' has been a fabulous hit.

"I made a tango record about 1952 or '53 and I won't make another one. It's not because the music isn't something good, but it's gone by.

"Operettas have had it, too, all except Strauss. They're in another era."

The dark-haired, 52-year-old conductor continues, "We just recorded music from Manhattan — 'Slaughter on 10th Avenue,' 'Take the A Train' — and it worried me when I first thot of doing it. Is this going to sound dead?

"Actually, the music IS dated. But it still has a freshness if you reorchestrate it in such a way that there is nothing old about it. I'm very pleased with it, very pleased."

Mantovani studied classical music and the violin before deciding in the 1930s it might be more profitable to form an orchestra. He says, "This popular music, strangely enough, is a challenge. You perhaps have a simple piece, and with color and imagination and beautiful playing, you can hear a butterfly coming out of chrysalis."

Mantovani and his orchestra make three or four records a year. At present they are in the United States, traveling by car and bus, on a nine-week, 60-city concert tour which will end in New York Dec. 1.

The conductor does most of the orchestra's musical arrangements. He says, "I don't do them all. I haven't the time these days. I do as many as I can."

He says one of his major problems, with an orchestra which has 45 pieces at its minimum, is getting good musicians.

"Like everything else that is good, they are not always in quantity. Sometimes you'll write bits for a musician that you know he can play. Then he doesn't come for some reason and you really discover how few good musicians there are."

Mantovani was born in Venice, has lived in England since he was 3 and says, "I've never felt anything else but English." He and his wife have two grown children.

A Britisher with an Italian name, causes no surprise in America, Mantovani says, but his name is frequently misspelled and even more frequently mispronounced — MONtovani instead of MANtovani. But, he says graciously, "You get used to things like that."

Benny Suspicious

Jack Benny, held court recently at the Golden Rivet Ceremonies dedicating Universal City's multi-million-dollar building program. Said Benny: "Somehow I feel this whole thing will turn out as a pilot for a new TV series."

Tom Harmon Anchors Boat Show

Tho Tom Harmon's fame came thru football, the Michigan All-American halfback will be seen as anchor commentator for "ABC's Wide World of Sports" coverage of the National Inboard Power Boat Championships at San Diego's Mission Bay, at 3 p.m. today.

Many viewers may wonder why "01' 98" is covering a boat racing event.

Harmon, since he discarded his football cleats, has become one of the country's top all-around sports broadcasters, handling commentary on virtually every sport and hosting his seven-days-a-week ABC Radio sports show. And he does have some extra knowledge of power boats.

"I've covered four Gold Cup races on radio," he recalled. "In fact I've interviewed Bill Muncey, who happens to be our expert on this show, several times after Bill won the Cup.

"I've always had a deep interest in hydroplanes and power boats—and I even rode with the famous driver, the late Lou Fagol."

Harmon remembered one afternoon in Detroit when he watched in horror as Muncey cut a Coast Guard cutter in two with a hydroplane.

"It's better to be working with him at my side than to be thinking of him the day he crashed into that cutter," Harmon said.

Harmon keeps up with power boats on a year-round basis—in fact he owns one which he uses at California's Lake Arrowhead for water skiing.

As for racing power boats, Tom said he would stick to watching or calling the races, but he greatly admires the men who drive the big boats.

"This is a great example of a truly amateur sport. These men bring in their boats from all over the United States and Canada at their own expense. They do it for the pure sport of racing."

Up to His Ears

Marlon Brando put the "Method" in a closet for one of his comedy scenes in "Bedtime Story," starring Brando, David Niven and Shirley Jones. The "Method" requires the entire body to be used to convey emotions. In the scene, Marlon was buried up to his ears — in sand.

"At the start of the series," says Alan Young, "I promised 'Mister Ed' not to bite him if he'd promise not to bite me. We've kept our promises."

Sara Uffelman Paintings Shown at Pueblo Gallery

SARA UFFELMAN — The popular Pueblo artist, who is also well-known in Colorado Springs, is being given a one-man show at the Gallery 7th Red Door in Pueblo, with a reception and opening this Sunday afternoon. She is showing some 25 new paintings, primarily in oils and watercolors.

Joining the national trend, Mrs. Uffelman is featuring a number of "figure" paintings, a few of them recently returned from national juried exhibitions. In a newspaper criqitue, Paul Ihrig, head of Southern Colorado State College Art Department, explained: "Mrs. Uffelman's love of yellow, orange and red in their suble, high-value gradations gives a sparkle that is seldom seen in modern oil paintings. . .Night gives Mrs. Uffelman a chance to use her brilliant colors, but in subdued areas to the dark that is dominant."

Mrs. Uffelman, by the way, has the reputation of being the most popular painter in Pueblo, judging from the number of purchases of her work. Born in Calcutta, India, Mrs. Uffelman has lived in the United States since childhood. She received a B. F. A. degree from Carnegie Institute in 1942, and her M.F.A. from the University of Colorado in 1950. She also studied with Max Beckman. After teaching at the University of Colorado, with her husband she moved to Pueblo. She teaches at Pueblo College. In 1962 her work appeared in eight juried or invitational art shows in five states, and won for her four prizes including three purchase prizes. So far in 1963 she has had work shown in seven shows. Her paintings are also shown in the Pueblo gallery on a regular basis. The gallery also features a number of Colorado Springs artists on a regular basis, and has reported some gratifying sales of their work to the Pueblo audience.

DEAR SUH — Writes Gladney Sylvester, the sculptor and eternal student of esoteric lore with a Louisiana drawl: "This is muh swan song, I did not know swans sung, but somebody sed 'yes they did but don't anymore.' anyway, this one does! Alas!

"Do not cry gentle reader because a nartist is born every minute sometimes two! Especially if twins — an shut up Gladney!

"The reason ah got in this mood wuz because ah read 'Huck Finn' fer the twelfth time an got stuck in the part what Huck learns of a girl artist which has died an she had left a picture of a girl about to jump off a bridge with three trial sets of arms; she wuz gonna rub out two but never got to do so. Alack!

"Another one was called 'I shall never hear thy sweet chirrup more, alas!' And another 'And art thou gone yes thou art gone alas.'

"Today the Beats would call her a 'gone guy' an out of style because success are now in fashion never mind about the 'Art' whatever that is.

"Rose colored glasses can't be worn alla time. Why not wear blue ones sometime an then everything is a "rhapsody in blue.' Hits lots of fun — so long. Gladney."

CULTURAL RESOURCES— We continue the list of cultural resources which has been compiled by the Chamber of Commerce, and which we have been featuring exactly as the compilers have written it at the Chamber, as supplied to the Chamber by the organizations mentioned:

COLORADO SPRINGS SYMPHONY ASSOCIATION — The Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra has been in existence over thirty years serving the citizens of the Pikes Peak Region with fine music thru the Winter Concert series as well as the extensive Youth Concert Program.

Under the leadership of its dynamic conductor, Walter Eisenberg, the symphony has, during the last ten years, grown in stature and prestige. The Winter Concert series presents the orchestra in six concerts with nationally famous guest artists appearing as soloists for five of these. The Youth Concert program has annually reached over 18,000 students in the Pikes Peak Region bringing concerts into the grade schools, junior high schools and — this year — the senior high schools. The overall program of community service also includes a winter Family Pops concert as well as summer Pops concerts.

The orchestra is composed of the finest musicians living in the entire Pikes Peak Region. Players from Pueblo, Denver and points between as well as those residing within the city limits all participate.

This excellent orchestra has been favorably compared with many in larger cities and is a vital, growing part of the cultural life of Colorado Springs.

COLORADO SPRINGS MINERALOGICAL SOCIETY —The Colorado Springs Mineralogical Society is a non-profit organization which was founded in 1936. It is affiliated with the Rocky Mountain Federation of Mineralogical Societies and a member of the American Federation of Mineralogical Societies.

The purposes of the club are: to promote knowledge about minerals and their uses; to encourage the collecting of specimens and lapidary work as a hobby; to conduct meetings, lectures, displays and field trips; and to sponsor special study groups.

Regular monthly meetings are held on the second Friday night of each month, from September thru May. The summer months are devoted to field trips. There are about 150 adult and 50 junior members. Newcomers or visitors to the area may write to P. O. Box 2515 for the details of current activities.

During the past seventeen years, the society has maintained a mineral display and a fluorescent mineral exhibit at the Pioneer Museum. It has furnished authoritative lecturers to civic and educational organizations, and has donated collections of mineral specimens to earth science classes in the public schools.

Currently, the members are assembling a representative collection of Colorado minerals for a university in Mexico. Another long-range project will be to identify and label the geologic formations of the Pikes Peak Region. During the summer and thruout the year, members are actively participating in the H.E.L.P. (Help Eliminate Litter, Please) campaign.

Special projects have included: furnishing displays, lectures and specimens for the Girl Scout Roundup in 1959; arranging for a mineral display and field trips for the Symposium on Thermionic Power Conversion in 1962; and assembling and cutting 6,000 square inches of Colorado semi-precious stone for the mosaics in the Air Force Academy Chapel.

Paris Flower Show Set

Paris — The City of Light has launched plans to make next spring's April in Paris the sweetest smelling—as well as most glorious—season of the year for travelers. Beginning April 24, the city's magnificent "Palais de la Defense" exposition hall will be transformed into the world's largest flower garden.

For the 10-day period through May 3, the huge Palais will be the setting for an International Flower Festival that will see 12 of the hall's 20 acres of floor space covered with flowers, plants, and even an African jungle.

The enormous exhibition will be spread over five different levels of the hall, each spelling out a different aspect of the show's general theme, "The Gardens of Life." On the first level, for example, displays will dramatize "Gardens as a Complement to City Life," while on the third, the emphasis will be on the garden's role as a recreation center. Here the displays will be webbed with artificial lakes and canals. Higher up, on the fourth and fifth levels, visitors will be show how gardens can effectively compliment the overall arachitectural dsign of public buildings.

Among the special interest displays will be a 35-foot-high, 25,000-sq. ft. greenhouse, as well as exhibits devoted to the latest scientific techniques of plant raising, including plant grafts and mutations.

The "Floralies" will be open daily, April 24 to May 3, from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. The Palais del a Defense, on Paris' western edge, is easily reached by bus or subway.

Deal Your Pals a Hand; See Them as They Are

By WARD CANNEL

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Rack up another smashing victory for science over heart-warming illusion. It begins to appear from new research that there is probably no such thing as a nice, innocent card game among friends — and especially married couples.

And maybe it's just as well.

According to late returns from an indepth psychological study of social card-playing adults, the most popular inter-family games — bridge, poker, pinochle — reveal themselves as combat areas filled with the savage sounds of attack, retaliation, kill and overkill.

And the husband or wife who protests that the usual Saturday night game with the gang is just good fun, the study finds, knows deep down how lethal that deck of cards really is.

Most revealing in this study, perhaps, are the responses of the ladies who uniformly begin by describing how amused or bored they are at a card game, or what a social convenience it is for spending happy hours with old friends and new acquaintances.

But it doesn't take a skillful psychological prober too long to get below the surface and considerably closer to the truth.

"I love to play and I play to win," a 22-year-old girl says eventually, after explaining that cards is a well-mannered way to meet people.

"I'm really afraid to get too interested in playing cards," says a 37-year-old housewife who began by saying that cards bored her. "Every so often I force myself to sit back and look and I get frightened. I don't want to become that kind of person and get so savage."

For another woman, the heart of the matter bled profusely despite her effort to hide it: "I think bridge reflects more of one's personality, whereas poker is a more friendly cutthroat sort of thing."

One middle-aged lady lashed out at a world she never made by reporting in ecstasy: "The only royal straight flush I ever got in my life came in a game with an atomic physicist. You should have seen his face."

And from a woman who will shortly be collecting her Social Security: "You play against an opponent and if you have good players, that's the excitement. It's you against them."

Billy the Kid couldn't have put it any better. And why?

Because, say the experts who conducted this survey for the Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers, card playing is a fundamental form of sublimation, a socially acceptable way of "beating the other guy."

It is, the survey team says, one of the ways people work out their basic hostilities, frustrations of everyday living, inner tensions. . .and in a manner that will not land them in jail for crimes against society.

If you don't believe all this, just organize a penny-ante poker game in your dining room one night and take careful note of what people say and how they say it as the night rolls on.

And if tempers begin to flare over the turn of a card and unkind words are muttered across a pot of 18 pennies, well, remember that it's only a friendly, cutthroat, savage game, and the family that plays together stays together — and it's you against them.

Historic Olives

Many Americans who have visited the Riviera remember with longing the wonderful Provencal dishes such as salade Nicoise, which owe much of their savor to the fresh olives grown in the region. According to Air France, Provence between Antibes and Marseille was settled in 500 B. C. by the Greeks. It was they who planted the first olive trees on the hillsides of France's Riviera.

LEISURETIME BOOKS by John Fetler

Kansan Writes New Book On Gen. William Palmer

NEW BOOK ON GEN. PALMER — "KANSAS WEST — An Epic of Western Railroad Building" — By George L. Anderson — Golden West Books — $6.95 — Local history buffs sometimes realize with a shock that what they thought was their own personal historical province, such figures as Pike and Palmer, have also been associated with other parts of the country, Pike with Texas, and now Gen. Palmer is getting a history entitled "Kansas West."

It is no coincidence, however, that Kansans are getting the story of Gen. Palmer (although published by the California firm in San Marino.) (And that may not be a coincidence, either, for the publisher of Golden West Books graduated from Colorado College in 1951.)

The author is professor of history and chairman of the department of history at the University of Kansas, but he formerly was an instructor of history at Colorado College, in 1934, when he became interested in the story of William J. Palmer, the founder of Colorado Springs and builder of the Rio Grande road.

Subsequently, Anderson became a full professor in 1949. He did considerable historical writing on Colorado and Kansas historical subjects.

Actually, there is quite a close connection between Kansas and the Pikes Peak Region, since the first attempt to establish a town on the present site of Colorado Springs did not come, as is commonly believed, with Gen. Palmer, but rather with a group of gold seekers from Lawrence, Kan., who even sold lots in the new town of "El Paso," which, apart from a log cabin on the banks of the creek, consisted only of a map. Some Kansans came out to inspect their lots, but drifted into ranch work, and others helped to establish Eldorado and Colorado City in what is now West Colorado Springs.

It was Gen. Palmer, however, who was able to establish the really first successful settlement, and incidentally to rescue the 81 persons who inhabited Colorado City from the doldrums and possible extinction.

Anderson's view of Palmer, of course, is from the Kansas angle. As the publisher explains: "Fresh from the Civil War, young William J. Palmer joined the Kansas Pacific Railroad and helped push its rails across the prairies in quest of a transcontinental route. The Kansas Pacific never built beyond Denver, but its trains brought to the West the cowboys, gamblers and gunslingers who lived by the law of the six-shooter. Later traffic settled down to the legendary longhorn steers which followed the famous Chisholm and Ellsworth Trails from Texas to the Kansas Pacific railhead.

"Before the Kansas Pacific reached Denver in 1870, Palmer dreamed of a railroad all the way to Mexico City. On July 29, 1871, his own narrow gauge Denver & Rio Grande broke ground and headed south. thwarted from reaching the final goal of Mexico City by a battle with the Santa Fe for rights over Raton Pass, the D&RG turned back into the hills and laced the Rocky Mountains with its tracks."

In addition to Palmer's story, the book features an extensive gallery of historical photographs, maps and illustrations of the days when the tiny coal-burning steam locomotives whistled their way thru mile-deep Colorado canyons or charged thru the Wild West towns on the Kansas frontier.

In all, the book will appeal not only to those interested in history, but to railroad buffs as well.

ARK OF EMPIRE —By Dale Van Every — Morrow — $6. — A federalized nation is taken for granted today, almost, if it were not for the Southern movements — but at one point of American history, "Balkanization" seemed almost inevitable.

Van Every describes the crucial period between 1784 and 1803, when the nation we knew took shape.

The "Old Frontier" felt no particular loyalty to the United States. The settlers had to fight their own revolutionary war, mostly against Indian raiders, and they went on fighting it for years after the seaboard states had made their peace with Britain.

All kinds of plans for secession, independently or in alliance with Britain, Spain or France were considered by the westerners.

In 1794, the fat really hit the fire: western Pennsylvania was in open revolt (the Whiskey Rebellion), one of the biggest Indian armies ever seen was massing in what is now northwestern Ohio, and Britain was apparently lining up with the Indians.

"Ark of Empire" is a carefully researched account of these largely forgotten but vitally important years. Although complete in itself, it is also the third volume of a contemplated tetralogy which Van Every calls "The Frontier People of America."

The Columbia Encyclopedia: Third Edition (Columbia University Press $49.50): This one-volume compendium of information about every important facet of human knowledge contains 2400 pages, 7.5 million words, 75,000 entries. The second edition came out in 1950 but all kinds of events and changes have occurred since then making it necessary to rewrite the entire book and make it 200 pages longer. People, places, events, sciences, arts, pastimes are all treated in sufficient space to satisfy the casual reader or lead the researcher to further sources.

Animal Life and Lore, by Osmond P. Breland (Harper & Row $6.95): A non-technical collection of facts and fables about the most interesting animals including mammals, birds, fish, arthropods, mollusks and others. Which are the biggest, smallest, fastest, most dangerous, most useful? The book is packed with fascinating information in easily digested short paragraphs and sections containing the answers to questions children ask which often enough stump their elders.

Jazz Releases Include Pianos Of Erroll Garner, Peterson

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you skipped Newport this year, haven't dropped in lately at Basin Street East or the Hickory House and didn't happen to be in Britain during October, you can still hear the good jazz pianists that you missed — on records.

Erroll Garner, who spent the month on concert tour in Britain, plays music from the movie, "A New Kind of Love," with orchestral background, for Mercury.

He also wrote most of it. There's a theme for Joan Woodward and one for Paul Newman. "Paris Mist," which he plays both waltz tempo and bossa nova and "Fashion Interlude," a waltz which he retitles "The Tease" when he swings its tempo. There's no "Misty" here, but "The Tease" is very appealing; it's somewhere between the "The Shortest Day of the Year" and "The Stripper."

And Garner's playing, always happy and rhythm perfect, gives freshness to oldies like "Mimi" and "Louise."

The Oscar Peterson Trio, which includes Ray Brown on bass and Ed Thigpen on drums, has checked out of Basin Street East and checked in to record racks with "Night Train" on Verve. They play as a trio, it isn't all Oscar Peterson, and they play with vitality, though most of the bands on this album are leisurely blues. None of the tunes are new — "Night Train," "Honey Dripper," "I Got It Bad and That Ain't Good."

Bill Evans, who has been described as "the romanticist of the modern jazz avante-garde," plays quite a bit of piano at New York's Hickory House.

But he's done something on his latest album that patrons there will never hear. Evans made a tape, then listening to a playback on headphones, recorded a second track. Listening again, he played a third track, turning himself into a jazz piano trio. None of the arrangements were written down before he started.

Results are listenable, musically very interesting. Evans calls the Verve album "Conversations with Myself."

"Martial Solal at Newport '63" was recorded live by RCA on July 7. The Algerian-born Frenchman, who came to this country for the Newport Jazz Festival, uses a lot of cadenzas and runs and always retains either the reality or the echo of the melody. Among his selections are two also found on the Bill Evans album — "Steila by Starlight" and "'Round Midnight" — in completely different style, of course, and "Boplicity."

Following Solal's visit, Capitol has reissued an album he previously recorded in France. Now titled "Vive la France! Vive le Jazz! Vive Solal!," it formerly was "Martial Solal." Only one selection duplicates the RCA album, Thelonious Monk's "'Round Midnight."

Great Goods news for lovers of modern jazz is another Capitol reissue, "Birth of the Cool," 11 legendary sides cut in 1949 and 1950 by Miles Davis.

"Move," "Jeru," "Budo" and "Godchild" were recorded Jan. 21, 1949, by Miles Davis, Kai Winding, Junior Collins, John Barber, Lee Konitz, Gerry Mulligan, Al Haig, Joe Shulman and Max Roach.

"Venus de Milo," "Boplicity," "Israel" and "Rouge" were done April 22, 1949, by Miles Davis, J. J. Johnson, Sandy Siegelstein, John Barber, Lee Konitz, Gerry Mulligan, John Lewis, Nelson Boyd and Kenny Clarke.

There are some masterpieces of sound here — intimate, serene, with a beautiful quality.

Jack's Wife Didn't Seek Protection

NEW YORK (AP)—Mary Livingston, wife of comedian Jack Benny, might not have lost $200,000 worth of jewels to a robber if she had accepted police protection, says Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy.

A man robbed Miss Livingston Nov. 2 in her suite at the Hotel Pierre. Benny had left earlier for an appearance in Pittsburgh. Miss Livingston was not harmed.

Murphy said Thursday the Bennys have not been the only celebrities to reject offers of protection.

Similar cases of refusal where thefts later occurred, Murphy said, involved singer Constance McGrath, who lost $40,000 worth of jewelry from her Hotel Plaza suite last Jan. 24, and Patrice Wymore, widow of Errol Flynn. Two fur coats valued at $8,000 were stolen Oct. 4 from her Drake Hotel suite.

Said Murphy: "We are doing everything we can to stop these crimes, but we need the cooperation of the public."

Murrow Will Return to Work

WASHINGTON (AP)—Edward R. Murrow, director of the United States Information Agency, is expected to return to work in another week or 10 days, a USIA spokesman said Thursday night.

Murrow underwent an operation for removal of his left lung on Oct. 5, following discovery of a malignant tumor.

When Gale Gordon of "Dennis the Menace" was a year old, his American thespian parents took him to England, where they performed for eight years.

SKI POINTERS—Bob Beattie, coach of the U.S. Olympic Alpine Ski team, offers pointers to team member Linda Meyers at Bend, Ore., training camp, on "IX Winter Olympic Games" at 4:30 today, on KRDO-TV, Channel 13. Beattie is one of the Olympic experts working on the series that will lead up to ABC-TV's exclusive coverage of the Winter Olympics from Innsbruck, Austria, next January.

Downhill Skiing Explored in 'IX Winter Olympic' Show

Ski experts Bob Beattie, Buddy Werner and Penny Pitou are studio guests as host Curt Gowdy explores the techniques and heroes of "Downhill Skiing," one of the most dangerous and challenging winter sports, on "IX Winter Olympic Games" today on KRDO-TV, Channel 13.

Beattie, coach of the United States Olympic Alpine team and ABC-TV's ski expert for the series of 15 programs leading to the network's exclusive coverage of the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria, next January, will point out the challenge facing the olympic skiers as they streak down Patscherkofel Mountain at speeds up to 70 miles per hour.

Shots of France's Jean Vuarnet, winner of the downhill event at Squaw Valley in 1960, with a special camera in his helmet recording the challenging terrain of La Piste Verte at Chamonix, France, will be unreeled.

Then Gowdy will discuss how downhill skiing became a part of the Olympic program as a single event at St. Moritz in 1948 as action footage is rolled illustrating such past Winter Games victors in action as France's Henry Oreiller and Switzerland's Hedi Schlunegger in 1948, Zeno Colo of Italy and Trude Jochum-Beiser of Austria in 1952, Austria's Toni Sailer and Swiss Madeleine Berthod in 1956, and Vuarnet and Heidi Biebl of Germany in 1960.

Miss Pitou, who narrowly missed winning the 1960 Gold Medal when she faltered slightly at the notorious Airplane turn at Squaw Valley, will tell Gowdy and the viewing audience of the thrills of Olympic competition, the disappointments, the hard work of training and the skills required in downhill skiing.

Beattie, for the benefit of the audience's ski enthusiasts, will then give a studio demonstration of how to wax skis.

The U.S. Alpine team will be seen training at Bend, Oregon, the French team in France and the Austrian team in their homeland as they prepare for the 1964 Winter Olympics.

Also to be seen in action are Gold Medal downhill contenders Guy Perillat and Marielle Goitschel of France, Karl Schranz, Egon Zimmerman and Christal Haas of Austria, and Buddy Werner of the U. S.

Werner and coach Beattie will then discuss America's Alpine chances at the upcoming games while footage is shown of U. S. skiers Billy Marold, Jean Saubert, and Joan Hannah.

Australia and New Zealand will replace their pounds and shillings with dollars and cents in 1966.

WINE FLOWS FREE

MARINO, Italy (AP)—Would you like to see wine spouting from the city's fountains—and free for anyone to drink?

Come to the vineyard city in the hills outside Rome.

It only happens one day a year. But on the day of the annual vineyard festival, the water is turned off and wine flows from both of the city's fountains.

There are, naturally, quite a few visitors to the city on that day.

COLORADO SPRINGS KENNEL CLUB NOTES

by Mary Urban

The first obedience exhibition of the group from the Colorado Springs Kennel Club was termed a huge success last Saturday when they performed for the combined 4-H clubs of Security and Widefield, at Security.

Approximately 40 children and their leaders watched as the Obedience group demonstrated different phases of novice and open obedience work.

The boys and girls were also treated to a style show presented by Mrs. Howard Rossiter and featuring internationally known models, her three Miniature Pinschers. These dainty little dogs love showing off their lovely clothes which are all hand made by Mrs. Rossiter.

Remember, this group of kennel club members are available for exhibition to any group in the Colorado Springs area free of charge on only a weeks notice.

BREED OF THE WEEK
The Rottweiler

The Rottweiler is not a familiar dog to the American public but is a delight to those who fancy this breed. He is a good-sized dog, strongly built and active. He is affectionate, intelligent, easily trained to work, naturally obedient and very faithful. While not quarrelsome, he had great courage and makes a wonderful guard.

Males range in height from 23 to 27 inches, females 21 to 25 inches. His coat is short, coarse and flat. He is black with clearly defined tan to mahogany markings on cheeks, muzzle, chest and legs, as well as over both eyes.

The Rottweiler helped to change the map and races of Europe. If it had not been for him the Roman armies would not have been able to cross the mighty Alps and go down into Central Europe.

Military exhibitions by the Roman armies were huge undertakings. They had to assemble vast amounts of food. The greatest problem centered around meat for the soldiers and it had to be carried on the hoof. The movement of large herds of cattle meant work for many dogs. This cattle dog was the ancestor of the Rottweiler and travelled much further afield than some of the other types of cattle dogs. Their name comes from the township of Rottweil, which lies on a hill on the left bank of the Neckar River in Wurttemburg in the south of Germany.

Wurttemburg was conquered by the Romans in the first century. This means that the breed now called the Rottweiler is some 1,900 years old in its present form.

The town of Rottweil is in the center of the livestock country, 78 miles south of Stuttgart. The butchers and cattle merchants who settled in Rottweil out of necessity adopted a dog capable of hard work. Not only did the butcher-master need a good worker he needed a trusted companion. Since holdups were common it was dangerous to set forth on a buying exhibition. It became the practice for the master to tie his purse around the dog's neck. Few bandits dared to molest the sturdy Rottweiler or his purse.

Aside from guard work the Rottweiler has been used to drive cattle, oxen, sheep and pigs and pull carts. The larger specimens were considered more suitable for draft work than for driving cattle.

Gradually the Rottweiler was replaced by donkeys for pulling carts and the railroads for transporting cattle. It was feared the breed would be lost when in 1905 the town of Rottweil had only one female representative of the breed.

The breed made a comeback in 1910 when it was chosen as a desirable type for police training. It joined the Airdale Terrier, the German Shepherd and the Doberman Pinscher which were then the only breeds known for police work.

Always faithful and affectionate the Rottweiler has developed more character thru police work.

Questions about dogs may be directed to Mrs. Glenn Urban, 495-2143.

TV's Ills Diagnosed

By DICK KLEINER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — When you think about Otto Preminger, you think about movies. But when Otto Preminger thinks about Otto Preminger, he also thinks about television.

Preminger is the brilliant and controversial producer - director of big, classy movies like "Exodus" and his forthcoming "The Cardinal." He can virtually have his pick of any movie he chooses to direct. He's an extra large wheel in the motion picture business. And yet . . .

"I feel," he says, "that television could be the most exciting medium of them all. There is only one problem with television—it is a commercial medium and in most cases the product is more important than the program.

"It is different from newspapers. You publish a newspaper to print the news, and you also sell ads. But television is produced to sell commercials, and they also have programs.

"And television sponsors won't insult anybody. I don't blame them, but there is no art form which can please everybody. If you try to do so, you are weak."

"East Side, West Side" is an artistic and dramatic success. It remains to be seen whether it will be a commercial success. It is a product of Talent Associates, which used to be strictly David Susskind's group, but now Susskind has a partner.

He is Daniel Melnick, a 33-year-old wonder boy who had been director of programming for ABC. (He's also Richard Rodgers' son - in - law, but that is not very important). Melnick wasn't in on the conception of "East Side, West Side" but he's in on all the other Talent Associates projects, and they are many.

TV is making movies ("All the Way Home" is the latest); it is producing a Braodway show this season ("All in Good Time"); it has 100 hours of television on the 63-'64 schedule, including East Side, West Side, the DuPont Show of the Week, various specials.

And, Melnick says, it is working with Garson Kanin on two new telvision series which are "almost set"-for next fall—one, Mr. Broadway, is a sophisticated comedy about a press agent, and the other, Missie, is a situation comedy about a girl from the Midwest who comes to New York.

Chuck Connors, everybody says, is doing a major switch in playing a city feller, after all those years as The Rifleman. Connors plays the lawyer on ABC's new Arrest and Trial series.

But Connors thinks differently. This new role, he says, is not a switch—it was The Rifleman which was the switch.

"After all," he says, "I fit this part more naturally. I am a city boy, not a country boy. I didn't know anything about being a cowboy.

"Of course, the new role on Arrest and Trial is more demanding as an actor. Lucas McCain, The Rifleman, had the same basic problem every week—protecting his home and son against some outside force which was threatening it. But this is different. Every week, the problem and the relationships are new.

"And what actors I'm working with! I worked with Joseph Schildkraut. For the first time, I discovered what actors mean when they say they are emotionally exhausted. After working with Schildkraut, I was beat, but it wasn't physical exhaustion. It was a very wonderful feeling . . ."

'Yum Yum' International

If your libido has been vexed about the true meaning of the expression "yum yum" as it is used in the soon-due Jack Lemmon-Carol Lynley comedy "Under the Yum Yum Tree," then consider the headache the phrase gave the guy who had to translate the title for the international filmgoing audience.

In Germany, for example, "Under the Yum Yum Tree" is entitled, "Matrimonial Bed on Trial;" in France, "Yes or No Before Marriage;" in Scandanavia, "Lesson in Love;" and in much of Latin America, it is called "Half Marriage."

But the Italians are perfectly content with our title; in Italy the Columbia Pictures comedy is called "Sotto L'Albero Yum Yum". . which means "Under the Yum Yum Tree."

Paris Flower Show Set

Paris — The City of Light has launched plans to make next spring's April in Paris the sweetest smelling—as well as most glorious—season of the year for travelers. Beginning April 24, the city's magnificent "Palais de la Defense" exposition hall will be transformed into the world's largest flower garden.

For the 10-day period through May 3, the huge Palais will be the setting for an International Flower Festival that will see 12 of the hall's 20 acres of floor space covered with flowers, plants, and even an African jungle.

The enormous exhibition will be spread over five different levels of the hall, each spelling out a different aspect of the show's general theme, "The Gardens of Life." On the first level, for example, displays will dramatize "Gardens as a Complement to City Life," while on the third, the emphasis will be on the garden's role as a recreation center. Here the displays will be webbed with artificial lakes and canals. Higher up, on the fourth and fifth levels, visitors will be show how gardens can effectively compliment the overall arachitectural dsign of public buildings.

Among the special interest displays will be a 35-foot-high, 25,000-sq. ft. greenhouse, as well as exhibits devoted to the latest scientific techniques of plant raising, including plant grafts and mutations.

The "Floralies" will be open daily, April 24 to May 3, from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. The Palais del a Defense, on Paris' western edge, is easily reached by bus or subway.

Deal Your Pals a Hand: See Them as They Are

By WARD CANNEL

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Rack up another smashing victory for science over heart-warming illusion. It begins to appear from new research that there is probably no such thing as a nice, innocent card game among friends — and especially married couples.

And maybe it's just as well.

According to late returns from an indepth psychological study of social card-playing adults, the most popular inter-family games — bridge, poker, pinochle — reveal themselves as combat areas filled with the savage sounds of attack, retaliation, kill and overkill.

And the husband or wife who protests that the usual Saturday night game with the gang is just good fun, the study finds, knows deep down how lethal that deck of cards really is.

Most revealing in this study, perhaps, are the responses of the ladies who uniformly begin by describing how amused or bored they are at a card game, or what a social convenience it is for spending happy hours with old friends and new acquaintances.

But it doesn't take a skillful psychological prober too long to get below the surface and considerably closer to the truth.

"I love to play and I play to win," a 22-year-old girl says eventually, after explaining that cards is a well-mannered way to meet people.

"I'm really afraid to get too interested in playing cards," says a 37-year-old housewife who began by saying that cards bored her. "Every so often I force myself to sit back and look and I get frightened. I don't want to become that kind of person and get so savage."

For another woman, the heart of the matter bled profusely despite her effort to hide it: "I think bridge reflects more of one's personality, whereas poker is a more friendly cutthroat sort of thing."

One middle-aged lady lashed out at a world she never made by reporting in ecstasy: "The only royal straight flush I ever got in my life came in a game with an atomic physicist. You should have seen his face."

And from a woman who will shortly be collecting her Social Security: "You play against an opponent and if you have good players, that's the excitement. It's you against them."

Billy the Kid couldn't have put it any better. And why?

Because, say the experts who conducted this survey for the Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers, card playing is a fundamental form of sublimation, a socially acceptable way of "beating the other guy."

It is, the survey team says, one of the ways people work out their basic hostilities, frustrations of everyday living, inner tensions. . .and in a manner that will not land them in jail for crimes against society.

If you don't believe all this, just organize a penny-ante poker game in your dining room one night and take careful note of what people say and how they say it as the night rolls on.

And if tempers begin to flare over the turn of a card and unkind words are muttered across a pot of 18 pennies, well, remember that it's only a friendly, cutthroat, savage game, and the family that plays together stays together — and it's you against them.

Historic Olives

Many Americans who have visited the Riviera remember with longing the wonderful Provencal dishes such as salade Nicoise, which owe much of their savor to the fresh olives grown in the region. According to Air France, Provence between Antibes and Marseille was settled in 500 B. C. by the Greeks. It was they who planted the first olive trees on the hillsides of France's Riviera.

LEISURETIME BOOKS by John Fetler

NEW BOOK ON GEN. PALMER — "KANSAS WEST — An Epic of Western Railroad Building" — By George L. Anderson — Golden West Books — $6.95 — Local history buffs sometimes realize with a shock that what they thought was their own personal historical province, such figures as Pike and Palmer, have also been associated with other parts of the country, Pike with Texas, and now Gen. Palmer is getting a history entitled "Kansas West."

It is no coincidence, however, that Kansans are getting the story of Gen. Palmer (although published by the California firm in San Marino.) (And that may not be a coincidence, either, for the publisher of Golden West Books graduated from Colorado College in 1951.)

The author is professor of history and chairman of the department of history at the University of Kansas, but he formerly was an instructor of history at Colorado College, in 1934, when he became interested in the story of William J. Palmer, the founder of Colorado Springs and builder of the Rio Grande road.

Subsequently, Anderson became a full professor in 1949. He did considerable historical writing on Colorado and Kansas historical subjects.

Actually, there is quite a close connection between Kansas and the Pikes Peak Region, since the first attempt to establish a town on the present site of Colorado Springs did not come, as is commonly believed, with Gen. Palmer, but rather with a group of gold seekers from Lawrence, Kan., who even sold lots in the new town of "El Paso," which, apart from a log cabin on the banks of the creek, consisted only of a map. Some Kansans came out to inspect their lots, but drifted into ranch work, and others helped to establish Eldorado and Colorado City in what is now West Colorado Springs.

It was Gen. Palmer, however, who was able to establish the really first successful settlement, and incidentally to rescue the 81 persons who inhabited Colorado City from the doldrums and possible extinction.

Anderson's view of Palmer, of course, is from the Kansas angle. As the publisher explains: "Fresh from the Civil War, young William J. Palmer joined the Kansas Pacific Railroad and helped push its rails across the prairies in quest of a transcontinental route. The Kansas Pacific never built beyond Denver, but its trains brought to the West the cowboys, gamblers and gunslingers who lived by the law of the six-shooter. Later traffic settled down to the legendary longhorn steers which followed the famous Chisholm and Ellsworth Trails from Texas to the Kansas Pacific railhead.

"Before the Kansas Pacific reached Denver in 1870, Palmer dreamed of a railroad all the way to Mexico City. On July 29, 1871, his own narrow gauge Denver & Rio Grande broke ground and headed south. thwarted from reaching the final goal of Mexico City by a battle with the Santa Fe for rights over Raton Pass, the D&RG turned back into the hills and laced the Rocky Mountains with its tracks."

In addition to Palmer's story, the book features an extensive gallery of historical photographs, maps and illustrations of the days when the tiny coal-burning steam locomotives whistled their way thru mile-deep Colorado canyons or charged thru the Wild West towns on the Kansas frontier.

In all, the book will appeal not only to those interested in history, but to railroad buffs as well.

ARK OF EMPIRE —By Dale Van Every — Morrow — $6. — A federalized nation is taken for granted today, almost, if it were not for the Southern movements — but at one point of American history, "Balkanization" seemed almost inevitable.

Van Every describes the crucial period between 1784 and 1803, when the nation we knew took shape.

The "Old Frontier" felt no particular loyalty to the United States. The settlers had to fight their own revolutionary war, mostly against Indian raiders, and they went on fighting it for years after the seaboard states had made their peace with Britain.

All kinds of plans for secession, independently or in alliance with Britain, Spain or France were considered by the westerners.

In 1794, the fat really hit the fire: western Pennsylvania was in open revolt (the Whiskey Rebellion), one of the biggest Indian armies ever seen was massing in what is now northwestern Ohio, and Britain was apparently lining up with the Indians.

"Ark of Empire" is a carefully researched account of these largely forgotten but vitally important years. Although complete in itself, it is also the third volume of a contemplated tetralogy which Van Every calls "The Frontier People of America."

The Columbia Encyclopedia: Third Edition (Columbia University Press $49.50): This one-volume compendium of information about every important facet of human knowledge contains 2400 pages, 7.5 million words, 75,000 entries. The second edition came out in 1950 but all kinds of events and changes have occurred since then making it necessary to rewrite the entire book and make it 200 pages longer. People, places, events, sciences, arts, pastimes are all treated in sufficient space to satisfy the casual reader or lead the researcher to further sources.

Animal Life and Lore, by Osmond P. Breland (Harper & Row $6.95): A non-technical collection of facts and fables about the most interesting animals including mammals, birds, fish, arthropods, mollusks and others. Which are the biggest, smallest, fastest, most dangerous, most useful? The book is packed with fascinating information in easily digested short paragraphs and sections containing the answers to questions children ask which often enough stump their elders.

Folk Song Show Off in Denver

Lack of interest in advance ticket sales has forced cancellation of the scheduled Inter-University Hootenanny and folk song program Monday in Denver.

The bill was to include The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, Jean Ritchie, Oscar Brand, Judy Collins, and Josh White Jr.

MJW Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo., backers for the show, announced the cancellation. The same program had also been booked for Kansas City; Minneapolis; St. Louis; Oklahoma City and Dallas.

'Poco Loco' Says Mexican Of Liz, Dick

By ERSKINE JOHNSON

PUERTO VALLENTA, Mexico — (NEA) — Ava Gardner brought her fears, frustrations and the bikiniest of bikinis.

Deborah Kerr brought her icy poise, and Sue (Lolita) Lyon brought her ambitions and her boy friend.

John Huston, the director, came with his followers, his disciples, and his usual flair for on and offstage dramatics.

A blond young giant of a man came with the name of Rufus King Ward IV, the nickname of "Skip," and the gripe, "I've been in 100 television shows, but no one knows who I am."

Richard Burton came unshaven with a friend named Liz in white shorts and red bandana around her head who sips a tall cold drink and says:

"I really don't care if I ever appear in another movie."

With per-picture price of $1 million plus 10 per cent and her current "togetherness happiness" with Burton, the odds were with Liz in her willingness to stay off the screen. But no one took her seriously. About retiring, at least.

All this added up to a meeting of unpredictable, explosive, characters — or to a cast of looney Tennessee Williams "people" with strange problems.

Except for Liz, who came to watch (sometimes suspiciously), that's what they were — a cast of characters for the film version of Williams' play, "The Night of the Iguana."

"Spooked," the script said about them as fictional characters.

As real life characters, they had "spooky" problems of their own.

About everything, a young Mexican lad wearing only swimming shorts grins: "Poco Loco." That means "a little crazy" in his language.

He is at the wheel of the red and white speedboat — throttle at "full" — making the six-mile water taxi trip to Mismaloya on the remote west coast of Mexico, where the film is being made.

The way to Mismaloya from Vallarta is only by sea.

It is 100-degrees hot, and humid. And incredibly blue sea is glassy. The coast line, 500 yards to port, is wildly beautiful and trackless. White, sandy beaches fringe a green jungle of tropical growth studded with coconut palm and banana trees. Cream puff clouds encircle green mountain peaks.

Mismaloya is tucked into one corner of a 30-mile wide, horseshoe-shaped bay. It is a little cove guarded seaward by two emerald green sugarloaf islands. Not until the speedboat roars thru the narrow sea coridor between the islands does Mismaloya reveal itself as a tropical Shangri La.

On a green knoll, almost hidden by palm trees, is a palm-roofed resort hotel built for the film. Below the hotel, at the edge of the deep blue water, there are huge, jagged rocks.

The speedboat stops at an improvised dock with a ship's boarding ladder which has been built over two huge boulders. Nearby is a wide, sandy beach off which two flying-bridge sports cruisers ride at anchor.

A path up from the dock leads to an open-air cocktail bar covered by a tall, cone-shaped roof, also of palms.

COLORADO SPRINGS KENNEL CLUB NOTES

by Mary Urban

The first obedience exhibition of the group from the Colorado Springs Kennel Club was termed a huge success last Saturday when they performed for the combined 4-H clubs of Security and Widefield, at Security.

Approximately 40 children and their leaders watched as the Obedience group demonstrated different phases of novice and open obedience work.

The boys and girls were also treated to a style show presented by Mrs. Howard Rossiter and featuring internationally known models, her three Miniature Pinschers. These dainty little dogs love showing off their lovely clothes which are all hand made by Mrs. Rossiter.

Remember, this group of kennel club members are available for exhibition to any group in the Colorado Springs area free of charge on only a weeks notice.

BREED OF THE WEEK
The Rottweiler

The Rottweiler is not a familiar dog to the American public but is a delight to those who fancy this breed. He is a good-sized dog, strongly built and active. He is affectionate, intelligent, easily trained to work, naturally obedient and very faithful. While not quarrelsome, he had great courage and makes a wonderful guard.

Males range in height from 23 to 27 inches, females 21 to 25 inches. His coat is short, coarse and flat. He is black with clearly defined tan to mahogany markings on cheeks, muzzle, chest and legs, as well as over both eyes.

The Rottweiler helped to change the map and races of Europe. If it had not been for him the Roman armies would not have been able to cross the mighty Alps and go down into Central Europe.

Military exhibitions by the Roman armies were huge undertakings. They had to assemble vast amounts of food. The greatest problem centered around meat for the soldiers and it had to be carried on the hoof. The movement of large herds of cattle meant work for many dogs. This cattle dog was the ancestor of the Rottweiler and travelled much further afield than some of the other types of cattle dogs. Their name comes from the township of Rottweil, which lies on a hill on the left bank of the Neckar River in Wurttemburg in the south of Germany.

Wurttemburg was conquered by the Romans in the first century. This means that the breed now called the Rottweiler is some 1,900 years old in its present form.

The town of Rottweil is in the center of the livestock country, 78 miles south of Stuttgart. The butchers and cattle merchants who settled in Rottweil out of necessity adopted a dog capable of hard work. Not only did the butcher-master need a good worker he needed a trusted companion. Since holdups were common it was dangerous to set forth on a buying exhibition. It became the practice for the master to tie his purse around the dog's neck. Few bandits dared to molest the sturdy Rottweiler or his purse.

Aside from guard work the Rottweiler has been used to drive cattle, oxen, sheep and pigs and pull carts. The larger specimens were considered more suitable for draft work than for driving cattle.

Gradually the Rottweiler was replaced by donkeys for pulling carts and the railroads for transporting cattle. It was feared the breed would be lost when in 1905 the town of Rottweil had only one female representative of the breed.

The breed made a comeback in 1910 when it was chosen as a desirable type for police training. It joined the Airdale Terrier, the German Shepherd and the Doberman Pinscher which were then the only breeds known for police work.

Always faithful and affectionate the Rottweiler has developed more character thru police work.

TV's Ills Diagnosed

By DICK KLEINER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — When you think about Otto Preminger, you think about movies. But when Otto Preminger thinks about Otto Preminger, he also thinks about television.

Preminger is the brilliant and controversial producer - director of big, classy movies like "Exodus" and his forthcoming "The Cardinal." He can virtually have his pick of any movie he chooses to direct. He's an extra large wheel in the motion picture business. And yet . . .

"I feel," he says, "that television could be the most exciting medium of them all. There is only one problem with television—it is a commercial medium and in most cases the product is more important than the program.

"It is different from newspapers. You publish a newspaper to print the news, and you also sell ads. But television is produced to sell commercials, and they also have programs.

"And television sponsors won't insult anybody. I don't blame them, but there is no art form which can please everybody. If you try to do so, you are weak."

"East Side, West Side" is an artistic and dramatic success. It remains to be seen whether it will be a commercial success. It is a product of Talent Associates, which used to be strictly David Susskind's group, but now Susskind has a partner.

He is Daniel Melnick, a 33-year-old wonder boy who had been director of programming for ABC. (He's also Richard Rodgers' son - in - law, but that is not very important). Melnick wasn't in on the conception of "East Side, West Side" but he's in on all the other Talent Associates projects, and they are many.

TV is making movies ("All the Way Home" is the latest); it is producing a Braodway show this season ("All in Good Time"); it has 100 hours of television on the 63-'64 schedule, including East Side, West Side, the DuPont Show of the Week, various specials.

And, Melnick says, it is working with Garson Kanin on two new telvision series which are "almost set" for next fall—one, Mr. Broadway, is a sophisticated comedy about a press agent, and the other, Missie, is a situation comedy about a girl from the Midwest who comes to New York.

Chuck Connors, everybody says, is doing a major switch in playing a city feller, after all those years as The Rifleman. Connors plays the lawyer on ABC's new Arrest and Trial series.

But Connors thinks differently. This new role, he says, is not a switch—it was The Rifleman which was the switch.

"After all," he says, "I fit this part more naturally. I am a city boy, not a country boy. I didn't know anything about being a cowboy.

"Of course, the new role on Arrest and Trial is more demanding as an actor. Lucas McCain, The Rifleman, had the same basic problem every week—protecting his home and son against some outside force which was threatening it. But this is different. Every week, the problem and the relationships are new.

"And what actors I'm working with! I worked with Joseph Schildkraut. For the first time, I discovered what actors mean when they say they are emotionally exhausted. After working with Schildkraut, I was beat, but it wasn't physical exhaustion. It was a very wonderful feeling . . ."

'Yum Yum' International

If your libido has been vexed about the true meaning of the expression "yum yum" as it is used in the soon-due Jack Lemmon-Carol Lynley comedy "Under the Yum Yum Tree," then consider the headache the phrase gave the guy who had to translate the title for the international filmgoing audience.

In Germany, for example, "Under the Yum Yum Tree" is entitled, "Matrimonial Bed on Trial;" in France, "Yes or No Before Marriage;" in Scandanavia, "Lesson in Love;" and in much of Latin America, it is called "Half Marriage."

But the Italians are perfectly content with our title; in Italy the Columbia Pictures comedy is called "Sotto L'Albero Yum Yum". . which means "Under the Yum Yum Tree."

Folk Song Show Off in Denver

Lack of interest in advance ticket sales has forced cancellation of the scheduled Inter-University Hootenanny and folk song program Monday in Denver.

The bill was to include The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, Jean Ritchie, Oscar Brand, Judy Collins, and Josh White Jr.

MJW Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo., backers for the show, announced the cancellation. The same program had also been booked for Kansas City; Minneapolis; St. Louis; Oklahoma City and Dallas.

'Poco Loco' Says Mexican Of Liz, Dick

By ERSKINE JOHNSON

PUERTO VALLENTA, Mexico — (NEA) — Ava Gardner brought her fears, frustrations and the bikiniest of bikinis.

Deborah Kerr brought her icy poise, and Sue (Lolita) Lyon brought her ambitions and her boy friend.

John Huston, the director, came with his followers, his disciples, and his usual flair for on and offstage dramatics.

A blond young giant of a man came with the name of Rufus King Ward IV, the nickname of "Skip," and the gripe, "I've been in 100 television shows, but no one knows who I am."

Richard Burton came unshaven with a friend named Liz in white shorts and red bandana around her head who sips a tall cold drink and says:

"I really don't care if I ever appear in another movie."

With per-picture price of $1 million plus 10 per cent and her current "togetherness happiness" with Burton, the odds were with Liz in her willingness to stay off the screen. But no one took her seriously. About retiring, at least.

All this added up to a meeting of unpredictable, explosive, characters — or to a cast of looney Tennessee Williams "people" with strange problems.

Except for Liz, who came to watch (sometimes suspiciously), that's what they were — a cast of characters for the film version of Williams' play, "The Night of the Iguana."

"Spooked," the script said about them as fictional characters.

As real life characters, they had "spooky" problems of their own.

About everything, a young Mexican lad wearing only swimming shorts grins: "Poco Loco." That means "a little crazy" in his language.

He is at the wheel of the red and white speedboat — throttle at "full" — making the six-mile water taxi trip to Mismaloya on the remote west coast of Mexico, where the film is being made.

The way to Mismaloya from Vallarta is only by sea.

It is 100-degrees hot, and humid. And incredibly blue sea is glassy. The coast line, 500 yards to port, is wildly beautiful and trackless. White, sandy beaches fringe a green jungle of tropical growth studded with coconut palm and banana trees. Cream puff clouds encircle green mountain peaks.

Mismaloya is tucked into one corner of a 30-mile wide, horseshoe-shaped bay. It is a little cove guarded seaward by two emerald green sugarloaf islands. Not until the speedboat roars thru the narrow sea coridor between the islands does Mismaloya reveal itself as a tropical Shangri La.

On a green knoll, almost hidden by palm trees, is a palm-roofed resort hotel built for the film. Below the hotel, at the edge of the deep blue water, there are huge, jagged rocks.

The speedboat stops at an improvised dock with a ship's boarding ladder which has been built over two huge boulders. Nearby is a wide, sandy beach off which two flying-bridge sports cruisers ride at anchor.

A path up from the dock leads to an open-air cocktail bar covered by a tall, cone-shaped roof, also of palms.

Just three months ago there was nothing here.
